U. S. Prosecutor Moves to Retire In Mellon Clash

Appeals Board Declares U. S. Brief 'False,' 'Ill-Tempered.'

Steel Deal Letters Barred as Evidence

Court Recessed Twice to Save Peace; 30-Day Delay Asked.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, April 29.—Government Counsel Robert H. Jackson moved today to withdraw from prosecution of the Government's $3,089,000 income tax case against Andrew W. Mellon, after the Board of Tax Appeals rejected a brief he had filed in arguments over eligibility of certain letters he was seeking for the records.

The attorney asked a 30-day adjournment so he could report to his superiors in Washington regarding a possible successor, after asserting he "did not feel free to proceed with the case in view of statements from the bench" that his memorandum was "false, ill-tempered and not useful."

The board recessed twice during the day to let tempers cool after heated exchanges between counsel for the two sides and reserved ruling on the adjournment motion "until later." Attorneys continued with another phase of the case, leaving the matter of the letters also unsettled.

Called "Ill-Tempered."

In handing down his decision, Presiding Member Ernest H. Van Fossan said the board was satisfied the Government brief did not comply with its request of last Friday for legal opinion on similar issues and that it contained a "somewhat ill-tempered argument based on the false assumption that fraud is charged in the McClintic-Marshall phase of the case."

Van Fossan suggested that the entire arguments be stricken from the records and "hoped" counsel would concur. It was then that Jackson pleaded for adjournment and asserted he would "rather have the records remain as they are."

Jackson was trying to get into the records letters between Mellon's personal counsel, D. D. Shepard, and the Pittsburgh law firm which represented McClintic - Marshall Corporation in its $21,000,000 merger with Bethlehem Steel in 1931.

Mellon Knew of Deal.

As a 30 per cent stockholder in McClintic-Marshall, the Government charges Mellon owes income tax on his share of this transaction, which it claims was part of an unlawful plan to evade taxes. Jackson said in his argument that the Government may add the charge of fraud to this deal, because it learned only last week that Mellon personally had been acquainted with the reorganization plans.

The first flare-up occurred soon after opening of the eleventh and final week of sessions in Pittsburgh. The Government filed its brief asserting that if the board found Mellon was liable for tax in the Bethlehem transaction, "every act of assistance and advice" given by the attorneys "resulted in aiding and abetting in an attempt to perpetrate fraud."

Continuing, it said the Government did not believe the board would "permit this petitioner to successfully maintain a position so

New Operation Found to Ease Heart Disease

Washington Doctors Tell Rally of 'Hobbling' Thyroid Gland.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, April 29.—A new operation for heart disease was reported to the American College of Physicians, meeting here today.

The operation, which hobbles the thyroid gland, is one of a series of similar, rapid steps made in the last two years toward relieving the suffering of heart victims.

The operation was described by Dr. James Alexander Lyon and Dr. Edmund Horgan, of Washington. They reduce the activity of the thyroid, one of the body's chief energy-producing machines, by cutting down both its blood and its nerve supply.

Cases Cited.

The arteries running to the gland are tied off, and with them the gland's connection with the sympathetic nervous system, the nerves which keep up the automatic action of internal organs. The gland is hobbled, that is, does not stop functioning entirely.

The energizing product it pours into the blood stream, thyroxin, is much diminished. The result is an easing off on the work done by the heart.

The operation has relieved pain in five cases of angina pectoris. It has relieved three cases of congestive heart failure, a condition when the blood is sluggish.

"One year and four months ago," the report stated, "the operation was performed on a patient with frequent severe attacks of angina pectoris. Since then he has been free from attacks and is now leading a fairly normal life."

No Damaging Effects.

The operation has since been performed on five additional cases of angina, one of whom died after operation. The other four have been free from the painful attacks for periods of 7 to 16 months.

This operation follows on the heels of one scarcely a year older, by which angina pectoris and other painful heart troubles were relieved by entire removal of the thyroid gland. After that operation, the patient has to take artificial extracts

The Solution

To the Radio Thriller, 'What Would You Do?'

The solution of the ninth thrilling "What Would You Do?" real life drama broadcast Monday at 5:30 p. m. from WJEJ, Hagerstown, Md., follows:

If Dan hesitated for one split second, his brother's nervous fingers would pull the trigger that would tear his honest Irish heart out. But could he shoot his own brother?

One shot rang out! A body fell to earth! "Oh, Terry, lad, I had to shoot your gun out of your hand or you would have killed me," Dan cried remorsefully.

"Let me bandage his hand," Margaret Mary said. "It's only a little wound. Quick—we must get him home."

"Dan, take me home—the cops'll be here any minute," Terry pleaded. "I'll never do wrong again. Take me home, Dan—to Mom."

"I'll take you home, Terry, lad, gladly——"

"Thank you, Dan, thank you—quick, down these stairs—it's a clean getaway."

"I'll take you home until your hand is healed. But then"—Dan's eyes filled—"then I'll have to take you back to the reformatory. You'd better learn now than later—that crime can never pay you anything!"

Britain Says U-Boat Move Menaces Her

Action to Check Reich Urged; France, Italy Plan Air Alliance.

German 'Scare' Welding Poland and Lithuania; Japan Fears Soviet.

The Situation Abroad.

Members of Parliament, angered by the Reich's submarine program, demanded English action to curb German armament expansion.

In Paris, plans were laid for an air alliance with Italy. It also was revealed 12 planes will patrol the border to prevent Germans from flying over fortifications.

From Warsaw it was reported fear of Germany is driving Poland and Lithuania together.

Japan issued statements designed to warn the people that war with Russia still is a possibility.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

London, April 29.—British members of Parliament, voicing the anger of the English people at Germany's submarine program, charged today the U-boat building is aimed directly at this country. They demanded the cabinet take quick steps in cooperation with other powers to check further expansion of the Reich's armaments.

This expansion was further evidenced by the appearance of navy youths on the streets of Kiel, Germany, with arm bands inscribed "Submarine School, Kiel," showing that at least theoretical education in the use of submarines has been resumed.

A group headed by Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald informally discussed the "legality" of the latest gesture of Reichsfuehrer Hitler in defiance of the Versailles Treaty and arranged for consultations with France and Italy.

There were indications that a protest, probably in the form of a note, was under consideration, and also possible joint action of the powers at Geneva.

Series of Reports.

The British were becoming thoroughly incensed as revelation followed upon revelation concerning the growing strength of a Germany rearmed. Disclosures that Germany actually is building submarines on the heels of national conscription was followed today by a report in the Daily Herald that the Reich has built a great new naval and seaplane base on the Island of Sylt in the North Sea.

Sylt, it was stated, has been transferred into a second Heligoland, equipped with concrete and bomb-proof shelters for long-distance aircraft guns. It was said the closest secrecy was observed about the fortifications, with only reliable Nazi workers employed in construction.

Submarine construction was the most disturbing factor, however, with the disclosure by British naval experts that the 250-ton submarines Germany is said to be building are actually potent instruments of war and that similar craft were employed in the blockading of Britain during the war.

U-Boats "Hit Home."

At first the British thought the French were too excited over the German air force expansion announced last month, according to competent commentators. The British took a far-off view of German land armament increases, but it took submarine construction to bring home the full seriousness of Hitler's general program. The World War's submarine horrors still are fresh in the minds of the people here.

The feeling was plainly shown in the discussion in the House of Commons after Sir John Simon, the foreign secretary, had told members: "The German government has intimated that orders have been given for the construction of 12 submarines of 250 tons each. This matter is now under consideration." He did not amplify the statement.

Samuel V. T. Adams, a government supporter, sought to learn

Trial for Life Near, 'Old Tom' Reads His Bible 'Kiver to Kiver'

By C. B. Carr.
A Staff Correspondent.

Leesburg, Va., April 29.—Thomas ("Old Tom") Quesenberry, one-eyed mountaineer, who soon will be tried for killing an Alexandria policeman and wounding a Federal agent in a round-up of moonshiners in March, was revealed today as a philosopher and a student of the Bible.

"I have read the Bible from kiver to kiver," the alleged murderer drawled, "and if the light in my cell was good enough I would be reading it every day. Anyway, I have made my peace with God."

While Quesenberry, a dead shot even though he has but one eye, was talking, a Loudoun County grand jury was reindicting him for the killing of one man and the wounding of another, after Judge J. R. H. Alexander had quashed the original indictment on the ground that the grand jury commissioners had not qualified.

Quesenberry, who was ready to go on trial today, now will not be haled into court for about two weeks.

The 59-year-old mountaineer, in discussing his life, said:

"I came from Carroll County, Va., and I have made my own living since I was 10 years old. Man makes his life just what it is, and I have found that we can learn most by watching wild life."

His one eye, sunk deep in its socket, grew bright as he told of fishing for trout from Mexico to Canada. He told with pride about his deadly aim with a rifle and re-

The Fleet Sails From San Pedro

Navy Launches Test of Power In the Pacific

Largest U. S. Peacetime Force Starts War Maneuvers.

By the Associated Press.

Aboard the U. S. S. Pennsylvania off California coast, April 29.—Far from the sea lanes in the Pacific off California the United States fleet entered its big training event of the year today—the annual fleet problem.

The most majestic unit in this array of the largest force ever sent to sea in American naval maneuvers is the battle fleet.

It is a fortified group of tremendous powers of destruction, the 12 dreadnaughts forming the battle line of Admiral Harris Laning's command.

Call to Battle Station.—

This heaviest striking power of the Navy, manned by more than 20,000 men, went through various convolutions in the first day of the maneuvers.

They had moved out of San Pedro anchorage in single column, and then swung north. At times the dreadnaughts were in triple column formation, and at times in other strategic disposals of defense.

Suddenly gunnery quarters sounds aboard the dreadnaught. Each is a little city in itself with more than a thousand men aboard. All officers and men change their tasks. It is the call to battle station.

Only four major functions carry on under this order. They are first, engineering and navigation and ship maintenance; second, communication on board and throughout the fleet; third, service of ammunition supply, and fourth, gunnery.

Defense Against Bombers.

From the turrets the great rifles, 16-inch on some of the dreadnaughts, 14-inch guns on others, are worked in the way by which they hurl 1-ton projectiles some 20 miles. They can hurtle these shells with amazing accuracy. One such high explosive shell could destroy a steel building 20 miles from the ship.

Up on the superstructure the crews are at the powerful 5-inch anti-aircraft guns. Some of these are manned by the marines. They can hurl 13-pound explosive projectiles nearly 5 miles into the skies.

The dreadnaughts move in zig-

Labor Bill Out, A. F. L. Cheers, Talks Strikes

Write Congress to Pass Wagner Plan, Green Urges Delegates.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Blunt threats of early strikes unless Congress heeds the legislative demands of the American Federation of Labor marked a meeting here yesterday of 200 leaders of organized workers.

Applause reverberated through the meeting room in the Washington Hotel when Chairman Walsh, of the Senate Labor Committee, announced a vote by which his group decided to favorably report the Wagner labor disputes bill.

A few minutes later the labor delegates adopted resolutions urging enactment of the Wagner measure and other bills on the federation's program and protesting against creation of "class distinctions" favoring employers.

The meeting adjourned with the following admonition from William Green, federation president:

"Go to see your Congressmen and Senators tomorrow and line them up for these progressive bills.

Urges Letter Writing.

"Then return home and write letters to Washington demanding their enactment. Get your friends among merchants, professional people and preachers to do likewise.

"Remember that Congressmen are more responsive to a letter from back home than to all the noise we can make here in Washington."

Hoping they have accomplished their purpose of offsetting, in part at least, the effect of the National Chamber of Commerce convention now under way, the delegates will depart tonight.

In addition to the Wagner bill the meeting specifically indorsed the Black-Connery 30-hour week measure, proposed extension of NRA, the Administration's social security program and the Guffey coal stabilization bill.

Strong Language Demanded.

The resolutions were adopted unanimously after Oliver Myers, a Toledo, Ohio, delegate, protested that they were couched in timid language.

"The only language big business understands is force," the stocky Ohioan cried. I don't see why we

Lieut. Little Branded 'Perjurer' By Beard's Defense Counsel

Police Official Swore to False Evidence in Obtaining Warrants, Sirica Says at 'Big Shot's' Trial on Race Gambling Charge.

Portly and perspiring, Sam R. Beard, long a figure in Washington's sporting world, yesterday listened intently as his attorney hurled a charge of perjury at Lieut. George Little at the beginning of Beard's trial on gambling laws.

Defense Attorney John J. Sirica made the charge in his opening argument to the jury. He shouted that Lieut. Little had perjured himself when he obtained from United States Commissioner N. C. Turnage a search warrant for the offices of the National Amusement Co. in the Mather Building. He said Little had sworn he had personal knowledge of what was going on in the suite of rooms controlled by the company, whereas he charged, the lieutenant had never been inside the doors.

Surrounded by his twelve co-defendants, Beard took a keen interest in the trial. He frequently conferred with his attorney before a jury of eight men and four women was impaneled. The jurors did not know then that Justice Joseph W. Cox had indicated he would have them locked up for the duration of the trial, which may run through the week.

Roger Robb and John W. Fihelly, assistant United States attorneys, gave the first public announcement of the evidence on which the Government hopes to smash the Beard group which, it is charged, was engaged in disseminating race track information to scores of places in the District.

The prosecution revealed wire tapping for three days before the raid on the elaborately equipped amusement company plant. An employe of the Internal Revenue Bureau took an adjacent office, the prosecution said, tapped the 40 trunk lines running into Beard's place, and listened while thousands of dollars in wagers were telephoned in.

In each instance, the Government claimed, the bettors failed to give their right names, simply identifying themselves by a code number. Slips said to be identical with bets overheard by the tappers were found in the Mather Building suite when the raid was made.

Waxing indignant over the harassment of his client, Sirica said Beard operated a legitimate enterprise. He said Beard never accepted bets;

U.S. Chamber Spurs Battle On Bank Bill

Roosevelt Supporting Entire Plan Now, 'Hill' Believes.

Davis Defends Prices, Marshall Hits Hours at Session Here.

By Felix Bruner.

Divided sentiment on the New Deal "must" legislative program is expected to be expressed by members of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States which opened its twenty-third annual meeting yesterday.

Already on record against holding company legislation, the Chamber followed with strong opposition to proposed banking amendments. On the other hand, the convention, before its adjournment Thursday, is expected to approve extension of the NRA.

A special committee report to the Chamber of Commerce roundly scored the bank bill as threatening "political domination" of the country's banking.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt put his seal of approval on the bill.

Mr. Roosevelt conferred at the White House with Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau, Gov. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board and Chairman Crowley of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, who expect to testify for the bill before the Senate Banking subcommittee. Mr. Morgenthau said, after the session, that the President's attitude was unchanged.

This was taken to mean that the White House is behind the entire measure, despite a contrary impression which Senator Glass, chairman of the sub-committee, had previously gained in talks with Mr. Roosevelt. Congress generally construed the President's radio speech of Sunday night as an indorsement of the entire bill, Title II, of which is being hotly fought by powerful banking interests.

Predicts "Bank Holiday."

Title II vests in the Reserve Board complete control over open market operations, discount rates, reserve and eligibility requirements. The American Bankers Association seeks to amend the title so that governors of the regional Reserve banks will have some voice in exercise of these important powers.

Others, including the Chamber of Commerce, are fighting the entire title. As debate began in the House yesterday, Republicans concentrated their fire on this title. Representative Cavicchia, New Jersey Republican, after citing that 60 per cent of the surplus and capital of the Reserve banks already is invested in Government bonds, and warning that the bill would permit the Reserve Board to compel the banks to absorb an unlimited further amount of Government bonds, declared:

"I am afraid that this bill will be laying the foundation for another banking holiday that will be worse than that of 1933."

Dangerous, Says Hollister.

Representative Hollister (Republican), Ohio, assailed the measure as a "most dangerous instrument." He said no civilized nation has a central bank under Government control save Russia and Italy.

He told the House that the President's speech could only be taken as an indorsement of Title II.

"There must be a stop," he added, "to the continual yielding to demands for more power conferred upon the Executive."

Despite the violence of the attacks, the bill is slated to pass the House when voting is scheduled to begin on Thursday. Likewise, the Senate appears favorable, though the Glass sub-committee means to call a long list of witnesses, most of whom are known to be hostile to the measure.

The Chamber of Commerce's annual meeting is expected to adopt the adverse report of its special committee which was headed by William L. Sweet, Providence, R. I., manufacturer. This report said of the bill:

The main general grounds upon which the committee bases its opposition to the Federal Reserve act are as follows:

"There would be greatly increased danger of political domination of

Rosso Is Saved From Assassin; Boston Suspect Believed Mad

By the United Press.

Boston, April 29.—Vigilance and cat-like intervention of Boston detectives may have saved Signor Augusto Rosso, Italian Ambassador to the United States, from assassination today.

Eugenio Camaiani, 42, jobless and believed demented, was seized and disarmed of a dirk-knife with a 3¼-inch blade when seen standing nervously, with hands in pockets, staring at the ambassador during his visit at the State house.

Signor Rosso, here to open an Italian book exhibit at Boston City Club, had visited Gov. James M. Curley in his office and they were walking down a stairway leading to the historic hall of flags when the incident occurred.

Detective Charles Perelli, preceding the party, saw Camaiani, apart from other spectators at the foot of the staircase. Immediately suspicious, he pounced on the suspect. Detectives Benjamin Goodman and William Goldston rushed up to assist him but Camaiani offered no resistance. He was said to have been gripping the sheathed dirk—operated by a spring—in one of his pockets.

Ambassador Rosso, unaffected, continued his inspection of the State house and later went to the City Club on schedule. Camaiani, charged with illegal possession of a dangerous weapon, was to be committed to Boston Psychopathic Hospital for observation.

He complained of his difficulty in earning a living; said he was bringing a $1,000,000 suit against someone; and had a notebook in which was a notation:

"I am writing of romance. I have had a lot of trouble and have been robbed. The thief had seven faces."

Roosevelt's Plea Likely to Force Summer Session

Opens Meetings Here

Underwood & Underwood.
HENRY I. HARRIMAN.

Comment on Radio Talk of President Mostly Critical.

Senate Is Facing A New Deadlock

Dropping of Some of Controversial Bills Is Demanded.

By Robert C. Albright.

Uneasily shouldering the heavy program outlined by the President, a Congress lacking enthusiasm for the task and noticeably non-committal on Mr. Roosevelt's fireside appeal resigned itself yesterday to a late summer session.

Senate leaders vainly attempted to put on speed, in a spirit of compliance, but were stopped short by a new anti-lynching bill deadlock. The House moved more confidently ahead on banking legislation still highly fraught with controversy.

The fanfare of applause usually following a Roosevelt broadcast was lacking on Capitol Hill. Democrats were silent, or praised, but faintly. Republicans were sharply critical. Skepticism on the legislative outlook was general.

Utility Stand Criticized.

At the White House, some 500 to 600 "fan" letters were received on Sunday's radio chat. Falling below the usually high congratulatory average, the ratio of favorable responses dropped to about 2-to-1. A large percentage of the mailed-in criticism was directed at the President's stand for utility holding company legislation.

Not-to-be-quoted comments from a number of Senate Democrats were sharply critical. Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary remarked that "it would have been a much better speech had he given assurance of an early adjournment of Congress."

Favorable Democratic comments struck a note of faint praise. Speaker Byrns thought the speech was "timely." House Majority Leader Taylor thought it would bolster the American "morale."

The Senate, after a sluggish day of Southern filibustering against the Wagner-Costigan anti-lynching bill, added to legislative pessimism by a 38-to-37 vote against laying aside the deadlocked measure for consideration of the bonus. It was the third time the leadership had been turned back in an attempt to shelve the bill.

Cites Need for Speed.

Senate Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson, after a careful count of noses, believed he had the votes by a safe margin of four. But the winning fringe of ballots failed to put in an appearance, despite desperate efforts of aids to turn them out.

"It will be necessary for the Senate to speed up its work if the program made clear in the President's radio speech is carried out during the present session," Senator Robinson told reporters.

Five bills insisted on by the President in his Sunday broadcast—NRA extension, social security, banking legislation, transportation regulation and elimination of unnecessary utility holding companies—were still lodged in Senate committees, with the single exception of a bus control bill passed by the Senate.

All were discussed at a meeting yesterday of the Senate's Democratic Steering Committee, but no attempt was made to fix the order in which they will be considered.

Others Less Hopeful.

"The extension of the NRA, the utility holding company bill, the various measures relating to transportation and the social security bill pertain to subjects that are controversial," commented Robinson, "and I do not see how a conclusion of this session can be reached before a date late in July, unless better co-operation for dealing with the measures can be arranged."

Other Senate leaders were even less hopeful. Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, Democratic whip, said Congress will be in session until September 15, if it at-

White House Calls Parley To Save NRA

Harrison, Clark and Borah in Group to Seek Compromise.

Moving to salvage his NRA extension bill from a welter of Senate controversy, President Roosevelt last night invited a bi-partisan group of Senators, prominently identified with the NRA fight, to confer with him today at the White House.

Chairman Pat Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee, Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), Missouri, and Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, are among those summoned to the conference, it was authoritatively learned.

Compromise Move Grows.

Proposal of Senator Clark to extend NRA temporarily until the Supreme Court has an opportunity to rule on legality, is said to have precipitated the conference. An NRA opposition bloc in the Senate yesterday agreed to an eight-month extension, provided price fixing and intrastate regulation are eliminated.

An effort to work out a basis for common ground with the Administration's own extension plans will be made at the White House conference, it was said.

The compromise movement gathered force as Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, offered a bill to abolish NRA altogether but transfer some of its functions to the Federal Trade Commission. Authority would be given the commission to prescribe minimum wages and maximum hours. Trade practice conferences would be the sole medium for extending fair trade agreements. Anti-trust laws would be fully restored.

NLRB Ruling Ignored.

A meeting of the Senate Finance Committee had been called for this morning, with both Clark and King to press their proposals. Senator Harrison, while making no commitments on the Clark plan, has insisted the Administration would only consider it if it contained no embellishments beyond a flat NRA extension.

Harrison himself has offered important modifications in the orig-

3d-Party Move Is Discounted By Democrats

Nye to Vote for Roosevelt in Preference to G.O.P. Old Guard.

By the Associated Press.

Talk about a third party movement was not regarded seriously by Democrats here, despite action to that end by the Farmers Holiday Association at Des Moines. They pointed to the reluctance of the Long, Father Coughlin and other groups to join hands.

Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, said yesterday he would prefer to vote for President Roosevelt in 1936 if the Republicans nominate "a Hoover, a Mills, a Fletcher, or anyone of that type."

"I like Vandenberg (the junior Senator from Michigan), in fact I think I'd vote for him over Roosevelt."

He was asked whether he intended working for the nomination of Vandenberg.

"It all depends on the line-up of the opposition," was the reply. "If I see a Hoover, a Mills or a Fletcher behind some other man, I imagine I'd work for Vandenberg.

"But if a Hoover, a Mills or a Fletcher is working for Vandenberg, then I'd begin to wonder," he added with a smile.

Discounts Third Party.

"How about a third party movement?" was another question.

"I imagine that most of the liberals do not want a third party," he said. "It's too much of an uphill fight to make a victory probable. You know in many States it is even hard to get a third party slate on the ballot.

"It would seem better to concentrate on getting a good nominee in one of the two present major parties. You can say that I am for Roosevelt if the Republican nominee is one of the Old Guard or the instrument of the Old Guard."

Just returned from a two weeks' sojourn in his home State, Senator George (Democrat), Georgia, predicted "President Roosevelt will be overwhelmingly indorsed for a second term by the people of Georgia."

"I doubt," he added, "that any other name will be presented in the State's preferential primary."

Who's Most Unpopular?

Calling President Roosevelt "more unpopular now than Hoover ever was," Senator Long (Democrat), Louisiana, said "there won't be a third party movement—it will be a first party movement."

Asked his opinion on the force of the move of the National Farmers Holiday Association for a third party, Long said "there are enough forces in the country now to make both these old parties look sick."

He said it was possible there would not be a third party, and insisted Milo Reno, leader of the farmers holiday association, was not advocating a third party movement.

"They can't go nominating Roosevelt or Hoover," he wound up.

"They couldn't elect them. Roosevelt is more unpopular now than Hoover ever was. He is the most unpopular man in the United States."

G.O.P. in New England Opens Conference Today

By the Associated Press.

Boston, April 29.—A concerted attack on the New Deal and a bitter indictment of the AAA's cotton policies was promised tonight as Republican leaders of six States gathered here on the eve of a New England regional conference.

A militant declaration by U. S. Representative Joseph W. Martin, who headed the group seeking President Roosevelt's intervention in New England's textile crisis, sounded a keynote for the meeting.

"The last two months plainly indicate that the welfare of the textile industry lies with the Republican Party," Martin asserted on his arrival from Washington to attend the conference regarded nationally as the forerunner to similar gatherings coincident to launching the 1936 Republican campaign.

Martin, Representative Theodore Christianson, three-time Governor of Minnesota, and Col. Theodore Roosevelt, former Governor General of the Philippines, were expected to deal with the textile situation and to criticize the New Deal at the sessions.

Between You and Me

'The Butcher, the Baker' as Rivals; New Deal Critic in CCC; Fireless Fireside Chat.

By Raymond Clapper

SOME red faces were observed at the opening of the United States Chamber of Commerce convention yesterday. That probably was because delegates of this great business men's organization opened their morning newspapers expectantly and discovered that the headlines had gone to the other leading business organization, the National Association of Manufacturers. It just didn't seem like cricket for the manufacturers to horn in like that on the Chamber's show.

Both organizations would deny they are rivals because their memberships overlap. Nevertheless, there is rivalry between the publicity staffs of the two groups. A few nights ago the National Association of Manufacturers publicity representative thought it would be a good idea to put something out while the Chamber was meeting just to show that his organization, which is much older, though considerably smaller, was on the map. He dug around the office and found a survey made by a group of heavy industries indicating a potential pent-up demand for $20,000,000,000 in factory rehabilitation and expansion, added to it some views regarding the legislative situation and issued it as a press release for Monday morning newspapers. He may get a raise and the Chamber's publicity staff, down one, will be on its toes to make a recovery. That's the way the wheels go around in Washington.

Many people confuse the two organizations. The National Association of Manufacturers, founded in 1892, and headed since 1908 by James A. Emery, represents only manufacturers. It is smaller, more compact, lobbies for only one group in the business world. It suffers little from internal conflicts of interests and, therefore, can hit more directly and harder.

The chamber, organized 23 years ago with the blessing of William Howard Taft, then President, has a much broader membership, including not only manufacturers, but wholesalers, retailers, importers, exporters, high tariff men and low tariff men, bankers, borrowers, butchers and candlestick makers. It grew rapidly, erected a great headquarters building facing the White House, and in general has been accepted as the major voice of organized business. Among the pressure groups, its president rates right up along with the head of the American Federation of Labor. But the conflict of interest, arising from the fact that it includes all types of business in its membership, often prevents the chamber from taking a clear-cut position for or against specific measures. Sometimes its resolutions are as ambigous as the planks in a political platform.

On the other hand the very fact that its membership has diverse interests gives the chamber's voice greater weight when it speaks. Furthermore, during the Roosevelt Administration, the chamber, under the leadership of the retiring president, Henry I. Harriman, has resisted the easier course of registering bull-necked hostility to everything proposed and has attempted to discriminate, co-operating on some measures yet firmly opposing others which were deemed injurious. Harriman even assisted in the formulation of NRA and AAA and did much to champion them among business men in the early stages.

The Civilian Conservation Corps has purchased for its camp libraries 3,000 copies of a book written by one of the severest critics of the New Deal. It happens, however, that this book was written some years ago and describes the seamy side of politics in pre-New Deal days. He also has written a later one which takes the New Deal apart, but that one apparently is not regarded as so well suited for the impressionable young minds of CCC workers.

Mr. Roosevelt's latest fireside talk was regarded by many who heard it as weaker than his previous ones. Generally, the impression was that it lacked fire and fresh material.

Discussion of the works program was a rehash of what had appeared in the newspapers during the week. Some glaring silences also were heard. There was no attempt to inform the public regarding the bewildering silver situation, the tax outlook, the bonus, labor legislation or the difficulties over cotton. The great value of these talks in the past has been their help in orienting the public concerning fundamentals of Administration policy. This address, however, left some with the feling that he had not opened his heart as on former occasions. It just didn't have the spark.

Just to show what a job the works allotment board has ahead of it, if it meets, as is expected, once a week for the next 40 weeks, it will have to approve an average of $100,000,000 in projects at each meeting. They'll have to work fast to get through in time for dinner.

Senator Bailey, of North Carolina, probably is the most disdainful and cold-blooded critic of Huey Long who ever stands up against the Kingfish on the Senate floor.

When he is asked about Long, he smiles and brings from his coat pocket several small white objects which look like short pieces of macaroni. They are, he explains, bird bones, bones from the left leg of a loon.

"Down in Louisiana," he says, "fishermen use them as spoons when angling for kingfish."

Textile Heads Of Maine Urge New Mill Deal

Process Tax, Japan Imports and Wage Variances Up at Secret Parley.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Behind closed doors, political and industrial leaders of Maine yesterday presented arguments for an overhauling of the New Deal cotton program before the President's Cabinet committee named to survey the whole cotton textile situation.

Led by Gov. Louis J. Brann, Maine's first Democratic executive in 16 years, the delegation in general urged abandonment of the 4.2-cents-per-pound cotton processing tax, shutting out of Japanese cotton cloth imports, and equalization of textile wages in the North and South.

It was the first of a series of informal conferences called by the Cabinet group, aimed at getting to the bottom of the problems that have periodically plagued the textile industry. A group from Rhode Island, headed by Gov. Theodore F. Green, will be heard this morning.

As Maine goes, so are the other State delegations which will testify this week expected to go, with the exception that the Southern branch of the industry is opposed to equalizing the wage differential between New England and Dixie. On the other two questions—the processing tax and Japanese imports—the North and the South appear united.

Davis Cites 'Bunk.'

Other developments included:

A declaration by AAA Administrator Chester C. Davis, addressing a meeting of American Trade Association executives, that the processing tax has been subjected to "more bunk" than any other feature of the farm program.

Rejection by the House Ways and Means Committee of a proposal that a sub-committee study the question of imports, particularly cotton textiles. Democrats defeated this move, arguing that the present Cabinet inquiry is sufficient.

The opening session of the Cabinet committee was held privately in the Department of Commerce Building. An official account of proceedings was issued late in the day by the press office of the Department of Commerce.

Gov. Brann submitted a brief on behalf of the Maine delegation, which he subsequently made public, declaring that "every cotton textile mill in Maine is now operating at a loss." He added that during March more textiles were imported from Japan than during all of 1934.

"In the interest of maintaining a harmonious trade relationship between the United States and Japan, this question should be settled before it becomes irritating," he declared. "We demand that Japanese imports be restricted by quota."

New Wage Basis Sought.

Denying the charge that Maine mills are suffering because of obsolescence, an observation made by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, Gov. Brann proposed that a new basis of wage differentials be worked out between the North and South, that a financial substitute be found for the processing tax and that steps be taken to prevent overproduction.

These views were supported by both the Maine Senators, Frederick Hale and Wallace White, Representatives Simon M. Hamlin and Ralph O. Brewster, and a number of mayors and industrial leaders.

The only defense of the processing tax came from Representative Edward C. Moran, jr., it was said. The latter said he did not believe elimination of the tax would solve the textile problem, since by contributing to the purchasing power of farm sections it enables those sections to buy the products of industrial New England.

This is one of the main contentions of the Department of Agriculture, which clings to the tax as the most feasible means of financing the farm program. AAA officials are hopeful of further support for the processing tax from cotton growers and farm representatives.

All four members of the Cabinet Committee sat in at the first meeting. The committee is headed by Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper and includes Secretaries Cordell Hull, Frances Perkins and Henry Wallace. After today's session the committee will postpone proceedings until Thursday when a delegation from South and North Carolina will be heard.

Battaglia Wins Corcoran Prize In Art Exhibit

Youthful Artists' 'The Park' Selected by Judges for $50 Award.

Aurelius Battaglia, youthful Washington artist whose caricatures hang in some of Washington's finest homes, and whose panels decorate a Washington night club, was yesterday named winner of the Corcoran Gallery's $50 prize for the best oil in the Independent Artists' Exhibition not previously awarded a prize.

He will be awarded the prize Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the exhibition room on the first floor of The Washington Post Building. At the same time the Corcoran Gallery water color prize, the winner of which will be chosen today, will be awarded. Both pictures will be displayed in prominent positions in the room. All the artists whose works will be shown at The Post will attend.

The committee which chose Mr. Battaglia's painting, entitled "The Park," included the following, who had won prizes at the beginning of the exhibition: Berenice Cross, Eben F. Comins, Reeves Euler and Karl Blockner.

Works Win Acclaim.

Young Battaglia is recognized as one of Washington's most promising younger artists. He is only 25, and already his caricatures and paintings have attracted much attention. His "Animal Circus," in the children's reading room of the Mount Pleasant branch of the Washington Public Library, is a Public Work of Arts project which has won him considerable acclaim.

Among those who have bought his drawings, mostly caricatures of politicians, are Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss and Olin Downs. At the "Kaleidoscope," Connecticut avenue night club, his "Nudist Colony" panel is the feature of one room, and critics have called its caricatures of such personages as Mae West brilliantly done. In another room an animal panel is notable for its coloring.

Panel on Display.

In the exhibition he is represented by a panel, "Feline Motif," on display at Jelleff's, where also is shown another panel, "Bacchanale," and a caricature in black and white of Hans Kindler at Lansburgh's, two of the co-operating department stores.

"The Park," his prize-winning oil, shows two dejected and workless men sitting on a bench, sadly contemplating a loafing dog.

Lecturers for this week were announced as follows: Eugene Weisz, Wednesday, 2:30 p. m., at W. & J. Sloane's; Adele Smith, Friday, 2:30 p. m., at Woodward & Lothrop's.

The woman's club with the most exhibitors was yesterday revealed as the League of American Pen Women, which is represented by these members: Eva Colbourn, Grace R. Sahm, Minnie L. Briggs, Elsie T. Clark, Florence Estabrook, Clara Hill, Eugenia Sangstad, Grace M. Ruckman and Margaret S. Zimmele.

Hoover Calls Home Life Test Of Any System

Former President Holds Family Basis of All Human Institutions.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, April 29.—The "inspiring flame" of sustaining a home and treasuring family life, former President Herbert Hoover declared today, is the "foundation of any enduring social and governmental system."

"And by our ideals of the ultimate standards of family life should we challenge every function and every proposal of society and of government," Mr. Hoover said in an address on the "Better Homes in America" movement.

The former President recalled in a national radio broadcast the beginning of the movement 15 years ago, paid tribute to the workers who have carried it on, and outlined its purpose.

"That purpose is to keep bright that inspiring flame in national life—to sustain a home and treasure family life," he said.

"Herein is the basis of all endurable human institutions. It is the foundation of any enduring social and governmental system.

"By these ideals must we test whether such proposals sustain to American homes our national heritage of self-government and liberty, whether they extend their protection from invasion without our borders and from enemies within. • • •

"Whether they widen the opportunities for the future of our children, and finally, and above all, whether they extend these high privileges not to a few, but to all Americans.

"It is through these ideals that we make a greater and better America."

Decrease of Jobless Women Revealed in First Lady's Mail

Two Sons to Work During Summer, She Tells Press Conference.

Assurance that women's interests will not be neglected in plans for the use of $4,880,000 work relief funds was given yesterday by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt at her weekly press conference. Mrs. Roosevelt has previously opened the White House to several conferences on unemployment relief and yesterday she discussed this question. Her mail, she said, showed a decrease in the number of women seeking jobs.

Women seeking so-called white collar jobs have increased in number, however, as have those who ask for special consideration of their individual problems.

"The mail does not fit into exact categories any more," she said.

"We have many more individual cases to consider—requests for assistance to help the writers to do some specific things when they feel they'll help them out of their situation—a jump over what they consider the last hurdle."

The younger two Roosevelt boys, Franklin, jr., and John, both now at Harvard, will work this summer, Mrs. Roosevelt said. But just what they will do, or where they will find their jobs, she would not say.

Plans for her own and the President's vacation have not been made, she said. But on May 25 she will go to Annapolis to see her son Franklin row for the Harvard crew and later she hopes to go to Maine and to the Roosevelt summer home at Campobello, N. S.

Grandchildren Sistie and Buzzie Dall will spend the summer at the Hyde Park estate of the President, she said.

It's Still Last Tuesday In Iowa Legislature

By the Associated Press.

Des Moines, Iowa, April 29.—It may be Monday, April 29, to the rest of the world, but to the Iowa Legislature it is yet Tuesday, April 23, officially.

The Legislature, which voted to adjourn last Tuesday, still is in session with its clocks stopped. No one would predict today just when it might conclude its sitting.

In 1931 the forty-fourth assembly ran 7 days, 11 hours and 51 minutes over the allotted 100 days by officially saying that time had halted.

If this session continues through Wednesday that record will be surpassed. And legislators today shook their heads and couldn't see anything but a new record.

Soviet Tries Out A Balloon 'Train'

Alarm-Clock 'Chute, New Glider Introduced.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, April 29.—A balloon "train," a novel alarmclock parachute and a rubber glider figured in today's news of Soviet experimental aviation.

Peasants in the countryside between Moscow and Podolsk gaped with wonder at three big yellow gasbags with white gondolas linked together with cables moving slowly along a 45-kilometer course in the first flight ever made by a balloon "train."

A parachute expert named Zivaeff jumped at Leningrad with a small compact 'chute strapped to his back, set to open automatically 5½ seconds after he leaped from the plane.

The device opened punctually and the experimenter descended safely. The 'chute can be set to open at any time between five and 25 seconds after leaping with it. It is to be produced in quantities.

A successful trial was made, also at Leningrad, with an inflatable glider constructed of rubber and rubberized materials. Extremely light, it can be packed in a small trunk and can be manufactured for a third the cost of an ordinary glider.

Soft-Coal Industry Rule by U.S. Scored

Operators Meeting Here Denounce Guffey Bill.

The Guffey bill to provide Government regulation of the soft coal industry was denounced at a meeting here yesterday attended by coal operators representing 60 per cent of the bituminous tonnage produced in this country.

The operators organized for a fight on the Guffey bill and at the same time went on record for extension of the NRA. A committee which will direct the fight is composed of H. R. Hawthorne and J. Noble Snider, of New York; Darius Thomas, of Alabama; C. C. Dickinson and J. D. Francis, of West Virginia; Jonas Waffle, of Indiana, and Grant Stouffer, of Missouri.

Mr. Hawthorne, spokesman for the group, said the Guffey "monopoly bill" would put a straitjacket on the coal industry. The bill is unfair in two ways, he said—first, because the taxpayer's money would be used to buy up the poor coal lands, and, second, because it would give the present operators a monopoly of the coal business.

Four Nations Send Apology to Brazil

U. S. Joins in Regrets for Blunder in Chaco Bid.

By the Associated Press.

The United States joined with three South American neighbors yesterday in dispatching a note to Brazil expressing apology for a diplomatic blunder and asking Brazil to join in all efforts to end the bloody Chaco war.

Argentina, Chile and Peru were the other signers.

Argentina and Chile—along with the two belligerent nations Paraguay and Bolivia—committed the diplomatic faux pas when they asked Brazil to co-operate in the peace discussions, but neglected to invite that nation to join in the economic conference to follow a declaration of peace. Brazil considered the omission an affront.

The Brazilian government, it is understood here, is prepared to reconsider its previous refusal.

Bondholders Rap Bankruptcy Act

Flaws Charged in Carrier Reorganization Phase.

The railroad reorganization section of the Federal bankruptcy act has given the Van Sweringen brothers and J. P. Morgan & Co. a "whip hand" over the railroad properties in which they are investors, it was charged yesterday by Charles A. Beard, of the independent bondholders' committee.

In a brief submitted to the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, he asserted "the Morgan-Van Sweringen people" have been able to block all reorganizations of railroads they do not favor. He mentioned in particular the Missouri-Pacific, which the RFC has loaned $23,000,000.

The Morgan-Van Sweringen group has obtained a "strangle hold," he added, because of the provision in the act enabling any holder of more than one-third of the stock of a railroad to go to court.

U.S. and Mexico Each 'Satisfied' At Silver Talk

Morgenthau Again Assures No Change Yet Due in Price for Metal.

By the Associated Press.

The United States and Mexican governments last night concluded "mutually satisfactory" conversations on the American price-boosting silver policy, but details were closely guarded.

Secretary Morgenthau, in telling reporters of the discussions he has had with Roberto Lopez, assistant secretary of the Mexican treasury, announced there would be no change last night in 77.57 cents an ounce price the American Treasury is paying for newly mined domestic silver.

With the world price for the metal slumping below this figure, a close watch was kept on the Treasury all day for some indication that the American price would be jumped up again. The world price last week reached a high of 81 cents.

Lopez flew here for conferences with Morgenthau when the advancing American prices precipitated a monetary crisis in Mexico and banks called in silver coin. Banks there also were closed over the week-end, but generally reopened yesterday.

Hold Later Meeting.

The Mexican official first talked with Mogenthau Sunday night. Later Lopez said the conversation had been "mutually satisfactory."

The two financial experts met again yesterday, but beyond reiterating satisfaction with the results, neither would comment.

Lopez is now returning to Mexico, where yesterday hundreds lined up in front of the Bank of Mexico, in Mexico, D. F., and obtained bronze change for paper money. The shortage of silver coin there was described as acute.

Speculators in silver were believed yesterday to have become wary in trading on the world markets when the treasury failed to jump its price above 77.57 after the world price had shot ahead of that figure.

London Price Falls.

In London the price yesterday dropped to the equivalent of 74.19 cents an ounce, compared with the New York price Saturday of 76¾ cents and the high in New York Friday of 81 cents. In the Montreal futures market, the July delivery fell off 75½ cents, compared with Saturday's close of 78 cents.

Wall Street observers believed the American Government would proceed slowly in pushing up the price to $1.29 so as not to violate the international silver agreement of 1933. Under that agreement pledges were obtained from many countries not to debase their coins. It was remarked by market men yesterday that the rapid rise in price in effect forced debasement. If the silver content of coins is not reduced, it was explained, it becomes more profitable to melt them and sell the silver rather than pass them at their face value. Something of this sort was taking place in Mexico before the government acted.

Board at Academy Selects Dr. Sills

Head of Bowdoin Chairman of Annapolis Group.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., April 29.—Dr. K. C. M. Sills, president of Bowdoin College, was elected chairman of the board of visitors of the Naval Academy, which assembled here today and began annual inspections with the view of determining needs of the institution.

The majority of the board was on hand for the official honors tendered by academy authorities, though Senator Park Trammell, Florida, and Representative Carl Vinson, Georgia, chairman of the Senate and House naval committees, and most of the other Senators and Representatives, were detained at Washington. The officials will be here until Thursday.

The superintendent of the academy, Rear Admiral David F. Sellers, entertained the visitors at luncheon. A reception was held tonight, and tomorrow night a stag dinner will be given in their honor.

All of the seven civilian members of the board, prominent educators, save one, are on hand. The absentee is Dr. H. E. Clifford, dean of Harvard School of Engineering. This group includes Dr. W. Coleman Nevils, president of Georgetown University, and Dr. Francis P. Gaines, president of Washington and Lee.

Strikers Battle With Guardsmen

21 of Gorgia Group Facing Eviction Are Seized.

By the Associated Press.

La Grange, Ga., April 29.—Textile strikers facing eviction from mill-owned houses clashed with National Guardsmen in a rough-and-tumble fight here today, resulting in injury to some of the strikers, 21 of whom were arrested.

Fists, stones, sticks and rifle butts were wielded in the melee. Four women were among the 21 held prisoner by National Guardsmen, but they were not reported injured.

The flare-up brought a telegram to Secretary of Labor Perkins in Washington from George Googe, Southern representative of the American Federation of Labor in Atlanta, who urged that the evictions be discontinued until after the National Labor Relations Board gives its decision in a work-wage dispute between some employes of the Callaway Textile Mills and the mills. Googe said the decision was expected May 1.

Banking Bill Assailed by U. S. Chamber As Roosevelt Indicates Support of Measure

'Political Domination' Feared in Report by Committee.

the system's operations; partisan or Government dictation of banking would be likely to supplant desirable regulation.

"Such concentration of power in the system would be produced as to violate the principle that the regional Reserve banks should possess a high degree of autonomy.

See Small Group Ruling.

"The Federal Reserve Board and System would be compelled to conform policies with respect to money and credit to any financial program of the Government and to its dictation concerning the volume and kind of credit to be made available to business.

"The main features of the banking system that shall exist in this country would be determined by a small group of officials in Washington.

"In the councils of the system there would be a marked decrease in the influence of the representatives of commerce, agriculture and industry, while the influence of bank officials and small group of officials in Washington would be increased to an undesirable extent.

Hearings Continue Today.

"There would be danger of immediate application of theories of money and banking which would be fundamentally opposed to the standards of the Reserve act and to the best traditions of business and banking; policies concerned mainly with the volume of money and credit, rather than with the quality of credit extensions, apparently would be established.

"Reserve and member banks would be subjected to official and public expectations that their loan and investment policies must contemplate possession of a volume of illiquid paper and there would be an increase in pressure to make them conform their operations to inflationistic policies."

A hearing set for yesterday before the Glass sub-committee failed to materialize because Glass and other Democratic members were absent in a party powwow. The Senate hearings will go on today, however. Gov. Eccles probably will be called to testify at the end of the week.

The Chamber sessions yesterday were of a preliminary nature, including a meeting of the national council and a session of the International Chamber of Commerce. Meeting simultaneously were the American Trade Association executives, who heard New Deal representatives explain operation of some of the recovery organizations.

Marshall Hits Hour Plan.

The trade executives heard criticisms of the present NRA code structure from Dr. Leon Marshall, a member of the National Industrial Recovery Board, whose name recently appeared on a report extremely critical to NRA, published by the Brookings Institution.

Emphasizing that he was expressing only his personal opinion, Dr. Marshall said:

"When I look at the present limitations on maximum hours under existing code provisions, I want to hold my nose."

Discussing fair trade practice provisions, Dr. Marshall expressed the opinion that NRA had moved too rapidly, with the result that compliance had broken down. He said some of the trade practice provisions in the codes had gone beyond practices condemned by the courts or by custom.

Davis Defends Prices.

Dr. Marshall proposed basic minimum hour provisions of 40 hours a week with the 8-hour day, with the additional provision that workers could work overtime at time-and-a-half pay.

On the same program, Chester C. Davis, Agriculture Adjustment Administration head, made a plea for understanding of the farmer's problems. Speaking of price complaints, Mr. Davis said that persons making objections are comparing food prices with those of a few years ago, "which meant bankruptcy for the farmers." In February, he pointed out, beef was only 81.2 per cent of the price average of 1924-1928, pork 70 per cent and lamb 62 per cent.

Mr. Davis' only reference to the cotton processing tax controversy was to the effect that it had been productive of "more bunk" during the past four months than any other item in the farm program.

Prentiss Coonley, code administration director of NRA, told the trade association executives that there must be some measure of discipline for business.

Addressing the chamber's National Council, W. F. Gephart, vice president of the First National Bank of St. Louis, declared that "one of the greatest needs at present is a careful differentiation between large industrial enterprises which do bring benefit to the people and those which either have no basic economic justification or which by their conduct have forfeited public approval and demand proper regulation."

"It would seem, therefore," he said, "if we are confronting a situation of having more regulation of business by the Government there are but three choices: First, a system of state socialism—moderate or extreme; second, a system of detailed and minute regulation, sometimes described as economic planning, and, third, the present system of regulation, improved not only as regards the subject matter to be regulated, but also in obtaining more able and efficient individuals on these numerous regulatory bodies."

Feels Laws Not Enough.

Solution of national problems, he said, "will not come primarily by enacting laws or by any other governmental agency. It is for you and me and the other citizens to find a solution in our industry, in our thrift, in our honesty, in our public spirit, in our cooperation, and above all, in fulfilling our moral obligation to be intelligent and not permit ourselves to be swayed by the emotional appeals of the idealist or by the appeals of the demagogue to our hatreds, fears and selfishness."

Discussing foreign commerce, Thomas J. Watson, of New York, president of the International Business Machines Corporation and chairman of the American Committee of the International Chamber of Commerce, said:

"During the last two years we have seen numerous signs of improvement, and today, though the greatest shipping companies are forced to proclaim that there is a long distance to go before international trade will bring prosperity to those who depend upon it for their living, improvement is marked in many quarters and in many lines of mercantile business."

Extreme nationalistic feeling, Mr. Watson said, has resulted in "a situation bristling with restrictions and barriers preventing the normal upturn of world commerce."

Reduction in cotton exports, he said, has hurt foreign trade most seriously. He particularly commended the Government's policy of making reciprocal trade agreements.

"We have to look to Government," he said, 'for help in foreign trade in a variety of ways, and I may say sincerely that when we do we do not look in vain."

General sessions of the chamber meeting will get under way this morning. Speakers at the first general session will be Henry I Harriman, retiring president of the Chamber of Commerce; Forney Johnston, Birmingham, Ala., attorney, and A. O. Dawson, of Montreal, president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce and of Canadian Cottons, Ltd.

Group meetings today will discuss taxation, business under codes, world trade and the merchant marine, durable goods and housing, insurance, and labor relations. Dinner meetings will be held by the American Trade Association Executives and the National Association of Commercial Organization Secretaries.

A general session and numerous group meetings will be held tomorrow and the convention will end with a general session at which resolutions will be adopted Thursday morning.

Fire-Bug, 13, Faces Charge of Murder

Set Six Blazes for Thrill of Seeing Engines.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 29.—A 13-year-old gamin, who confessed he set six blazes in Rogers Park for the thrill of seeing fire engines and spreading terror among the wealthy, faced murder charges tonight.

Fire Attorney Thomas J. Sheehan recommended that the boy, Edward Malloy, be arraigned on charges of murder by arson in the death of Mrs. Julia Goldberg, 72, trapped in one of the half-dozen apartment houses where flames were kindled in swift succession early last Tuesday.

Sheehan announced the crippled lad had detailed his incendiary operations in a new statement under a lie detector, told of hiding behind trees to see the fire engines clatter by and advanced this reason for the arson spree that threw the neighborhood into a state of alarm:

"All those places I set on fire were lived in by rich people who wouldn't do anything for the poor."

The youth informed psychiatrists later that voices he believed "came from the devil" prodded him to his deeds.

F St. Building Is Purchased For $450,000

Out-of-Town Investor Buys 9-Story American Property Through Luchs.

The American Building, a nine-story structure at 1315-17 F street northwest, has been sold for $450,000, it was announced yesterday. Morton J. Luchs, vice president of Shannon & Luchs Co., who swung the deal, described it as "the largest real estate transaction in commercial property here since the depression."

The building, described as "the first skyscraper and iron building in Washington," was sold for Cary A. Hardee, receiver for the Federal-American National Bank & Trust Co. The buyer was Martin W. Meyer, who represented an unnamed out-of-town investor.

The building was erected 40 years ago by the A. S. Abell Co., owner of the Baltimore Sun, and for many years the first floor was occupied by the Washington bureau of the Sun.

In 1903 the property became the home of the American National Bank. That bank was merged with the Federal National Bank in 1922, and the consolidated bank continued to occupy the building until 1926 when it moved to a new building at the southeast corner of Fourteenth and G streets northwest, now the home of the Hamilton National Bank.

The first floor of the building is now occupied by the A. S. Beck Shoe Corporation and Ross & Co., jewelers.

Compounds Evidence In Healing Arts Case

Powdered compounds, allegedly recommended and dispensed at health lectures by Paul C. Bragg, self-styled authority on physical ills, were admitted as evidence yesterday at the second day of his trial on charges of violating the District healing arts practice act.

The compounds, one of which was described as containing drugs, were accepted as evidence after Judge Ralph Given overruled a motion to bar them by Herbert Grossman, defense attorney.

The trial will continue this morning, when Bragg is expected to take the stand.

Labor Bill Out, A. F. L. Cheers, Talks Strikes

Write Congress to Pass Wagner Plan, Green Urges 200 Delegates.

should say, 'please, mister, will you do this?' We must demand what we want."

Green defended the resolution as strongly worded.

"The way to demand is the ballot box," the federation president answered. "If they don't vote the way we ask them to vote we'll vote against them when they come up for re-election."

"The position in which American labor now finds itself," the resolution read, "requires definite decision and action by Congress for class distinctions are being created.

Claim Employers Aided.

"Congress must declare that the wage earners' right to self organization is in every way equal to and as necessary as the same right so widely applied to organized employers with governmental approval."

Present conditions, the resolution insisted, "require immediate and determined action" to assure "fair play" for workers.

"The administration of NRA," the resolutions added, "actively assisted employers to organize and to strengthen their position through organization. The NIRA has made no such provision for Federal assistance to labor in its efforts to organize. * * *

"Employers have been exempted from the provisions of the Sherman and Clayton acts. Centralized industry has come into being while labor has been divided under the absurd and inconsistent plan of so-called proportionate representation and dependency upon codes of fair competition which, in most instances, denied adequate labor representation."

Such phrases as "revolution," "butchery," "slackers" and "stool pigeons" studded the speeches of the long line of orators.

The possibility of strikes was dangled before the meeting by Representative Reuben T. Wood (Democrat), of Missouri, a bespectacled former union cigarmaker.

"There is a conspiracy among organized employers to destroy every decent piece of legislation enacted at the last session of Congress," he shouted.

Green Charges Conspiracy.

"We have come to a showdown. Unless the Wagner bill is passed it won't be possible for NRA to be successful. If NRA proves a failure, nothing short of a revolution will be the result."

Green charged the chamber with planning a "conspiracy" to have Congress sidetrack legislation favored by the federation.

"If our legislative program is shelved," he said, "then democracy in our country has perished forever.

"The day of bulldozing must come to an end that the workers may be made free."

Chairman Connery, House Labor Committee, pledged his support of the Wagner bill. He said Section 7 (a), the NIRA collective bargaining clause, was intended to "do away with" company unions.

Assails Williams.

"Company unions," he said, "nine times out of ten mean a bunch of stool pigeons who receive favors from their employers to double-cross the workers."

The name of Clay Williams, former head of NRA, was injected into the meeting by Connery when he contended the labor costs in a tobacco plant headed by Williams were 2 per cent and added:

"My committee wants a rule to get out on the House floor a bill to give labor equal representation on code authorities, but we won't get it because if we did it would interfere with all these Clay Williamses and Missouri majors who've been writing the codes."

Connery said a "ring of steel of yes men" around President Roosevelt prevented persons who "want to help him" from getting a hearing.

"Come Down and Lobby."

Introduced as a member of the Motion Picture Operators Union, Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), Indiana, told the workers they should emulate big business and "come down to Washington and lobby."

Senator Walsh predicted Congress would pass the Wagner bill. He angrily replied to demands of business for legislation banning strikes to offset the labor disputes measure.

"Don't they know such a law would make a slave out of every workingman by taking away his God-given right to work or not to work?"

The Wagner bill, Walsh argued, would make effective section 7(a).

Bans Bargaining Refusal.

"You haven't freedom for collective bargaining unless you define what shall be punishable. You have a principle, but no machinery."

As approved by the Senate committee, the Wagner bill would definitely write into law authority for labor to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing and without coercion by employers. Company unions would be outlawed and a "supreme" court for labor would be established.

A last-minute amendment would prohibit employers from refusing to bargain with workers.

The measure has been indorsed by Secretary Perkins and Francis Biddle, National Labor Relations Board chairman.

Nice to Name Women To Magistrate Posts

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, April 29. — Gov. Harry W. Nice told the Federation of Republican Women of Maryland here today that he will designate "two ladies as police magistrates of Baltimore City within a few days."

Gov. Nice and Mayor Walter E. Quenstedt, of Annapolis, greeted members of the federation, who held their spring rally in the House of Delegates chamber. Mrs. Nice attended the afternoon session and was seated on the rostrum as the Governor entered.

He shook hands with Mrs. Lulu Powell, State chairman, who presided, and with Mrs. Nice, remarking:

"I never fail to shake hands with the real Governor of Maryland when I see her."

The women present applauded the Governor's remark.

Dominion Asks For Testimony On Plane Bases

CanadianAid Calls On State Officials for Copy of House Hearing.

By the Associated Press.

Canada, both interested and concerned at proposals to establish a "camouflaged" military air base near her border, yesterday asked the State Department for any public data on such army plans.

Promptly, State Department officials promised to comply with the request.

The incident began with publication of testimony given the House Military Committee by Brig. Gen. Charles E. Kilbourne, assistant chief of staff in charge of war plans. He said that because of the traditional undefended border between the United States and Canada, it would be "unfortunate" to establish a powerful air base in the Great Lakes region.

Envoy Asks Documents.

"You will notice No. 7 in my bill is camouflaged," Kilbourne said. "It is called 'intermediate' stations for transcontinental flights, but it means the same thing."

Hume Wrong, counsel of the Canadian Legation, went to the State Department after reading this and requested "whatever documents have been given the press and formed the basis of press stories."

He emphasized that he had asked for no documents or data considered secret or confidential.

Disclosure of the army's war plans and Canada's step coincided with ceremonies commemorating the 118-year-old Rush-Bagot naval limitations treaty between the United States and Canada.

British, French Silent.

Kilbourne's testimony—as well as that of other army officers called before the committee on defense plans—was given in secret session. Later, however, the committee's report became available.

Both State and War Department officials declined any comment on the testimony which included a statement by Brig. Gen. F. M. Andrews, commander of the general headquarters air force, that it might be necessary in an emergency to seize British and French islands off the American coast.

The British and French Embassies, it was said, have not communicated with the State Department on the subject.

Since his testimony was given, Kilbourne has been transferred to command the harbor defenses of Manila Bay in the Philippines.

Virginia Fights Water-Power Act Broadening

Present Law Has Caused Suffering in State, Hooker Charges.

By the Associated Press.

Virginia told Congress yesterday the Federal water power act is bad enough as it is without a broadening of the regulation imposed by it.

H. Lester Hooker, State corporation commissioner, set forth the old dominion's attitude toward pending amendments to the water power act at a Senate Interstate Commerce Committee hearing.

He said the State's opposition toward sweeping Federal regulation is not "academic."

"Has Already Suffered."

"The State," he said, "has already suffered the consequences of the present, less severe, Federal water power act in retarding developments which but for the action of the Federal Power Commission would long since have been in operation."

He referred specifically to the Appalachian Power Co.'s proposal to generate hydro-electric power on New River at Radford.

The proposal to build that mammoth plant has been before the power commission for a decade and the commission has announced its plans to fight its construction in Federal court, unless the company accepts Federal licensing and all that goes with it. Virginia took the company's side in an earlier suit.

Hooker's argument was built around the rights of States and what he termed the "encroachments" on those rights by Federal power legislation.

Virginia's "sovereign rights," he said, were invaded by the present water power act and the proposed amendments—part of the Wheeler-Rayburn utility holding company bill—are still "more objectionable."

Phillips May Succeed To 'Santa Claus' Post

By the Associated Press.

Grand View, Ind., April 29.—Oscar Phillips, 40, may become "Santa Claus'" successor.

Vernon Ferguson, Spencer County Democratic chairman, tonight telegraphed to Representative John W. Boehne, jr. (Democrat), of Indiana, at Washington his recommendation for Phillips' appointment as acting postmaster of Santa Claus, Ind. He would succeed James F. Martin, 60, who died yesterday.

Phillips, who was born near Santa Claus, has lived for two years in the little hamlet which each December becomes a beehive of postal activity.

4 Trolley Employes Beaten in Omaha Strike

Omaha, Nebr., April 29 (A.P.).—Violence flared here late today in the strike of approximately 400 organized employes of the Omaha & Council Bluffs Street Railway Co., and four employes of the company were severely beaten by 50 men who stopped a street car.

The fight came after nine days of peaceful picketing in the strike of the organized employes. It followed a parade by strikers and strike sympathizers. When the parade broke up after proceeding through the downtown district without incident, a group of 50 men, police said, halted a street car by hurling a brick through the wire netting that covered the windows.

France Plans Link With Italy In Air Alliance

Acts to Prevent Spying on Frontier Forts by Reich Planes.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 29.—France laid plans today to negotiate a military air alliance with Italy, disclosing simultaneously that 12 fast pursuit planes have been assigned to patrol duty on the French frontier to keep German aircraft from spying upon French fortifications.

Victor Denain, minister for air, announced he was proceeding to Rome May 9 or 10 "to negotiate an air agreement, approved at the Stresa conference, and to lay definite foundations for one."

Meanwhile, the French were leaving the handling of Germany's naval rearmament to England, although the naval minister, Francois Pietri, left for London today to confer with admiralty officials concerning Hitler's plans to build submarines.

To guard the heavily fortified frontier from spying foreign aircraft an announcement from Metz said six ships capable of 220 miles an hour will be stationed there and six more at Strasbourg, their pilots instructed to pursue any plane that flies over the frontier. It was recently charged that German planes had flown over fortified regions four times in disregard of regulations.

Denain's announced plans to go to Rome indicated that a general pact to join European air forces in combating a danger of sudden attack will be discussed in addition to a bilateral treaty.

A Franco-Italian alliance would be extended even to commercial planes, according to present plans. It is likewise intended to fix the exact termss of technical collaboration, such as exchange of information on airplane designs, experiments and similar problems.

France, feeling that Germany's submarine program "awakened England to the Hitler menace," was now ready, officials said, to follow "in principle" whatever policy Britain adopts.

Pietri's visit to London was ostensibly to attend the wedding of the daughter of a British naval official.

The financing of France's 1935 naval program as well as her new air and land armaments will be discussed in the French cabinet tomorrow. The government faces the problem of finding 2,000,000,000 francs already voted for a national defense and 15,000,000,000 for other purposes, including budget balancing.

French officials hope that Berlin's indications concerning "pocket-submarines," as they are called here, constitute a direct answer to England's joining Frantce and Italy in a united front at Stresa.

Movie Bullets Panic Man on First Visit

By the Associated Press.

Statesboro, Ga., April 29.—"Buddie" Farrell, 18 and breathless, burst into the sheriff's office here with an appeal for the arrest of a "bad man" who "shot four times point blank" at him in a movie.

The sheriff's department investigated.

The shooting was on the screen. It was the Negro's first visit to a "Wild West" thriller and he thought the shots fired in the picture were intended for him.

Supreme Court Ruling Halts Dam Project

U. S. Plea to Restrain Arizona From Interfering With Work Denied.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Construction of Parker Dam on the Colorado River, a $13,000,000 PWA project, was halted yesterday after the United States Supreme Court had denied the Federal Government's request for an injunction restraining the State of Arizona from interfering with the work.

The court pointed out that Congress by statute had forbidden the construction of dams on navigable streams without its consent and that Congress had not directly authorized the project. Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes initiated the construction of the dam under provisions of the $3,300,000,000 PWA law.

This was regarded as the most important of 22 formal opinions handed down by the court on the busiest opinion day this term. The opinions were of a miscellaneous character, dealing with the darning of runs in silk hose, the doping of race horses, adjudication of tax disputes, controversies over freight charges and the NRA.

NRA Cases Not Conclusive.

The NRA cases were not conclusive and were not regarded as important in throwing any light on the validity of that legislation, which, however, will come before the court for argument Thursday in its first real test. The court upheld on technical grounds the dismissal by a lower court of a suit to restrain a New York State prosecutor from pressing charges for NRA code violation against the Spielman Motor Sales Co., Inc.

The court also returned unanswered to the Ninth Corcuit Court of Appeals several questions propounded by that appellate tribunal regarding the adequacy of standards fixed by Congress in legislation dealing with the restriction of petroleum production and the NRA oil code. This action left the validity of the attacked oil code up to the appellate court for the present.

The Supreme Court also refused to review the action of a lower court in dismissing a suit for an injunction brought by W. Ames & Co., of New Jersey, alleging that the NRA was being used by Federal officials to boycott the firm's products.

The court failed to reveal its decisions on the constitutionality of either the railroad retirement act or the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium act—both argued several weeks ago. The court's long delay in deciding the railroad retirement act has led to the belief that the tribunal has found this case an unusually difficult one to determine. The Government requested expedition of the case, but several months have passed since arguments were heard.

Cardozo Goes Conservative.

Among the cases decided there occurred in one an unusual 5-to-4 division among the nine justices. Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo deserted the liberal majority to lead the four conservatives in an opinion which ordered dismissed claims of the State of Florida and shippers in that State for restitution of increased freight rates on logs paid by them under an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission subsequently voided by the Supreme Court for procedural defects.

In a second order, correcting the procedural defects, the I. C. C. imposed the same rates. The State of Florida and shippers concerned, however, demanded reimbursement of the excess rates they paid under the first order during the time it was in effect. Justice Owen Roberts, with Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, Justice Louis D. Brandeis and Justice Harlan F. Stone—known as the court's liberals—agreed that restitution was due and should be made.

But their viewpoint did not prevail against that of Justice Cardozo, who wrote the majority opinion, and Justices Willis Van Devanter, James C. McReynolds, George Sutherland and Pierce Butler. This group held that since the second order indicated that the first order, except for the procedural defects, was reasonable and fair, the railroad involved "did not offend against equity and conscience in standing on its possession and keeping what it got."

Opposed to Dam Project.

Arizona State authorities have been bitterly opposed to construction of Parker Dam since the project was started last September. In November Arizona's Governor declared martial law and ordered the State militia to the scene in an effort to halt the work. After that the Federal Government sought an injunction restraining the State from interferring with the project.

Arizona's opposition to the Parker Dam is based on a desire for additional rights to water in the Colorado River, which is one of the State's boundary lines. It is an ancient controversy and flared up at the time Congress authorized construction of Boulder Dam.

Justice Pierce Butler, speaking for the court, pointed out that whatever rights Arizona has in the Colorado River are subordinate to those of Congress to control navigable streams under the commerce clause of the Constitution and that "under that clause Congress has power to cause to be built a dam across the river in aid of navigation."

Act Lacking, He Points Out.

"But no act of Congress specifically authorizes the construction of Parker Dam," Justice Butler ruled, pointing out that in 1899 Congress forbade the building of any bridges, dam, dike or causeway over or in any port, roadstead, haven, harbor, canal, navigable river or other navigable water "until the consent of Congress shall have been obtained and until the plans shall have been submitted to and approved by the Chief of Engineers and the Secretary of War."

"These provisions unmistakably disclose definite intention on the part of Congress effectively to safeguard rivers and other navigable waters against the unauthorized erection therein of dams or other structures for any purpose whatsoever," Justice Butler contended.

He rejected the Government's argument that this statute was intended to apply only to private persons and not to agencies of the Federal Government.

After the court handed down its decision Reclamation Commissioner Elwood Mead announced he had ordered R. F. Walter, chief reclamation engineer at Denver, "to stop work on the dam for the present time." Mr. Mead will meet today with Secretary Ickes to decide what steps shall be taken. It is assumed an effort will be made to rush a bill through Congress authorizing the project.

A bugle call halts the gunnery quarters drill, and the men go back to the normal tasks.

So the great fleet moves on for six weeks of the hardest work in the year. This annual maneuver, known as problem 16 because there have been 15 before, is designed to put the Fleet to its most crucial test.

Where the Fleet units will be from day to day is something only the commanding officers know. This is confidential.

What ships of the 153 vessels will see Alaska, or Midway Island, or when they will get to Honolulu, is a matter of conjecture, except to the strategic chiefs, and they won't tell.

'Chloroform Madman' Attacks Three Women

Los Angeles, April 29 (U.P.).—A "chloroform madman" was sought by police tonight after he had assailed a 40-year-old woman—the third attack he had made in less than 24 hours.

Elizabeth Gorwit said he gained admittance to her house, knocked out two of her teeth and assaulted her.

Previously a woman and a girl reported he had attempted to attack them in their rooms last night, using a chloroform spray or soaked rag in an effort to render them unconscious.

that he merely conducted a race track information service for such as desired it.

Oliver B. Exline, assistant cashier of the Bank of Commerce and Savings; Joseph E. Sands and Claude C. Mobeily, both of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., were the only witnesses yesterday.

Besides Beard, those on trial are William Carroll, James T. Gallagher, Fred H. Heck, George E. Hutchins, Melville G. Jacobs, Sidney Kaplan, Lewis L. Levy, Fred J. Meese, Timothy H. Noel, Joseph A. O'Callaghan, John J. Sorrori, and William G. Smith. A fourteenth, George Harwood, never has been apprehended.

Sheldon Attacks Naval Maneuvers

Holds They Are Intended to Bluff Japan.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., April 29.—Dr. Charles M. Sheldon, famed crusader for world peace, asserted tonight American naval maneuvers in the Pacific are "for the purpose of bluffing Japan."

They are "exhibitions of truculence and bad manners," said the white-haired minister and author of "In His Steps"—a book that has sold 23,000,000 copies and reputedly is "the world's best seller next to the Bible."

"There is no reason for the maneuvers. Japan has no intention of attacking us. The very idea is absurd," Dr. Sheldon said. "It looks like a crime to spend money for such a war-like exhibition at a time when men are walking the streets hungry and when citizens are burdened with economic troubles."

Dr. Sheldon, keen-eyed and aggressively active at 78, is confident there will not be another World War.

Hamilton Clemency Denied.

Austin, Tex., April 29 (A.P.).—Gov. James V. Allred today announced the State pardon board had recommended that the death sentences of Raymond Hamilton and Joe Palmer be not commuted. The two desperadoes are to be electrocuted May 10. The Governor usually follows the pardon board's recommendation. He said, however, that he would withhold a final decision until he completed a careful study of the cases.

called that his friends had once given him the sobriquet of "Sure-shooting Tom."

He lost his eye, he explained, in a shooting fray in Carroll County. A man shot at him, he said, from a distance of 12 feet, but the bullet missed him. However, he said, it struck a stove and a piece of iron chipped from the stove and flew into his eye.

His six brothers and two sisters, Queensberry said, all are members of the Baptist Church. He confessed that he himself didn't attend. Nevertheless, he said, he reads his Bible and has strong religious convictions.

The Rev. A. F. Tobler, pastor of the Lovettsville Lutheran Church near here, talked with Quesenberry today and afterward quoted the accused man as saying that he had "prayed over the whole matter."

When Quesenberry appeared in court today to answer charges of killing Police Sergeant Clarence J. McClary, of Alexandria, and wounding Federal Agent George Kirkpatrick, his attorneys, Stilson Hall and Lucas Phillips, immediately launched an attack on the indictment.

A multiplicity of factors entered into the quashing of the indictment. Outstanding was the charge that the jury commissioners who selected the grand jury had never been legally qualified for office—all because the clerk of the court asked them if they would perform their duties "without fear or prejudice," whereas the Virginia statutes oath reads "without favor or prejudice."

Attorneys Hall and Phillips also charged that of the 48 grand jurors selected for the Circuit Court of Loudoun County, but 47 had been located, and that the grand jury list was entered as of February 3, 1935, when the statute requires selection in either June, July, or August prior to the year they are to serve.

Granting the request to squash the indictment, Judge Alexander lost no time in proceeding with the reindictment of Quesenberry. He selected five Loudoun Countians from the throng which jammed the court room and they immediately went into chambers as the grand jury. After an hour and a half deliberation, the grand jury returned indictments against Quesenberry charging that on March 16 he shot Agent Kirkpatrick, and that on March 17 he shot and killed Policeman McClary. Shelby Coles, said to have been Quesenberry's look-out man at the still when it was raided by Federal men March 16, also was indicted with Quesenberry for the shooting of Kirkpatrick.

Today's grand jury included F. E. Saunders, foreman; S. H. Grimes, jr., P. B. Gochnauer, C. H. H. Matfett and R. H. Trussell. Quesenberry was not arraigned after the indictment and his case was tentatively set for trial May 16. When arraigned some weeks ago on the indictments subsequently found faulty, Quesenberry pleaded guilty to the shooting of Kirkpatrick and not guilty to the shooting and slaying of McClary.

Sister, Victim Make Appeal for Kidnaper

Jefferson City, Mo., April 29 (A.P.).—Three women led a fight tonight for the life of the condemned kidnaper of Mary McElroy, daughter of Kansas City's white-haired city manager.

One is the slender, modish victim of the $30,000 abduction; the second is Kidnaper Walter McGee's sister, Mrs. Alberta Brewer, and the third, his woman lawyer, Miss Lillie Knight.

The kidnaper's sister and his attorney spent 20 minutes with Gov. Guy B. Park today, pleading for a commutation of his death sentence to life imprisonment, following upon the visit made to his office Friday by Miss McElroy and her father.

Gov. Park said later he had not reached a decision.

Downing street's policy on the matter. He urged Britain to "take measures in concert with the Stresa powers and if possible with Russia to check this one-sided, dangerous, persistent repudiation of the treaties before it is too late."

Sydney Harbert, Conservative, declared:

"Does not the express intention of Germany to start afresh on building submarines constitute proof, if indeed proof were needed, that German rearmament is directed particularly against this country?"

Sir John Simon ignored both the suggestion and the query, asserting the government was still considering its policy.

William Thorne, Laborite, asked Sir John: "Don't you think that in the recent conversations in Berlin Hitler did not tell you all the truth?"

Simon again did not reply.

Berlin Source Admits U-Boat Keels Laid

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, April 29.—It was admitted on good authority today that orders for "a number of submarine keels" had been placed by the government with various German firms, but whether actual construction had begun was an open question.

The orders were said to have been placed at Kiel, Hamburg, Stettin and possibly Danzig. Whether orders had gone out to delay the start of construction until the proposed Anglo-German naval parleys have reached their conclusion could not be ascertained.

Official denials that construction was under way had been given to foreign quarters which inquired, but the official government news bureau has not carried such denials.

Whatever may be the truth concerning U-boat construction, there were indications that Germany is "wooing" Portugal, leading to speculation as to whether Portugal or the Azores were being considered as possible submarine bases.

Some weeks ago Reichsfuehrer Hitler granted an interview to a Portuguese newspaperman. Ordinarily he speaks only to correspondents of great powers. There has been a lively cultural interchange between Portugal and Germany recently, several laudatory articles about Portugal appearing in the German press.

Economically, too, Portugal has been favored recently. Portuguese gasoline is supplanting the American product in many instances and Portuguese sardines are found with increasing frequency on German lunch tables in place of French sardines.

Tip to Mrs. Roosevelt Brings Liquor Arrest

Fort Smith, Ark., April 29 (AP).—Duke Frederick, Assistant United States Attorney for the Western District of Arkansas, said today that a letter to Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt from a Carroll County woman has resulted in a Federal Circuit Court of Appeals conviction.

Frederick said an anonymous letter stating liquor was being stored in a stone house in Carroll County was sent to Mrs. Roosevelt. The letter, he said, was turned over to the Revenue Department. As a result, Frederick said, a man described as John Schurtzer was convicted at Harrison, Ark., for violating the liquor law.

Florida Senate Votes Ban on Chain Stores

Tallahassee, Fla., April 29 (AP).—By a vote of 28 to 5 the Florida Senate late today passed the bill to outlaw chain stores, after amending it to exempt all chains now operating.

The senate previously had attached a referendum clause so that the measure, if passed by the house and approved by the Governor, or if it should become law without the Governor's approval, would not go into effect unless ratified by the people in an election next year.

Body of Missing Boy Found, Probe Pushed

Chicago, April 29 (AP).—Police pursued an investigation of the death of little Richard Max Perrot tonight after his 23-day disappearance was ended with recovery of his battered body from the Chicago River.

Sighted by a truck driver this morning as it bobbed in the North Branch in the wake of a motor launch, the body was identified by the father, Max Perrot.

Though police thought the bruises might be accounted for by the washing of the body against river pilings during its long immersion, they were not satisfied all suspicion of external violence had been discounted.

tempts to enact all Administration measures. Republicans flatly demanded that some controversial measures be laid aside. Several prominent Democrats took the same view, privately.

Taking issue with nearly every statement of the President, Senator Daniel O. Hastings, of Delaware, co-chairman of the Republican Senatorial-Congressional Campaign Committee, demanded "proofs" that conditions are better.

"My own judgment is that the President's speech on the whole shows that he has lost touch with American thought," Hastings said in a bitingly critical four-page statement.

"I disagree with the President that the trips on Vincent Astor's palatial yacht provide a good place to keep in touch with the people of the whole Nation."

Senate leaders are expected to make another effort today to break through the anti-lynching filibuster, kept going yesterday by Senators Hugo L. Black, of Alabama, and James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina (Democrats).

"It is patent that a deadlock exists and will continue to exist indefinitely until we take up some other bill," the majority leader told the Senate yesterday. He asked an adjournment, technically clearing the slate of all legislation, so the bonus bill could be called up today.

Piled up behind the filibuster on the Senate calendar are not only the Wagner-Costigan anti-lynching measure and the bonus, but the sharply contested AAA amendments, approved by committee, but unmentioned in the President's Sunday broadcast.

Following the bonus "compromise" out of the Senate Finance Committee, the Administration's NRA extension bill may be reported today or tomorrow. Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), Missouri, believes he has the votes to approve his nine-month temporary extension substitute, to continue NRA until the Supreme Court rules on validity. NRA opponents will seek to amend it, to restore the antitrust laws and eliminate price fixing.

Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, complicated the NRA legislative tie-up yesterday with a bill giving the Federal Trade Commission authority to provide minimum wages and maximum hours in industry, extending FTC powers to call trade-practice conferences in the interest of agreements nonsubversive to the antitrust laws.

Once the NRA bill is shaken free from the committee, the Senate finance group has yet to struggle through a social security wrangle. Hearings are completed. That bill has passed the House.

The one major Administration measure that has passed both houses, the $4,880,000,000 works appropriation, meanwhile kept President Roosevelt in busy conference with advisors. Aid to farmers in poor agricultural regions, and low rental projects in cities, are expected to materialize shortly. An executive order speeding Rexford Guy Tugwell's rural resettlement program into operation, is expected within a fortnight.

Pat Harrison Denies He'll Succeed Landis

By the Associated Press.

Pat Harrison, Mississippi's senior Senator, wants the world to know he is in politics and not baseball.

He denied yesterday a published report that he was being sought as the czar of baseball to succeed Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis.

"No such offer has been made to me," Harrison said.

Howard U. Educator Chosen for Riot Study

E. Franklin Frazier, head of the department of sociology of Howard University, yesterday was chosen by Mayor LaGuardia's commission now investigating the recent Harlem race riots to make a scientific study of the causes of rioting, and to make an economic and social survey of environmental conditions affecting the Negro in the metropolitan area.

He will enter upon this work tomorrow, will participate in the hearings now being conducted under auspices of the commission during the next two months, and will conclude the study and submit his findings some time in October. His report is expected to recommend autonomy for the Harlem colored citizen, including redistricting to permit election of a member of Congress.

lacking in fairness and common honesty."

It added: "It certainly seems that the strenuous objection raised as to the disclosure of these communications strongly indicates a deliberate and designed attempt is being made to mislead this board into holding that the transaction is non-taxable, when the fact it would be held taxable if the true facts were known."

Flushed with anger, Hogan demanded the brief be stricken from the record as "vicious, scandalous, scurrilous, impertinent and malicious." He said he "denounced the author as a contemptible scoundrel and libelor and slanderer of members of his own profession."

In his own 6,500-word brief about the letters, Hogan asserted Mellon personally waived any objection to introduction of the letters, but that he believed the witness, Paul G. Rodewald, was legally bound to refuse them because of the "sacred relationship" of client and attorney.

Others Face Charges.

Rodewald's firm represents the three other former stockholders in McClintic-Marshall and said they had advised him not to surrender the correspondence.

Jackson gave first formal intimation that the others, Mellon's brother, the late R. B. Mellon, and H. H. McClintic and C. D. Marshall, also are facing assessments because of this deal in his argument. He said the Government would be blocked on a similar plea when it tries their cases individually.

Young David R. Shelton, of Richmond, Va., assistant to Jackson, told the board that he wrote the brief and insisted that its statements were made only in line with the points of law raised. He denied there had been any intent to slander his opponents and said:

"I may not be Mr. Hogan's equal in ability, but I am in integrity."

Treasury Unadvised On Jackson's Plans

By the Associated Press.

Treasury officials declined comment last night on the move of Robert H. Jackson, chief counsel of the Internal Revenue Bureau, to withdraw from the Government's income tax suit against Andrew W. Mellon.

"All we know," one official said, "is what we have read in the newspapers. Until we have official information on the matter we will reserve any statement."

White House Calls Group to Save NRA

inal NRA extension proposal but they are equally unacceptable to Senators Clark, Borah, Nye, (Republican), North Dakota, and other outspoken NRA foes.

Clark seeks a temporary extension merely to permit the Supreme Court to rule on an operating law, rather than decide what the Missourian calls a moot case. He served notice yesterday that he will lead a fight against any effort at permanent extension.

While negotiations were under way to bring together these widely divergent views, the NIRB decided not to follow a National Labor Relations Board recommendation to remove the Blue Eagle from the Ely & Walker Dry Goods Co., of St. Louis. At the same time, the Labor Relations Board withdrew a recommendation for removing the insignia from the Ames Baldwin Wyoming Co., of Parkersburg, W. Va.

Meanwhile, the Government decided to defer similar action against the Charles Pfizer & Co., Inc., of New York City, and the Hazel-Atlas Glass Co. of Clarksburg, W. Va., pending final hearings. This was disclosed in answers to four injunction suits brought by the companies.

Investment Bankers Act to Drop NRA Code

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 29.—Steps to take the investment bankers' code out of the hands of NRA and place it under the securities and exchange commission were taken at a meeting of the code committee today.

B. Harold Griswold, of the Investment Banking House of Alex. Brown & Sons, Baltimore, chairman of the committee, said the step was taken after a thorough canvass of investment bankers through regional committees.

House Group Selected To Probe Retail Unit

Speaker Byrans yesterday named a committee of seven to make the investigation ordered by the House into the new retail federation.

The membership is: Representative Cochran (Democrat), Missouri, chairman; Warren (Democrat), North Carolina; Dockweiler (Democrat), California; Lucas (Democrat), Illinois; McLean (Republican), New York, and Boileau (Progressive), Wisconsin.

New Operation Found to Aid Heart Disease of the thyroxin the gland produces naturally.

"We believe," the report today stated, "that cutting the nerves and reducing the blood supply of the thyroid is the simplest and safest operation which has been devised for the treatment of angina pectoris and congestive heart failure and that it does not cause any damaging constitutional changes in the patient."

A new clew to the long baffling cause of epilepsy was suggested to the American College of Surgeons today by Dr. Walter Freeman, of Washington.

He found it in examining the thymus glands of 74 persons who died of various diseases at St. Elizabeths Hospital, Washington. The thymus gland helps to regulate growth and largely disappears in adolescence.

In 32 persons Dr. Freeman found that the gland had persisted into adult life, and that 44 per cent of these persons with the leftover thymus glands were epileptoids—persons with epileptic tendencies.

The rest of his 74 thymus gland examinations showed the normal adult disappearance of nearly all of this youthful gland. Among these persons, numbering 42, there were only three epileptoids.

He says this suggests that a thymus gland persisting too long may be associated with epilepsy. An easy test can be made of this clew by giving X-rays to epileptics, for these rays would destroy thymus glands that had persisted too long.

Evidence of a disease which is a relative of both cancer and pernicious anemia was reported by Dr. B. K. Wiseman and Dr. C. V. Moore, of the department of medical research, Ohio State University.

The disease is chronic lymphatic leukemia. This is a well-known malady, in which white blood cells increase to a destructive extent. Its cause is in doubt; its effects resemble cancer. The Ohioans think they have found the cause in changes in metabolism similar to the changes which accompany pernicious anemia.

Dr. Francis D. Murphy, of Milwaukee, told the physicians that common colds and sore throat cause many cases of chronic nephritis, a kidney disease which is the third most common cause of death in the United States.

Dr. Murphy, who is chief of staff at the Milwaukee County General Hospital and head of the department of medicine at Marquette University, said the common cold and simple sore throat were responsible for 79 per cent of the 136 cases of acute nephritis studied at the hospital in the last 12 years.

Japanese Declare Red War Possible

Effort Made by Army Heads to Keep Up Spirit.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, April 29.—Japanese military leaders have issued a series of statements designed to impress upon the people that war with Russia is still a possibility.

Although relations with the Soviet admittedly improved after sale of the Chinese Eastern Railway and although Moscow is now absorbed by the European situation, the Japanese officers appeared determined that the martial spirit shall not be relaxed.

"The Soviet continues steadily to augment its war equipment on the borders of Manchukuo," said Gen. Jiro Minami, generalissimo ambassador to Manchukuo. "The Red army in that region contains at present at least 200,000 men and more than 600 airplanes."

Gen. Minami said the Soviet should show its sincerity by removing the war machine, and "then it will be possible to talk business."

In Choosing
a Bank or Trust Company
CONSIDER THESE IMPORTANT POINTS

PAST RECORD: Founded in 1889, the American Security has made steady progress over a period of forty-six years.

SIZE: American Security serves over 70,000 people. Its Trust Department handles estates valued at over $118,000,000 — the largest trust business in the District.

MANAGEMENT: The officers and Directors of American Security are leaders in Washington business and commercial circles. This combined experience is one of the important reasons for the bank's steady growth.

CONVENIENCE: American Security's main office and well-equipped branch offices afford convenience of location and make it a most desirable depository.

FACILITIES: Six Departments—Commercial, Trust, Savings, Real Estate, Safe Deposit, and Foreign Exchange—with a combined staff of over 300 trained employees—are at your service at all times.

In choosing a Bank or Trust Company, consider the advantages which this sound, well-managed institution offers you.

By Miss Mary Tucker.

Of all the Indian tribes of the United States those of the far Southwest have been least affected by the irresistible march of civilization. Their lives remain, in many ways, exceedingly primitive. It is the purpose of the annual ceremonial held in Gallup, N. M., to preserve from oblivion all that is most beautiful and impressive in the spiritual and ethical lives of these tribes. Miss Tucker describes the Corn Dance, Snake Dance, Turtle Dance, the Night Chant and the Mountain Chant . . . and other ceremonies old beyond record.

Five Killed in 3 West Virginia Auto Accidents

Five Receive Injuries in Week-end Crashes in Clarksburg Area.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., April 29.—Three additional deaths resulting from automobile accidents today brought the week-end total to five in this vicinity. Luther Brissey, 63, of Fairmont, and his wife, Lula Brissey, 59, were killed yesterday as their car plunged over an embankment on the Salem-Middlebourne highway near Middlebourne.

Brissey was dead when his body was pulled from under the car. Mrs. Brissey was thrown from the car. She was taken to a hospital, where she died three hours later.

Two Harrison County men were killed today and three were injured when their automobile struck a tree near Middlebourne.

The dead were James Swiger, 19, of Lumberport, and Field Muscar, 21, of Robey. Walter Kirk, 21; Wayman Moore, 19, and Ernest Belvin, 20, all of Laura Lee, were injured.

Swiger and Muscar were riding in the rumble seat when Belvin, the driver, lost control of the car. He is being held on a manslaughter charge.

The fifth fatality occurred when a five-ton truck and trailer ran wild down Caddell Mountain near Kingwood, turned over at the foot of an incline, catching fire and cremated T. J. Robeski, 55, produce grower of Plant City, Fla. Clayton Scaltoman, 24, also of Plant City, who was driving the truck, suffered scalp wounds which required 50 stitches to close. William P. Carren, owner of the truck, suffered a broken nose and burns about the face.

2 Bodies Recovered From Shenandoah

Third Victim of Fishing Accident Sought.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Front Royal, Va., April 29.—The bodies of two of three persons drowned in a fishing accident on the Shenandoah River at Riverton yesterday afternoon have been recovered. The body of Mrs. Granville Hockman, 21, was found about two hours after the accident, and that of Lloyd Cook, 11, was recovered this afternoon. Search is being continued for the body of Bradford Cook, 12.

Mrs. Hockman, her husband and 4-year-old daughter and the two Cook brothers were fishing from a boat when it hit a snag and overturned. Mr. Hockman and the child clung to a log in the river and were rescued. All were unable to swim.

Funeral services for Mrs. Hockman will be held tomorrow afternoon at Bennetts Chapel, 4 miles west of Front Royal.

254 Housing Pledges Made in Frederick

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., April 29.—The house-to-house canvass by the Frederick committee of the Federal better housing program to determine the extent of repairs and modernization contemplated this spring abroad showed that of 952 calls made, 254 pledge repairs and modernization at once. The canvass was made under the direction of G. Hunter Bowers, chairman of the committee with the co-operation of building industries.

The committee will continue to supply information about the housing act to individuals interested. A similar canvass was made in Cumberland and canvasses are in progress in Baltimore, Salisbury and Cambridge.

Two Motorists Injured As Car Strikes Tree

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., April 29.—Edward Cropp, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Cropp, and William S. Kirby, Warrenton, were injured when the auto in which they were riding crashed into a tree north of Marshall at 10 p. m. yesterday. Cropp applied the brakes and the front wheels of the car locked.

Cropp received a gash on his forehead and was treated at Middleburg, later going to the Fauquier County Hospital, Warrenton, for treatment and examination.

Kirby escaped with a few scratches. The car was a total wreck.

Frostburg Renews Effort For an Army Airport

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frostburg, Md., April 29.—It was learned today that a move will be made by the mayor and city commissioners to revive interest in the proposed army airport which was under discussion two years ago between CWA officials and the Shuckhart administration.

During the final year of Mayor Shuckhart's tenure of office, Col. W. D. Tipton and Maj. C. A. Mason paid several visits to this section to inspect four sites which had been recommended by the council.

Protestant Ministers Will Convene May 13

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Jacksons Mill, W. Va., April 29.—Ministers of all Protestant denominations in the State will attend the ninth annual State Ministers Conference Commission sessions to be held May 13-17 in the State park here.

Out-of-State members on the program include the Rev. A. J. Walton, director of church extension, general board of education, Nashville, Tenn.; and the Rev. U. P. Hovermale, superintendent of the Virginia conference, of near Martinsburg. Dr. E. J. Woofter, of Salem, is president of the commission.

Eastern Mills To Ask U.S. Aid In Competition

Pacific Coast Underselling Virginia, Suokesman Says After Meeting.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisonburg, Va., April 29.—A delegation from Eastern milling interests will ask Congress to take action to halt alleged destructive competition by the Pacific Coast flour and wheat industry along the Atlantic Seaboard, Ernest H. Strickler, president of the Strickler Milling Co., said here today.

This decision was reached, Mr. Strickler said, at a meeting at Greensboro, N. C., of representatives of the Eastern flour mills last Friday. The competition, Mr. Strickler added, means one of two things—either the Virginia mills must reduce the price they are now paying for wheat for the Southern flour markets or they face a loss of part of the Southern markets.

"Our information is that the Pacific Coast mills, through ownership of rural elevators, are paying 50 cents less for wheat than we are paying in Virginia," Mr. Strickler said. "They also have the advantage of lower freight rates through the Panama Canal, by which they can place wheat and flour along the Atlantic seaboard at a lower transportation cost than the Virginia mills can ship by rail to Southern points. This combination means Pacific Coast mills are able to undersell the Virginia mills in the South.

"A committee will lay these facts before members of Congress to see if something can be done to preserve our markets and hold up the price of Virginia wheat. If nothing can be done it means the Virginia mills, in order to meet this competition, will be forced to offer a lower price for wheat than they are now paying."

Mother Dead an Hour, Healthy Baby Born

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., April 29.—A boy, born an hour after his mother had died, was reported doing well this evening at Memorial Hospital.

The mother, Mrs. C. L. Giles, of Chatham, was brought here this morning dying from toxemia. Doctors strove in vain to save her life. Surgeons then performed an operation to save the life of the infant.

Session Is Called To Name Delegates

Harrison Delegation Meet in Clarksburg Tonight.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., April 29.—Delegations from various cities and towns in Harrison County will attend a meeting here tomorrow night to select five representatives to attend a general meeting here Friday night of delegates from ten counties in the Monongahela Valley in connection with the economic and industrial development of the valley under the Federal Government's huge work relief fund.

Industrial, commercial, educational, civic and other life of the county will be represented at the county meeting. Similar meetings are being held in Marion, Monongahela, Randolph, Tucker, Taylor, Preston, Upshur, Lewis and Barbour Counties to select personnel to attend the general meeting here.

The formation of a permanent organization, likely to be known as the Greater Monongahela Valley Association, is virtually assured. The association will seek to coordinate activities in the upper valley and to cooperate with Federal and State agencies in giving the valley an opportunity to develop through private initiative and with private capital in conjunction with Federal funds.

Coblentz Case In High Court On New Appeal

Second Ruling Designed to Clear Former Banker Is Up Today.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., April 29.—Another hearing in drawnout proceedings arising from failure of the Central Trust Co. of Frederick, which was headed by former State Senator Emory L. Coblentz, is scheduled tomorrow before the Maryland Court of Appeals.

Arguments will be heard on an appeal of the State from a ruling of Judge George A. Solter at Baltimore throwing out a Howard County indictment charging Coblentz with bank law violation. State Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor and his assistant Charles T. Leviness will appear for the State and Leo Weinberg, of Frederick for Coblentz.

Judge Solter dismissed the count on the ground that fundamental issues already had been decided in Coblentz' favor in other courts and the defendant could not be placed in jeopardy a second time on the charge. Former State's Attorney James Clark, of Howard County, special prosecutor appealed Solter's ruling.

The appeal is second in the case to reach the Court of Appeals. First was from an order by Judges Solter and Eli Frank last summer discharging Coblentz. On this appeal, the high court ordered a trial and Judge Solter's recent ruling resulted when the case was returned to Baltimore.

Interests Pound Aid of Railway At Rate Hearing

Shippers Quiz Lawyers on Proposed Rise in Virginia Charges.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 29.—Representatives of the State, business and industrial interests pounded a railroad witness with questions today as the Virginia Corporation Commission held a formal hearing on a petition by carriers for surcharges on intrastate freight coinciding with those granted in interstate movements by the I. C. C. last month.

The sole witness was Joseph Marks, chief commerce counsel for the Southern Railway, who was was called on for information as to details of the I. C. C. decision and its possible effects on Virginia carriers and shippers.

Commissioner William Meade Fletcher wanted to know why the I. C. C. allowed a 1-cent increase on ground limestone while exempting agricultural lime.

Mr. Marks replied he presumed it was because the commission felt it could "put an advance on some products without doing violence to the traffic."

Questioned by W. G. Burnett, of the Lynchburg Chamber of Commerce, as to why specific woods were subjected to an increase while lumber as a whole was excepted, Marks responded that he assumed the discrimination was because the movement of "rare woods" was light.

To an inquiry as to the possibility that carriers would lose volume to motor lines by increased charges, the witness replied he thought the prospect was a matter of speculation.

An array of attorneys for railroads was present. The objectors to the increase were headed by H. E. Ketner, commerce counsel for the Corporation Commission, who opposed the increase before the I. C. C. on the principal ground that the Virginia carriers were sufficiently prosperous not to need a hike in freight rates.

The commission reserved decision.

City Mail Delivery Planned at Warrenton

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., April 29.—Receipts of the local postoffice have reached such point as to entitle Warrenton to a city delivery service, one carrier to make two daily deliveries.

H. R. Nichol, of the Postoffice Department, Washington, has been in Warrenton several days making a survey. He addressed the Rotary Club and the chamber of commerce. Several years ago Warrenton had a delivery service, but it was subsequently abolished.

Diplomatic Set Leases Homes on Blue Ridge

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bluemont, Va., April 29.—A number from the diplomatic set in Washington are selecting summer homes near here on the Blue Ridge. Among those who leased property are the Minister of the Netherlands and Mme. Van Haersma, who have taken the home of Mrs. Charles Smith for the summer legation.

Others include the Ambassador of Italy, Signor Augusto Rosso, who has taken the home of the late Frank Carpenter; the commercial secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. Heywood, who will have the home of Mrs. Rathbone Smith, and the papal delegate, the Right Rev. Amleto Giovanna Cicognani, who has leased Valley Vista, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Drury.

Offer Scholarships.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton Va., April 29.—The United Daughters of the Confederacy are offering prizes for essays and poems on Southern subjects. Scholarships are also open to a number of schools and colleges. The Misses Emily W. Fletcher and Janet Hamilton, of the Black Horse Chapter, Warrenton, have been selected to furnish information.

No Rubber Cows

THE cow has a fixed idea about her part of the milk business.

She is one constant in a world of change.

She converts her feed into milk and there her responsibility ends.

The world wants milk. Well, there it is.

Whether it wants it all in the form she gives it is no worry of hers.

That's the milkman's riddle. He has to take the whole supply to be sure of any of it.

He knows that cows are inelastic. The public is the variable.

One day the consumer decides he wants an extra quart; the next he closes his house and leaves on a two weeks' vacation.

There is bound to be a surplus of fluid milk.

The milkman must know his market. He must also allow for an excess. He must have the resources to process the surplus into salable by-products.

Thus he provides adequate outlets for all the milk of local dairymen.

The cows are free to put their minds on their work.

The milkman sees to it that there is no waste.

Enough Sword Sharpening.

The idealist is often handicapped by a scarcity of specific examples to clinch his arguments. Particularly in the question of armament as against disarmament is this the case. "Let all the world disarm," he pleads, "spike every gun, blunt every sword and the world will soon forget the very meaning of the word 'war.'" But such effusions can be and are summarily stopped by a simple recitation of the world's long saga of battle, dating from flint ax days.

There has been, however, one notable instance where complete disarmament has led to complete security. It is the case of the long frontier between Canada and the United States where no fortifications of any kind are to be found. This mutual confidence is a matter of no little pride to both nations. It would be tragic if it were shattered.

Scrutiny of a bill already approved by the House Military Committee reveals a "camouflaged" provision for an air base near the Canadian border. A brigadier general, assistant chief of staff in charge of war plans, has explained that the precise location of the base is not described for fear of accentuating "anything that would look as though we contemplated passing away from the century-old principle that our Canadian border needs no defense." But it is admitted that the Army has in mind the Great Lakes area. Establishment of such a base would not merely "look as though" this country were abandoning the principle; it would go far to obliterate the principle.

Fear that an enemy might establish air bases in Canada for operations against the industrial sections of northeastern United States is the purported reason for the base. Let the War Department calm itself. It may be safely assumed that concern for the integrity of North America's mutual interests, if nothing else, would prompt Canada to fend off any such unlikely invasion. The Navy Department has stirred up enough international furor by ordering its northern Pacific maneuvers. No further sword-sharpening gestures are needed on the part of the War Department.

Undermining Her Own Cause.

Reports of continued terrorism in Germany cast an equivocal light upon the appeal of the Nazi government for fair play in international affairs. The Reichsfuehrer speaks in lofty tones about peace and equality in the relations between governments, but within the Reich there is neither peace nor equality. Opponents of the Nazi regime are still regarded as legitimate targets for official guns. Behind the discipline of tyranny conditions are in a state of ferment that censorship can not conceal.

A case in point is the slaying of Friedrich E. Husemann, former member of the Reichstag and, until the advent of the Hitler regime, president of the Federation of German Miners. According to the official announcement, the distinguished labor leader was "shot when attempting to escape." That is the Nazi method of explaining unofficial executions for which no warrant can be found. Since Husemann was aware of this practice and since he had promised his wife that he would make no move to place his life in jeopardy during his transfer to a concentration camp, observers do not hesitate to mark down this slaying as another official murder.

There is a disposition on the part of all objective observers to support the German demand for equality in the family of nations. But that inclination is constantly weakened by the excesses of the regime now in control at Berlin. By its outrages against human rights and human life the Nazi government has alienated sympathies that otherwise would prove to be a powerful factor in bringing about adjustment of Germany's national grievances.

Why Filibuster?

The filibuster conducted by a group of Southern Senators against the Wagner-Costigan anti-lynching bill indicates that they are afraid of a "show down." Otherwise, why do they take refuge behind the specious pretense that it is an affront to the South even to consider such legislation? Senator Costigan has effectively answered this ante-bellum fanfare by explaining that the measure which he is sponsoring was introduced following the lynching of two white men in California who had kidnaped and murdered another man.

The bill is designed to suppress lynching regardless of the nature of the crime which gives rise to it, the racial characteristics of the criminal, or the location of the community in which the crime occurred. Only those Southerners who consider that lynching is a peculiar prerogative of the South can possibly regard the Wagner-Costigan bill as a reflection upon that part of the country.

Lynching is a national evil and if a Federal anti-lynching law could insure its eradication, no possible excuse for opposing such a measure would exist. As a matter of fact, however, the proposed measure is very vulnerable to attack on the ground that it would tend to destroy a growing feeling of local responsibility for orderly processes of law enforcement. Moreover, it is believed to provide for an unconstitutional invasion of the police powers reserved to the several States.

Instead of filibustering—a practice which is usually a confession of weakness—the opponents of the Wagner-Costigan bill ought to be prepared to defeat it by the force of superior argument.

Vigilance In Advance.

President Roosevelt and the National Association of Manufacturers agree upon one very pleasant thesis—that the forces of recovery are gathering strength in a way which presages mastery of the depression.

Of course it must be noted that the President regards the success of the New Deal program as the basis for this optimism, while the manufacturers are careful to assert that "the forces of recovery began working through the world" when Mr. Hoover was still in office. It is further apparent that the President predicates further gains on adoption of his legislative program, while the manufacturers want "the adjournment of Congress as soon as possible." But the fact remains that—whether because of or in spite of the Administration's efforts—there is accord on an outlook of good cheer.

The ideal immediate course, assuming that the contention of returning happy days is justified, doubtless lies somewhere between that advocated by Mr. Roosevelt in his radio speech on Sunday night, and that suggested by the manufacturers' association in their strikingly coincident statement. If material recovery is on its way in spite of New Deal impediments the comeback is not likely to be seriously obstructed by thoughtful attention to neglected social issues, which the President rightly deems of great importance. On the other hand it is by no means true, as Mr. Roosevelt is too inclined to argue, that certain highly controversial bills must be hastily made law in order to preserve "confidence in our Democratic processes and institutions."

To the discriminating citizen blanket indictments and blanket indorsements of the pending legislative program are equally ineffective. Each administrative proposal must be critically and impartially examined on its own merits, even though it be ineffectively asserted that they are inseparable parts of a coordinated whole.

Most thoughtful people, for instance, will not agree with the National Association of Manufacturers that enactment of some form of Federal-State unemployment insurance legislation should be again postponed. If properly drafted, the burden which such a measure places upon industry is considerably less than the benefits it ultimately brings to industry. It would today be difficult to find an important English employer who would eliminate that country's unemployment insurance system. The United States has already been too laggard in building elementary safeguards for its workers. And while this deficiency is acutely realized is the psychological time to make it good.

On the other hand it is far-fetched to cite the contemplated subordination of the Federal Reserve system to governmental domination as a case of "enrichment of our national life by a sound and rational ordering of its various elements." That takes far more proving than the President has as yet accorded, and the same must be said of a number of other items caught in the legislative jam.

In one striking passage of his rather nebulous radio message Mr. Roosevelt inadvertently revealed why there is not more business confidence in the efforts of the New Deal to create a more abundant life. This was when he called upon "the eternal vigilance of the American people" to prevent the anticipated instances of "inefficiency, bad management or misuse of funds" in the operation of the work-relief program.

It is of course desirable that John Citizen should be on guard to check graft and politics in the operations of a swollen bureaucracy. But it is much more desirable that the bureaucracy itself, by building an efficient civil service, by erecting walls before it applies keystones, by insuring the creation of national wealth before it arranges its distribution—should do its major share in the cooperation which the President asks.

In other words, the "eternal vigilance" of the American people must be applied even more vigorously to debatable legislative proposals than to the task of trying to make slipshod or socially injurious programs effective when they are thrown into hasty operation.

A Question Of Emphasis.

George V and Queen Mary of England are again before the public eye and this time not merely in the reflected glory of a wedding in the family. For the silver jubilee, which begins next week, has the sole purpose of paying appropriate homage to those who have held the throne during the most difficult quarter-century of Britain's long history. Famous buildings in London, grimy for centuries, are now emerging as fresh and spotless as an English rose. The renovizing was timed for the festivities.

Equally as timely is the latest biography of the Prince of Wales, from the pen of a fellow ranch owner in western Canada. According to schedule, the world's most famous bachelor will one day be King of England. In spite of the fact that he will be 41 in a few weeks, he is still thought of as a perennially youthful playboy. He has probably launched a thousand ships, laid ten thousand corner stones, and shaken several hundred thousand hands. He obtains, because he does not demand, the respect and affection of all his father's subjects and many others besides.

In view of the Prince's undeniable popularity, therefore, it is the more bewildering that his latest biographer should go out of his way to propagate it further. There have always been two schools of biographers—the halo-hangers and the feet-of-clay-fanatics. England has had more than her share of both, perhaps because so many of her historical characters have hidden complex personalities behind the characteristic national reserve.

But it remained for this newest biography of one of England's finest to carry the defensive attitude to a point of absurdity. For, says its author, the Prince has never fallen off a horse. It's the horses that have fallen under him.

Surely, greater love hath no biographer than this.

Costs Of Self-Sufficiency.

Reports from Germany and Italy reveal that drastic restrictions upon imports have led to a most unwelcome advance in domestic prices in both countries. In Germany particular emphasis is being placed upon the obstacles to rearmament created by the necessity of substituting materials of German origin for imported goods. With the aid of heavy subsidies certain indispensable raw materials are, it is said, being produced at several times the cost of the foreign product. The delays in delivery, and the financing problems created, are patent.

In the case of Italy, dissatisfaction arises from an advance in general living costs which has occurred despite the reductions in wages and salaries decreed a year ago as a means of deflating the relatively high level of Italian prices. By thus cutting production costs, Premier Mussolini hoped to stimulate export trade and also expand tourist traffic. Apparently his plans have not succeeded as well as had been expected.

Restrictions upon imports had to be tightened a few months ago, and exchange dealings subjected to even more rigid control. In part at least these restrictions are considered to be the cause of the rise in prices. The result has been growing dissatisfaction on the part of workers whose real earnings have been shrinking, while the prices of foodstuffs and other articles of necessity have been rising.

Thus the cost of a policy of economic self-sufficiency is being borne in upon the Germans and Italians in various unpleasant ways. The situation is not due entirely to the nationalistic policies of the two countries, although the political value of self-sufficiency has undoubtedly been a prime factor in creating protectionist sentiment in both cases. Recent endeavors to bring exports and imports into closer balance—in other words to inaugurate a system of direct barter in trade with other countries—has been partly the result of circumstances that could not be controlled.

In the absence of offsetting foreign loans, or other adequate credits, for instance, Germany was forced to impose drastic restrictions upon her imports. Similarly Italy, confronted by heavy drains upon her gold reserves, decided that the only way to protect the lira against serious depreciation lay in further tightening her control over imports in the hope of improving the trade balance.

Whether voluntary or forced, it is plain that quotas and other excessive restrictions upon imports of needed goods are costly expedients for the nation which sponsors them. Dictatorial powers to regulate prices, cut production costs by decree, and place foreign trade under government control provide a situation which is especially favorable to the inauguration of a highly nationalistic program. The fact that both Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Premier Mussolini are encountering such difficulties emphasizes the inescapable economic costs of trying to emancipate modern trading nations from dependence upon outside markets.

George Bernard Shaw says that the only happy people are those in cemeteries. There are those who regret that Shaw is unhappy.

Strange Disagreement.

From the Kansas City Times.

Senator Glass appears to be living up to the characterization jokingly applied to him by the President: "You unreconstructed rebel." During the progress of the debate on the $4,880,000,000 relief appropriation, he made this remark:

> I do not think any species of tyranny was ever practiced in any civilized nation of the earth comparable to the tyranny which has been practiced upon the people of this country under the NRA act. I voted against the whole wretched act from beginning to end.

It is not news that the Senator does not believe in the NRA; nevertheless this vigorous denunciation of one of the leading features of the Administration's policy, by a distinguished Democrat, in an incidental remark during a debate on another Administration project is a matter of somewhat unusual public interest.

The Glass opinion presents a wide contrast with that of Donald R. Richberg, acting chairman of the National Industrial Recovery Board, who recently said:

> The NRA has the greatest possibilities of helping to develop an industrial civilization that will not enslave, but will set free the masses of the people from the tyrannirs that have oppressed them throughout history.

Now if everybody only could agree on the NRA, including especially the industries and the employes who operate under it, what a near approach to the millennium it really would represent—provided the Supreme Court found it constitutional in all essential particulars.

Not A Sectional Bill.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In The Post of April 24 you carry an article by Elliott Thurston entitled, "Anti-Lynching Fight Due Again."

I would like to make a very strong protest against the biased nature of this article and to state that, in my opinion, The Post is unfair to its constituency in not informing the public concerning the true character and purpose of the Costigan-Wagner bill.

Specifically Mr. Thurston confuses former antilynching bills with the present Costigan-Wagner bill. In the second place, he implies that this present issue in the Senate is a "sham battle." I think such a statement is decidedly unfair.

The Costigan-Wagner bill is not a sectional bill, but is one for the whole country to support. It behooves every right-thinking citizen to stand behind this bill in the interest of law and order and for the safeguarding of the rights of every American citizen.

I trust that you will do all in your power to present such matters as affect racial good will in a just and fair manner.

Blushes At "Efficiency."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It is assumed that Federal workers are always underpaid, overworked, 100 per cent efficient notwithstanding that there are available facts and figures to demonstrate that Federal workers receive the highest per capita pay of any group doing similar work in the Nation, that they work fewer hours, have more days off a year with pay—holidays and sick leave—and that the educational standard is, in proportion to pay, at a minimum.

In view of the actual financial and economic condition of the Nation and the vast sums of money spent for Government and social services, persons who have any sensitiveness blush at the mention of the word "efficiency." It is an obvious fact that after members of Congress had increased their pay from $5,000 to $10,000 a year the Nation was in a more deplorable condition than when the pay was half. It was not a cynical gesture when the President upon assuming office abolished the "Efficiency" bureau.

If a reasonable minimum and maximum pay schedule were adopted, with "equal pay for equal work" and duties graded according to educational qualifications required, each type of work being assigned to a specific grade by the Civil Service Commission, there would be far less promotion of incompetent persons to higher grades with compensation from two to five times more than they are justly entitled to either as pay for services or to meet economic needs. Were a scientific policy of grading work and adjusting rates of pay adopted the cost of civil services to the taxpayers would be reduced by at least one-third or the surplus funds could be used to provide jobs for despairing college graduates unable to find work. Neither the President, members of Congress or the Civil Service commissioners know of the corrupt conditions in Civil Service, or they would devise a policy to correct them.

Victim Of Bureaucracy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I notice in the press that depositers in the Commercial and United States banks, locally, are to receive full payment of their frozen deposits.

It seems to me, in view of that fact, full vindication should be given to President Wade Cooper of these banks, who, from the time they closed, insisted that they were solvent and their assets sufficient to pay all, but that the extraordinary banking condition which arose by reason of wholesale closings throughout the United States necessitated some action.

The New Deal, it is now evident, was rather harsh with President Cooper, himself a life-long Democrat. It, through its comptroller, castigated the colonel in no uncertain terms for raising his voice in protest at the strong-arm methods that separated him from the two banks, and finally led to his indictment.

This letter is inspired by no other reason than to right a wrong that has been done by Government banking czars to a Washington business man of unquestioned character and a man who up until the time his banks were closed was a leader in this community. He was made a victim of official bureaucracy and the wrong done him should be righted.

Naval Officer's Life.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In making this reference to the letter appearing in your column April 23, signed by "One Who Paid for His Education," of Laurel, Md., let me preface my remarks with the statements: I am not a midshipman, I am not in the United States Navy, I do not take issue with any of the ideas concerning militarism and pacifism. But when I read his statement concerning the "idleness" of a naval officer's life, I wonder if, as a result of his education, he is as misinformed on other matters as he is on this. If so, he should ask for a refund of the money he paid for his education.

Few of us who follow the pursuits of peace have any idea of the busy curriculum of the average naval officer. We, who go to work at a specified hour, quit at a specified hour and scamper away at quitting time with no idea of doing one minute of over-time without pay for it, have no conception of the routine of an officer on board a Navy ship during target practice, battle exercises or other forms of fleet maneuvers—and such activities come frequently.

One who has observed the work of one of these officers at such times, when practically the entire day is made up of working hours, when no one thinks or speaks of quitting time until the task which requires their concentrated mental and physical effort is accomplished, will not make the show of ignorance which is exposed by such a remark as the "idleness" of a naval officer. Street Car Courtesy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I can not allow to go unchallenged the statements in two recent letters to The Post. The most recent one, signed "Country Girl," stated that the motormen and conductors on our street cars were rude and discourteous. I happen to know from experience that they are as courteous, if not more so, as any in our country. Many times I have had with me my mother, who is old and in poor health, and they have taken special pains to help her on and off the cars, at one time the conductor even getting entirely off the car and helping her to the curb when the street was slippery.

If, as your correspondent says, the motormen shout at drivers of automobiles which get in front of them on the tracks, I say "Why not?" Are we to be delayed in going to and returning from work each day by these automobiles which get on the tracks and refuse to budge? Must the motorman use sweet, honeyed words to them, or even more strong language? As for the conductor talking to the passengers, I think it is all right, and I like it. It shows that he is friendly in spite of the crowds he has to handle every day, which would certainly sour even the temperament of a saint. Cities, in my opinion, are apt to be too unfriendly.

The other letter to which I refer stated that the taxi men here overcharge and that in Florida such is not the case. When I took a trip to Florida two years ago, I was charged $1, the regular rate, for a short ride of about two or three blocks, in Miami. This happened twice, so that it was not the case of just one taxi. Of course, in this city, we are not supposed to take a taxi and do our shopping, etc., in it, all for the sum of 20 or 25 cents. Even a taxi man has to live.

No "Spring Fever."

Another one of our cherished illusions has been shattered. Almost from time out of memory we have been thinking that "tired" feeling at this time of year was legitimate and we were perfectly justified in calling it a day while wet the noonday sun was shining and hying ourselves off to rest and reflection. "Spring fever" was an accepted ailment, for which there was no preventive.

Now we find we have been disillusioned, just as spring beckons most invitingly to the great out-of-doors. There is no such thing as "spring fever." It is an alibi. There is no substance for it, no support for the theory in medical science. "Spring fever" is merely a miserable makeshift ailment.

We have this on the authority of Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

No doubt, the doctor is right. At any rate, he has taken his stand and, of course, is prepared to defend himself and his findings in so important a matter. But we wish he hadn't spoken. There are illusions which can be more highly cherished than truth. "Spring fever" is one of them.

The Post Impressionist

Horatian Horoscope.

Post Office, Tuesday.

Scene: Street before a cottage in the Apulian-Lucanian village of Venusia. Characters: A Midwife and a Bill Collector; the latter coming home from a hard day's work, the former going home from one.

Bill Collector: What is it?

Midwife: A boy.

Some boy! That son of a bill collector was Quintus Horatius Flaccus. Now all Italy and half of England is solemnly celebrating his bimillenary.

For Horace embodies the Augustan Age, from which, Signor Mussolini insists, Fascism derives directly. And Horace is still read in English universities (thank Heaven!) whither he fled when Lewis Carroll drove him out of the House of Commons vocabulary.

The great Italian Academy has organized a dozen lectures by Italians, 12 by foreign, Latinists "on the times, life and work of Horace," writes the Milan correspondent of the London Times. "Prof. O. H. White, of Belfast University, is to lecture on 'Horace in British Literature.' A performance of the Carmen Saeculare, in song and dance, will be presented on the Capitol." An archiological and literary pilgrimage of famous classicists will re-enact that 350-mile journey from the Capena Gate to Brindisi, which Horace made with Heliodorus: the guides will be scholars, the guidebooks Satire 5 of Book I.

And England? The Horatian Society is arranging a group of celebrations, and the next meeting by the Classical Association may be devoted to "Horace."

The Italian Academy, the English Horatian Society and the Classical Society: just like the start of Bret Harte's learned society.

Too like! For now the Hon. Dr. Terrot Reaveley Glover, classical lecturer of St. John's, Cambridge, and author of an authoritative "Horace," has to go and throw the monkey-wrench of mere mathematics into this classical machinery!

All encyclopedias admit that Horace himself gives the year of his birth (consule Manlio) and that Suetonius supplies the day: December 8, 65 B. C. But neither the Italian Academy nor the British Horatians thought about consulting these sources until Dr. Glover wrote to that Milan correspondent's newspaper.

Says the dear Doctor:

"I am all for celebrating the 2000th anniversary of the birth of Horace, for celebrating every birthday of Horace, for keeping his Odes by one in shelf and heart, reading and re-reading them. Yet this bimillenary—however do you spell it? . . . 65 plus 1935 equals 2,000. It seems right, if arithmetic counts.

"But tell me how many years there were between eighth December 1 B. C. and eighth December 1 A. D. Do you add the ones? Might it not be just as wise to use subtraction? If it is one year, and not two, how many years are there between eighth December 65 B. C. and eighth December, 1935? This is one of the cases where it is safer to do it on four fingers than by arithmetic. I think classical people ought to leave arithmetic alone; they are safer with their fingers.

"How many years you make it between 1 B. C. and 1 A. D.? That is the issue."

The Times editor doesn't accept the bait. But no less a person than the headmaster of the City of London School attempts to foul the line.

Do you remember your troubles as a sub-freshman when you first tackled the Romans' curious calendar—"remember that the day before the Kalends is the third, and that one's quartan ague comes on every three days?" That headmaster remembers it. He argues that, such labors successfully accomplished, any lover of Horace has a right to commemorate, "in high Roman fashion," any 2000th year in which "the life and immortality of Horace have any part."

Well, we—as befits a mathematical Dumkopf, idiotic—cherish a tremendous reverence for mathematics. So this argument seems to beg the vital question.

We have admired Horace ever since that childhood red-letter day when, in our third year of Latin, we first heard an obscure translator "speak out loud and bold"—found, on a top shelf in the family library, three little volumes which printed the original text of the big poet on their even pages, an English version on their odd ones. Although we didn't read Gladstone's attempts to Anglicize Horace, we were amused by Eugene Field's Americanizations and we regret that F. P. A. has abandoned his excursions along the same classical path.

In short, the Post-Impressionist is such an admirer of the singing Augustan—from whatever distance—that the Column would like to know when the 2,000th anniversary of his birth really does occur.

Won't some mathematically-minded Washingtonian classicist (if such there be) answer Dr. Glover's questions for us? How many years are there between 1 B. C. and 1 A. D. anyway?

Social Economic Plan Beset By Complexity

Soviet Concludes That A Specific Social Background Is Necessary For Success.

When the Nation is plotting a public works program entailing the expenditure of $4,880,000,000, it is particularly interesting to consider the planning technique followed in that country which has given it greatest attention. The following excerpts are taken from a more complete discussion in the April issue of "Foreign Affairs," by the Deputy Chairman of the State Planning Commission of the U. S. S. R.

By V. V. Obolensky-Ossinsky.

IT IS natural enough that this should be a time when different methods, systems and schemes of economic planning are being broadly discussed, a time, too, when practical steps are actually being taken to realize some schemes which—in the view of their authors—are forms of partial social economic planning. Capitalistic countries are immersed in an unprecedented crisis. A cure for overproduction, mass unemployment and other accompanying phenomena is eagerly sought.

Planning is the direct antithesis to economic anarchy—anarchy in investment, in production and in distribution. Hence some people in capitalist countries look to planning as a possible cure for all ills, and its modes and technique attract special interest. To these people it seems something like a brand-new system of industrial machinery, a fresh technical invention, which only has to be installed to begin its wonders of salvation. We in the Soviet Union think that the matter is considerably more complicated than that.

In the Soviet Union economic planning is not regarded as a social mechanism by itself, but only as an essential part of a total, which conditionally may be called new economic machinery. Social economic planning, we think, presupposes a specific social background and can not achieve its purpose when that background is lacking.

• • • •

THE planning system in the U. S. S. R. is based on the socialization of all means of production, mass transportation and distribution, with all the concentration of control implicit in such socialization and the existence of proletarian rule. Abolition of classes, of class distinctions, of the social division of labor, is a natural corollary to these principles. Speculation, waste and parasitic consumption are eliminated. On the other hand, since socialized economy is based on the conscious cooperation of the working masses, one of the prerequisites of socialistic economy is a steady rise, not only in their culture and standard of living but in their social perception and social activity. This calls for an immense development of education, of cultural work, of scientific research and its technical applications. This is the essential background of social economic planning as it is in operation in the U. S. S. R.

Each economic plan, considered from the general point of view, is a comparison of what is in existence today and what has to be reached by some specified date or dates. To build up a plan, therefore, the most exact possible summary of the existing situation is a necessary prerequisite. The greater the scope and detail of the plan, the broader has to be its statistical basis. Thus a widely developed and centralized statistical organization is one of the essential formal prerequisites to regular planning, as well as to regular checking up of its fulfillment. This necessity usually is not fully appreciated by foreign observers.

Naturally, then, the development of statistical work kept step with the development of planning in the U. S. S. R., and vice versa. In course of time the statistical and the planning organizations became two corresponding and cooperating bodies, and eventually two parts of the same body. The Central Statistical Administration is now an autonomous section of the State Planning Commission (Gosplan) of the U. S. S. R.

• • • • •

WHEN the preparatory work finished and the materials for the five-year plan are reported by the Gosplan, the government is fully prepared to make its decisions on the plan's leading aims and general limit figures. "Leading aims" are the general ideas and fundamental purposes to be realized in the planned period. "General limit figures" are the same expressed in the form of a few data.

The leading aims of the first five-year plan could be briefly expressed as having been to lay the foundations of a socialistic economy through the industrialization of the country (implying its electrification and especially the development of an industry producing the means of production), to reequip agriculture, to socialize industry and agriculture, and to raise the standards of living of the workers.

The leading aims of the second five-year plan are: development to complete socialist economy through a continuation of the technical reconstruction of industry and agriculture, the full socialization of the latter, the extensive development of light industries and socialized commerce, with a resultant broad elevation of the workers' standard of living, the development of industries in remote sections of the Union, and the reeducation of the people to socialist habits and ideas.

• • • •

THE contents of a plan are not fully visible on the surface. The various tables dealing with capital investments, production, goods turnover, consumption, etc., do not directly reveal the consciously determined coordination which exists between them. Yet that coordination is the "soul" of a plan. A social economic plan is good if production is made proportionate to consumption, if capital investments are made proportionate to the production of capital goods, the supply of labor, the mechanical equipment, etc. An increase in wages in socialist economy has to be balanced with an increase of the productivity of labor. A reduction in costs has to be balanced with a rise in labor productivity. And so on, and so on.

So the system of tables, which is the external and practical expression of a social economic plan, has a backbone hidden under the surface. These are the different "balances" and "synthetic indices," which may remain in the files of the Gosplan, which do not have to be published and do not become law, but without which the plan can not reach real perfection.

Following are the most important "balances" made by the Gosplan while the second pyatiletka was in course of preparation:

1. Balance of consumption and accumulation.
2. Balance of the productive equipment (production and imports of different equipment, and distribution, by branches of economic life).
3. Electro-energetic balance (production of electric power, and distribution by consumers).
4. Fuel balance (output of coal, oil, peat and wood fuel, and distribution, by consumers and regions).
5. Balance of metals.
6. Balance of construction materials.
7. Balance of raw materials for light and food industries.
8. Balance of driving power in agriculture (apportionment of the plans for the development of agriculture to the amount of live and mechanical power).
9. Balance of labor and trained workers (and their apportionment to the needs of different branches of production; of course this is the expected distribution of labor forces, which will be economically stimulated and not prescribed to individual workers).
10. Plan of increase of real wages.
11. The unified financial plan (balance of the incomes and expenses of institutions and organizations involved in the plan.

• • • • •

THESE are the so-called "balances," that is to say, calculations of the income-expense type. But in addition so-called "synthetic indices" are used, which establish a specific coordination between two moving indices; for instance, the correlation of increase in wages and in productivity of labor, the correlation of increase in productivity of labor and the decrease in costs of production and others.

The "Gosplan" is not alone in drawing up its general balances. Single branches of industry also draw up special balances, dealing in detail with single products. All this work has undergone wide development since the days when the first five-year plan was prepared. Balancing has become the general method of shaping the internal structure of plans, of apportioning their component parts.

On the other hand, balances can not become the embodiment of a social economic plan. The exaggerated idea that social economic plans should be transformed into synthetic balances of national economy, into summarizing balance sheets of all economic factors, met with no success. It not only is useless practically, but might have a confusing effect on the formulation of plans and cause numerous misunderstandings.

• • • •

I HOPE that this short review has sufficiently demonstrated to the reader that the introduction of social economic planning is a far more complicated proposition than many people in Europe and the United States imagine. Only what the first pyatiletka was, and still more what the second one is, and what each separate annual Soviet plan is, can really be called a social economic plan. Only plans like these, taken in their proper social background and in connection with machinery for appliance, can become—as in the Soviet Union they really have become—the factors of a speedy technical and economic progress and the guarantee of success.

Study of the experience with social economic planning in the U. S. S. R. may be of importance to foreign observers. But this importance does not relate to a possible utilization of Soviet planning methods in countries having a heterogeneous economic system. The real interest of any such study, I think, consists in getting an idea of the features, development and prospects of an entirely different economic and social system.

Carlisle Bargeron

Greatly Fearing

"I SEE," said Pete, the taxi driver, "that the labor leaders have gone into the greatly fearing business on a big scale. Yes sir, every time you pick up a paper they are greatly fearing about something.

BARGERON.

"I guess they got the idea from the politicians who view with alarm. Anyways they are show working it to a fare-you-well. Only this morning, I told my wife, my wife's a good sort. She understands things just like me. You know, it's pretty good, too, when you gets a woman who understands just like you do. If more men got women who understood just like they do I bet Reno would starve to death. Yes sir, that's what I says.

"Well, anyways, I says to her only this morning, I says, those labor leaders show are funny. They are always greatly fearing. I guess I won't never be a labor leader because I'm not so hot on greatly fearing. Aw, of course, I can greatly fear sometimes but to do it regularly, you know, the way they do, I wouldn't be so good at that.

• • • •

"It reminds me of the way all those guys who want their names in the papers, you know, those reformers, politicians and those fellows who always had something to sell—how they used to use Washington for a sounding board. Mr. Hoover put a quietus on this and I'll say he was right, too. But those labor leaders—now they've gotten onto it.

"They must have some sort of a regular plan of greatly fearing, too. First thing, some little labor leader out in Toledo will say he greatly fears the strike in the Chevrolet Plant will spread to the whole automobile industry. And then right on top of him along will come Bill Green repeating just what he said. Bill will say he greatly fears the strike will spread to the industry, too. It sounds like an echo.

"Some mornings I have seen as many as four of these little greatly fearing stories in the paper, one right on top of the other. First, there will be a little story from Toledo that Frank Dillon, the automobile organizer, greatly fears, and right after that will be other little stories from different places, but all about some fellow that's greatly fearing in those places, too. It reminds me of these here epidemics we are all the time having. A lot of people will die in St. Louis from sleeping sickness and then immediately other towns will pipe up and say some people died there from sleeping sickness, too.

"Maybe these greatly fearing epidemics come from civic pride. But what I think is that there is a chorus of the boys. Dillon says he greatly fears and then comes the echoes until finally the big fellow here in Washington, Bill Green, he says he greatly fears, too. It reminds me of the Indian love call in Sweet Marie or Rose Marie or something. You know, how they echo those 'ooooh, ooooh, ooh er oohs.'

"I guess it's what they mean by the labor structure."

• • • •

"Well sir, now you watch what I'm telling you. They'll be greatly fearing about that Toledo strike again in a few days because they don't seem to be getting nowhere. I like to watch 'em.

"They dash out into the open and cup their hands over their mouths and say 'I greatly fear' then they put their hands to their ears to see if they can hear anything from Washington. Then they do this again when Washington won't pay no attention to them they say again 'I greatly fear' and listen to see if they get any response. Then they call Bill Green on the phone and say 'Bill, you better greatly fear, too.'

"Finally after the big greatly fearer sounds off about three times somebody gets to feelin' sorry for them and goes over to the Labor Department and says 'Why don't you do something for those boys?' They say to Ed McGrady, they say, 'Ed, you oughta do something for the boys. You remember what a hard time you used to have before you got a Government job.' And so Ed says he guesses they are right and he says he will intervene and offer the Government's good services.

"Of course, all the time when those fellows are saying they greatly fear the strike will spread they mean they're terribly worried it won't.

"Well, here's where you get out."

No End of Books

"Why The Weather?" Being A Guide To, Shall We Say, Washington's Most Interesting Feature.

By Theodore Hall.

ABOUT two weeks ago when, in one single vaudevillian spring day, we had a touch of sunshine, then rain, then snow, then hail, then great guns of wind, it might have been a rather better time to issue Charles F. Brooks' volume: "Why the Weather?" (Harcourt Brace, $2.50). Remembering Mark Twain's familiar but timeless plaint: "Everybody talks about the weather, but nobody does anything about it," we'd have relished a book which comes as close to action on the subject as anything could. Now, with the climate giving us a balmy salubrity which would do justice to any man's fond dream of a South Sea paradise, I've a don't-touch-it, you-might-spoil-it feeling. So keep your copy—full of thunderstorms, tornadoes and thoroughly nasty gales—in the house where it won't suggest anything to the breezes outside.

This is the more necessary because of the rank suggestibility of Washington weather. Mr. Brooks tells of an observer who took just ten days in one January here, and showed how, by our climatic changes, it might be said that the District of Columbia traveled up and down the country. Thus—

January 17—At home, i. e. weather normal for Washington at that season.

January 18—Arrived Eastport, Me.

January 19—Trip to New Brunswick and return.

January 20—Arrived in Washington.

January 21—Arrived Wilmington, N. C.

January 22—Arrived St. Augustine, Fla.

January 23—Passing north through Savannah, Ga.

January 24—Passing north through Richmond, Va.

January 25—Arrived southwest Maine.

January 26 and 27—Stop-over in Maine.

January 28—Passing through Washington en route South again."

But commenting on our climatic variability is just coals to Newcastle in this town.

• • • •

MR. BROOKS, director of the Blue Hill Meteorological Observatory, just outside of Boston, used to write a column for the papers on the weather. In 1925 he gathered the material into the first edition of "Why the Weather?" Now, revised, enlarged and brought up to date, the book is an informal but completely authoritative chat on every aspect of weather study which might interest the layman. As first reader, I can testify it does.

Here, divided by seasons, are notes the year round—the why and how of clouds (which reminds me that my vote for one of the most beautiful words in English goes to the cloud known as "cirro-cumulus;" you remember the Chinese who, with a like question, gave his choice to "cellar-door")—tall but true stories of wind (on April 11, 1934, there was a blithe little zephyr going over the top of Mount Washington at the average rate, for the day, of 129 miles an hour, and with top speed of 231 miles an hour; to say it was the highest wind velocity on record is not nearly so impressive as to note that, as the pressure of wind increases with the square of its velocity, these gusts over Mount Washington were just 329 times as strong as a ten-mile breeze)—the same of rain (on the island of Bahia Felix, Strait of Magellan, it rains at least 343 days a year, and usually sprinkles on the rest, and still that doesn't equal a place in Hawaii where one year brought down 476 inches)—and the same of duststorms (our Old Smoky of last May was a dustcloud 900 by 1,500 miles, and from 2 to 4 miles high, which darkened the East Coast, as we know, and even fell on ships in the western Atlantic)—and of hailstorms (they came down as big as baseballs in Annapolis in June, 1915; the Middle West sees them as big as grapefruit or flat squashes; at Cheyenne, Wyo., the hailingest town in the country, every greenhouse has to have its wire screen).

I'VE been stressing the spectacular, but Mr. Brooks spends more time in explaining, simply and reasonably and readably, why we have the weather we do, and how we can tell it coming. He wants us, in short, to take up our only possible activity with the critter—to keep our eyes open, to look up intelligently at the sky even in city street where everybody else will stop, do likewise, and probably be a bit put out at seeing nothing but a few clouds.

There was once a young man in Paris (see D. C. Peattie's "Almanac for Moderns" page 163) who was so poor that his garret room held not even a window, just a skylight. Having no overcoat, he was kept in by bad weather, could do nothing but lie on his back and look at the sky. And one day, observing and studying, he saw a new cloud, the mammilo-cumulus, so rare that it has been seen only a few times since. "Cut off from every other line of scientific investigation," writes Mr. Peattie, "this genius still found something new that a million other people in Paris could have seen that day if they had the eyes of Jean-Baptiste-Pierre-Antoine de Monet de Lamarck"—co-father with Darwin of the study of evolution.

Perhaps our keeping a weather-eye open will produce nothing as distinguished. But with "Why the Weather?" as a guide, we can learn to enjoy, as material, the most outlandish day that Washington can offer. And at least we can be more intelligent than the wrathful householder in Punch, whose barometer had stayed high during a steady rain, and who flung the instrument down the front stoop with the ejaculation: "There! See for yourself!"

Lynchburg Residence Is Damaged by Fire

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lynchburg, Va., April 29.—The old Max Guggenheimer residence on Grace street, which was given some years ago by Mrs. Guggenheimer to the city for a community house, was damaged late Saturday by fire. The loss was about $3,000.

A class of children was taking a tap dancing lesson on the lower floor when the fire was discovered but they left the building without disorder.

First Faust

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps

SOME time ago I commented in this column on the enormous popularity of Gounod's opera "Faust," the 2,000th performance of which was given in Paris last December.

The greatest prima donna I ever heard in the role of Marguerite was Emma Eames, and she now writes me from Paris:

"Gounod told me that although 'Faust' quickly found favor in the ears and eyes of the public, the first performance was a 'frost'; and people avoided him in order not to be obliged to make insincere felicitations. They reproached the opera with being lacking in melody! The only parts that were applauded with enthusiasm were the Old Men's Chorus and the Soldiers' Chorus. He got much amusement himself out of these facts and also an idea of the stupidity of the public, and, I will add, its snobbery; and said to me, 'Never sing to please the public.' It was a sure way to degenerate. This was seed falling on fertile ground and I lapped it up.' He told me always to be true to my inner convictions; to which I added, 'Be sure to be convinced before going ahead with the execution.'"

Charles Francois Gounod was born in Paris, June 17, 1818, and died at St. Cloud, October 18, 1893.

Knowing as we do today that the long and universal popularity of "Faust" is based on its almost continuous succession of melodies, it seems the height of stupidity that at the first performance the public thought it was lacking in that very quality. But such first impressions are common enough, and merely show how difficult it is to appraise accurately an entire new work of art.

Rappahannock Spelling Match Set for Tonight

Charles County Entrants to Convene in La Plata School Tomorrow.

One county in Virginia and one in Maryland will have their matches in the national spelling bee today and tomorrow. In these contests, school winners will compete for prizes offered by The Washington Post, and the two best spellers in each of these contests will advance to the area finals in Washington May 18.

Eighteen representatives of Rappahannock County schools will meet in Washington High School at 7:30 o'clock tonight for their match. Milton C. Hollingsworth will be chairman; Mayor W. E. Compton, of Woodville, will call the words, and Mrs. Hill O'Bannon, Mrs. W. F. Moffett and the Rev. Harris Chelf will be judges.

Tomorrow at 8 o'clock, Charles County spellers will convene in La Plata High School in a similar match. Out of 12 public and parochial schools eligible in this county, 11 have enrolled in the contest, indicating county-wide interest in the match. F. B. Gwynn, superintendent of schools, will preside. Miss Jane R. Bowie, supervisor of elementary schools, will pronounce the words, and R. H. Lee Reich, of La Plata, and the Rev. Walter Smith, of Waldorf, will be judges.

Six Schools Name Spellers.

Six schools yesterday announced representatives for their county matches:

Annandale, Fairfax County, Gladys Williams and Josephine Lewis; Barbara Minor, alternate; Mrs. Josephine N. Howdershell, principal.

Greenwood High School, Albemarle County, Helen Bailes and James Garwood; R. Claude Graham, principal.

Glymont, Charles County, Ruth Moody and William Dyer; Mrs. Genevieve M. Gardiner.

Waldorf Elementary, Charles County, Odette Matthews and Kathryn Bean; Miss N. Eva Turner.

Linden Graded, Warren County, Edward Heflin and Irene Nichols; Miss Virginia McMullen.

Carter, Loudoun County, Edith L. Martyn and Grace Warren; Mrs. Mary E. Hemsley.

Calvert Match May 10.

The Calvert County match will be held in Prince Frederick School May 10. This arrangement has been made through the cooperation of Miss E. Virginia Dorsey, teacher in charge of the match in Prince Frederick School. Large schools in this county will be allowed to send their four best spellers, and small ones two. Officials for the match will be announced later.

All county matches will be concluded by May 11, and the winners will take part in the area finals.

Travel Lecture Tonight on Indians

Miss Tucker to Give Last in Post Series.

Miss Mary Tucker, authority on the traditions and customs of the Indians of southwestern America, today will deliver the last lecture in the 1934-35 series of The Washington Post Travel Lectures at the Masonic Auditorium, Thirteenth street and New York avenue. The lecture begins at 8:15 p. m.

Miss Tucker's lecture will be illustrated with colored slides, and she will describe in detail the annual Indian ceremonials which for many years have attracted tourists to New Mexico.

Tickets for this lecture may be obtained from The Post, or at the box office tonight.

G. O. P. Hopes Revived By New Deal Errors

Obstacles Thrown In Path Of Business Make Ideal Political Issue For 1936.

By Elliott Thurston.

REPUBLICANS whose gaze is fixed upon 1936, which means all practicing Republicans, are unquestionably more cheerful right now than they have been at any time since the last two elections. Any change in their attitude was bound to be in the direction of optimism. But where a few months ago they were sunk in hopelessness they are now saying that life may begin before '40.

The seasons for the first faint signs of hopefulness are plain enough. Out of his abundant confidence Mr. Farley would no doubt say that the Republicans are grasping at straws. But in politics straws are important. They are feddes for a famished elephant. The straws in the political winds are all blowing away from the New Deal just now. That is the judgment of all save partisan observers. The real question in the minds of the Republican hopefuls is whether business recovery will go ahead to the point where by the middle of next year neither a right-wing Republican nor a left-wing Huey Long can lure the electorate to make another change.

• • • •

MR. ROOSEVELT'S latest fireside talk hit no bull's-eyes and rang no bells. That is the consensus even among his best friends on Capitol Hill. The Republican view is that the President did not help his cause by this radio speech. They saw in the speech not one word of encouragement to business. On the contrary his ardent advocacy of more reforms, especially his support of the holding company bill, was taken as more harmful than helpful from the standpoint of business confidence. And as has been said in this space frequently, the more the New Deal tramples upon private enterprise, the more Republican hopes revive.

Beyond the content of the radio speech, however, Republican veterans perceive more plainly than ever the lack of reasoned policy and fixed purpose. They think they detect a marked weakening of leadership. They see it reflected particularly in the confusions in Congress, where genuine enthusiasm for the New Deal is almost nonexistent. This in turn is a reflection of sentiment "back home." They argue, off the record, of course, that the grip which the New Deal retains is largely because of the absence of any alternative figure or policy.

• • • •

ONE highly astute Republican leader—oh, yes, there is one—summed it up this way yesterday: "The New Deal is making our program for us. Our best strategy is to remain quiet and let the New Deal dig its own grave. They can't say that we are obstructing them. They've had a free hand. The business men of the country are pretty well convinced that the New Deal is blocking recovery.

"The AAA is the most glaring failure in modern political history. Look at the cotton industry! But instead of pulling out, the New Deal is getting in deeper and deeper. The AAA amendments, now pending, Chester Davis' talk about cutting off automobile exports, the whole business makes a perfect political target.

"The President's speech shows that he is still thinking more about reforming than about recovery. Business may go ahead in spite of everything, but the chances are that the New Deal will go on clubbing recovery over the head. Every true American would like to see prosperity come back, but if the New Deal keeps on blocking the way the issue is made for us. It wouldn't take much to give recovery the final shove to set it going. But for some reason—unfortunate for the country but fortunate for us politically—the New Deal seems to be determined to miss its opportunity."

THIS same veteran of the once more-or-less Grand Old Party argues that the New Deal is showing poor political management these days. He cited first, of course, the shining issue of Farleyism. But he mentioned further two recent examples of bad strategy in the Senate. One concerns the anti-lynching bill. By ardently backing it, while the Democratic leadership and the Solid South are again arrayed in a die-hard filibuster against it, the Republicans feel that they are extracting valuable political capital from an old issue which was handed to them this time by Democratic Senators Wagner and Costigan.

Secondly, they cite the bonus. Their idea is to vote against the Harrison compromise because it pleases nobody. They feel that if the President had stood his ground on this of all issues, he not only could have won but that he would have had the country, especially business, overwhelmingly with him. Instead, they argue, he muffed a magnificent opportunity to demonstrate leadership, courage and firmness of purpose.

• • • •

THESE are but straws, possibly, but they seem more than passingly significant to Republicans as symptoms and portents. If the New Deal is not astute enough to achieve its only possible vindication by business recovery, if it is determined to miss its opportunity, if it is blind enough, after its undoubted gains, to be thrown for a loss by the reformers and terrorists then the outlook for the opposition is far from bleak.

"I do not know who is advising the President," another veteran Republican remarked yesterday, "but from our standpoint, politically, the advice is just about perfect."

Rules for a German Press.

"Germany, through its press dictator, has begun a drive to bring all newspapers under more direct Nazi control."—News item.]

1. Always get both sides of a story, and be sure both sides are Nazi sides.

2. Be sure you are right; then consult the censor.

3. Never make a statement you can not prove, especially if it concerns people strong enough to demand the proof.

4. Always get the main facts in the first paragraph; by the time the printer gets to the second one the government may close the paper.

5. Give the news as briefly as possible so that the man who runs may read. And remember that in Germany everybody is running.

• • • •

6. Do not voice a personal opinion in a news story unless you are both a writer and a Nazi official.

7. Never accept rumors. Verify your facts and then call the press dictator and see if you are right.

8. Tell your story simply and quickly; the government will throw it out the same way.

9. Avoid long words. Der Fuehrer can't waste all his time looking through the dictionary to see what you meant.

10. Do not color your stories, but if you must do so, use only German dyes.

• • • •

11. Never tell a story in the first person; there is only one first person in Germany.

12. Correct spelling of names is most important. And anything may happen if you put two t's in Hitler.

13. Never allow news columns to be used for advertising other than national.

14. Avoid making ambiguous statements; the Nazi chiefs have trouble enough trying to dope out what is a dirty crack and what is not.

15. Never let a picture of a Nazi chief get into the paper upside down.

• • • •

16. Always refer to Der Fuehrer by his full name, never as Mr. A. Hitler, "Schnapps" or "Hittie."

17. The following names are barred from the press at all times: Perlmutter, Mefoosky, Rabinowitz, Kokolovitch, Rosenbaum, Phootlebaum, Einstein, Ludwig, Potash and Goldberg.

18. Any article criticizing the government or any government official will mean immediate execution. We wanna be fair, particularly to the government officials.

19. Never take a picture of a military parade off the front page to make way for a close-up of a beautiful plaintiff in a divorce suit.

20. Be sure you are Reich, then go ahead.

The Nuisance.

The Past is dead,
So let it be
A worn and tattered Memory.

What's done is done—
Let's not regret;
'Tis better, far,
That we forget.

The Past is queer;
It will not stay
Buried in the Yesterday.

Instead, it sneaks up,
Softly sly,
And pokes its finger
In your eye!

Kelly, Former House Member, Dead of Wound

Pennsylvanian Succumbs to Injury Received as He Cleaned Gun.

By the Associated Press.

Punxsutawney, Pa., April 29.—Former Representative Clyde Kelly, 51, Republican, who served 20 years in Congress and whose work on the Postoffice Committee won him the title of "Father of the Airmail," died today from a bullet wound received while he was cleaning a small rifle.

The veteran legislator lapsed into unconsciousness Sunday night and grew steadily weaker.

Kelly was injured the evening of April 22 after he returned from a frog-hunting trip at his summer home a few miles from Punxsutawney. Mrs. Kelly and their four daughters were standing by while he was cleaning the rifle and witnessed the shooting.

A native of Bloomfield, Ohio, Kelly came to the Pittsburgh district in 1901 and, from 1914 to the end of 1934, served as Representative of the thirty-first Pennsylvania District. He was defeated at the last election by Representative James L. Quinn, Democrat. Both Kelly and Quinn published newspapers at Braddock, Pa.

In 1910 Kelly was first elected to Congress but in 1912, as a supporter of Theodore Roosevelt's Progressive Party, he was defeated. He was elected again, however, in 1914 and did not suffer defeat again until last year.

For a number of years he was chairman of the House Postoffice Committee and sponsored numerous measures for benefit of postal workers.

Alfred du Pont, 70, Succumbs At His Estate

Attack Fatal to Member of Munitions Family; Vast Fortune Left.

By the Associated Press.

Jacksonville, Fla., April 29.—A heart attack was fatal today to Alfred Irenee du Pont, 70, reputedly the wealthiest year-around Florida resident.

While no outsider knows the amount of his vast estate, it is believed his years of activity in the gigantic E. I. du Pont de Nemours Co. of Delaware, and subsequent connection with other enterprises netted him more than $100,000,000.

Ill for several weeks from influenza, du Pont was stricken with a heart attack Thursday. His rally was so pronounced physicians told the family last night he was out of danger. But another attack several hours later proved too severe.

Industrialist, politician, chemist, engineer and philanthropist, his greatest talents probably lay in organization. In the ten-year period following 1902 he molded the scattered du Pont interests, with assets of about $15,000,000, into the vast du Pont de Nemours organization, valued at $82,000,000.

Developed Powder.

But his contribution to the munitions and chemical manufacturing concern did not stop with organization. He is credited with the development of prismatic powder, fired in this country's largest-caliber cannon, and designed the machinery used in producing black powder.

He acquired four radium mines at Central City, Colo., and spent great sums in the development of a testing and producing mill from which came much of the radium used in cancer experiments.

As he assumed control of the du Pont company in 1902, the son of Eleuthere Irenee du Pont took a hand in Delaware politics.

He became a leading figure in the Republican Party in Delaware for a while, but later let his grip slip. With a sudden thrust he regained control in 1916, the year he severed direct relations with the de Nemours company.

Friction With Family.

Du Pont's political moves were said to have been a source of friction between him and other members of the manufacturing family. Even after his withdrawal from active participation in the organization, however, he retained interests in its underlying concerns.

About 1926 he became interested in Florida's development and moved to this State, constructing a magnificent estate, Epping Forest, on the St. Johns River near here. Since then he has become one of the State's largest landowners.

An advocate of old-age pensions, Du Pont tried unsuccessfully in 1929, after he moved to Florida, to push a pension measure through the Delaware Legislature. It was said he spent hundreds of thousands in pensions to the indigent aged of that State before the State took over the task in 1931.

His Florida activities brought a resolution deploring his death into the Florida House of Representatives today. It was adopted and sent to the Senate for concurrence.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at the Du Pont estate. His wife, Du Pont's third, survives. He also leaves a son, Alfred Victor, of Wilmington, Del., and five daughters, Mrs. Herman Rouff, of Germany; Mrs. Reginald S. Huidekoper, of Washington; Mrs. Elbert Dent, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Victor Llewellyn, of England, and Miss Denise Du Pont.

Col. Reynolds Named Army's Chief Surgeon

Picked by Roosevelt to Post Now Held by Gen. Patterson.

Col. Charles H. Reynolds, Medical Corps of the Army, was named yesterday by President Roosevelt to be surgeon general. He will be promoted to the rank of major general. At present Col. Reynolds is on duty at Governors Island, N. Y.

Col. Reynolds succeeds Maj. Gen. Robert U. Patterson, whose tour of duty as surgeon general expires June 1. Col. M. A. W. Shockley, Medical Corps, will be assistant to the surgeon general with the rank of brigadier general. He is now commanding Letterman General Hospital, San Francisco, Calif.

At the same time the President, acting on the recommendation of the Secretary of War, named four colonels to become brigadier generals. The officers selected were Col. Arthur S. Conklin, Coast Artillery Corps; Col. Charles F. Humphrey, jr., Infantry; Col. Frank W. Rowell, Infantry, and Col. Clement A. Trott, Infantry.

Col. Conklin is the present chief of staff at Third Corps Area headquarters in Baltimore. Col. Humphrey has been on duty at Fort McDowell, Calif. Col. Rowell is professor of military science and tactics at the University of Vermont at Burlington, Vt. Col. Trott is commanding officer of the Twentieth Infantry, Fort Francis E. Warren, Wyo.

The approaching retirement of Brig. Gens. Abraham G. Lott, Pegram Whitworth, George Vidmer and Otho B. Rosenbaum will create the vacancies for the new promotions.

In addition, Brig. Gen. Albert E. Truby, present commanding officer of the Walter Reed Medical Center, will retire from active duty on July 31. His retirement will create a vacancy for Col. M. A. W. Shockley, who in all proability will be assigned to command the Medical Center here. The names of the new generals have gone to the Senate for confirmation. No opposition is expected.

Bayh Is Slated For Health Job In D. C. Schools

Terre Haute Applicant to Be Recommended by Ballou Today.

Birch E. Bayh, director of physical education and health in the public schools of Terre Haute, Ind., is expected to be choice of the Board of Education when it meets tomorrow to select a man for the recently created position of director of the Department of Health and Physical Education in Washington public schools.

It is understood Bayh is considered the outstanding candidate of more than 30 who applied. Although neither board members nor Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, definitely would commit themselves, it is believed Bayh will receive Dr. Ballou's recommendation tomorrow.

Bayh, 40 years old, was in Washington last week and was interviewed by members of the board. They were impressed by his record of 15 years in physical education. Before taking his present position he was professor of physical education and later director of athletics at Indiana State Teachers College.

With selection of the man for the post, a definite program of physical education will be worked out by Dr. Ballou, his staff of principals and a committee of board members headed by Henry I. Quinn. It is believed this will include much more extended health work and intramural athletics than at present.

40 MILLION VOTES

for sensible drinking

BETWEEN May 23, 1934, and April 29, 1935, Seagram's shipped 40 million bottles of Crown Whiskey from its distillery in Lawrenceburg, Indiana.

This fact has an unusual significance.

It illustrates more than a great industrial success. More than an astonishing popularity for Crown Whiskies.

Actually it illustrates a surprising trend to sensible drinking on the part of the American people.

Perhaps this seems like a contradiction.

The fact is, however, that the success of Crown Whiskies is due only partly to Seagram's skill in distilling and blending. It is due in even greater part to a moderate public attitude toward liquor.

In May, 1934, when Crown Whiskies were introduced, most experts believed that the average American wanted "just whiskey" at the lowest possible price.

Crown Whiskies did not fill this classification.

Crown Whiskies were fine mellow blends—like the truly fine blends before Prohibition. They were moderately priced. But they were not cheap whiskies.

Quite frankly, Crown Whiskies were designed for people who were willing to pay a little more—for people who really enjoy the bouquet, warmth and flavor of fine whiskies.

We could not and did not foresee that Crown Whiskies, within 60 days, would become the largest selling American whiskies at any price.

That, however, is exactly what happened. And there is only one explanation.

It is simply that many Americans do enjoy fine whiskey. That is the secret of Crown success. For this success we express our appreciation.

Art Director Honor Guest Of Dr. Luther

Dr. Gustav Pauli Gives Talk for At Home of German Envoy.

Wife of the Secretary of State Among Those Attending Fete.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The at-home of the German Ambassador, Dr. Hans Luther, yesterday served to present Dr. Gustav Pauli, former director of the Hamburg Art Gallery, who gave an illustrated lecture on "Romanticism." A distinguished-looking man with white hair and closely clipped mustache, Dr. Pauli talked of the spirit of romanticism in painting and illustrated his talk with slides of German artists of the early nineteenth century and their works.

The ballroom of the embassy, darkened for the projection of the slides, high-ceilinged and panelled with pale rose damask, proved a delightful respite from the closeness of the late afternoon. There were great bowls of calla lilies, deep red roses and pink gladioli, and the ambassador smilingly presented the guests to his visitor.

After the lecture the guests adjourned to one of the smaller drawing rooms, where they found fruit punch, tea and a variety of pastries and sandwiches.

Among those glimpsed were Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, wearing a costume of navy blue with a large straw hat to match and a corsage of crisp white flowers. Chatting with her was Mme. Van Haersma de With, wife of the Minister of the Netherlands, in black and white print with a small rolled brim hat of shiny black straw. Miss Elizabeth Roberts, daughter of Justice and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, wore a jacket suit of black crepe printed with bright blue and white. Her hat was of natural colored straw banded with printed crepe.

Others seen were Mme. Saito, wife of the Japanese Ambassador, and Mme. Fujii, wife of the Counselor of the Embassy; the Minister of Finland and Mme. Jarnefelt, the Minister of Denmark, Mr. Otto Wadsted; the Counselor of the Rumanian Legation and Mme. Florescu, the latter in a suit of deep yellow crepe trimmed with narrow bands of mink, and a large brown hat. The Florescus will move from their home on Woodley road June 1 to the house of Gen. James F. McKinley at 2818 Thirty-sixth street.

Also glimpsed were the Minister of Switzerland, Mr. Marc Peter; Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, Mrs. Michael MacWhite, wife of the Minister of the Irish Free State, and Baroness Beck-Friis, wife of the Counselor of the Swedish Legation, with her daughter, Miss Christine Beck-Friis, the latter in a frock of pale blue with a soft Panama hat.

Members of the embassy staff assisted the Ambassador, and Frau Leitner, wife of the Counselor, wore a chiffon suit of brown and white with a brown hat. Mme. Lohmann, wife of the second secretary, was in navy blue trimmed with touches of a lighter shade, with a felt hat to match the trimmings, and Frau Struve, wife of the third secretary, was in a navy blue and white print, with a large straw colored hat banded with flat, blue feathers.

Sanders Gives Luncheon Party At Crestleigh

Guest List Numbers 21 at Informal Affair in Nearby Maryland.

Mr. Evarett Sanders entertained at a luncheon party Sunday at his home, Crestleigh, in nearby Maryland. The invitations, which were informal notes, invited the guests to see the new colt "Star," the pink-eyed white rabbit, and the Whitlock twins, Sandra and Marilyn, all new on the farm since last spring. The twins are the small daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Whitlock, who make their home at Crestleigh. Mr. Whitlock is a partner of Mr. Sanders.

Luncheon was served from a buffet in the dining rooms, but the day was so glorious and the countryside so attractive that most of the guests took their plates into the garden which overlooks rolling fields and apple orchards in full bloom. After luncheon the men held a horseshoe-pitching contest, which Mr. Sanders won.

Among the guests were Judge and Mrs. Oscar Bland, and their daughter, Miss Helen Bland; Justice and Mrs. O. R. Luhring, Justice and Mrs. Peyton Gordon, the Federal Communications Commissioner and Mrs. Thad H. Brown, former Representative and Mrs. Maurice Thatcher, Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Francis DeL. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas R. Shipp and the latter's sister, Mrs. Reinald Werrenrath, and the Interstate Commerce Commissioner, Col. Charles Hoyt March.

Mrs. Roosevelt will attend the luncheon while the members of the Seventy-Third Club, composed of wives of members of the Seventy-Third Congress, will give in her honor at the Washington Hotel tomorrw, and in the afternoon will attend the benefit opening of the gardens of Dumbarton Oaks, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, who have consented to open the gardens for the benefit of the Home for Incurables.

Later in the afternoon, Mrs. Roosevelt will entertain at a garden party in the White House gardens.

Historic 'Oaks' Invites Public

Former Home of Calhoun Will Open Tomorrow for Benefit Fund.

Many persons interested in the houses which are related to the early days of this country will visit the gardens of historic Oaks, the home of the former Ambassador to Argentina and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss. The place will be open tomorrow for the benefit of the Home for the Incurables.

This estate was the home of John C. Calhoun and in recent years before Mr. and Mrs. Bliss purchased it and restored and remodeled it, it was occupied by the late Mrs. Henry Blount, whose name is written high in the social and civic history of the Capital.

The gardens are abloom with tulips and other early flowers and the boxwood is unequaled in this part of the country.

A special committee headed by Mrs. James S. Taylor is in charge of the event. Mrs. Taylor will be assisted by Miss Moira Archbold, Miss Elizabeth Nolting, Miss Norton, Mrs. Daniel Patridge, Miss Elizabeth Roberts, Mrs. Edgar Snow, Mrs. Laurence M. G. Smith, Miss Dorothy Sollers, Mrs. Thomas Swann and Miss Rosalind Wright.

Mrs. Roosevelt Guest of Honor At Breakfast

240 Attend Congressional Club's Spring Fete at Mayflower.

The annaul breakfast of the Congressionad Club for Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, one of the outstanding events of the spring season, took place yesterday at noon at the Mayflower, with more than 240 members and guests present.

Mrs. William M. Whittington, wife of Representative Whittington, of Missouri, who is president of the club, which is composed of wives and daughters of members of Congress, presided. She made an address of welcome to Mrs. Roosevelt and other distinguished guests. Those at the speaker's table included Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, wife of the Chief Justice, and Mrs. Joseph W. Byrns, wife of the Speaker of the House.

Doris Doe Sings Arias.

The Marine Band played during the luncheon and at its conclusion, when Mrs. Roosevelt had greeted the guests, Miss Doris Doe, contralto of the Metropolitan Opera Co., gave a program which included opera arias.

Mrs. Roosevelt wore a summery frock of soft blue tucked chiffon trimmed with ruschings of the same material on the sleeves and at the neckline. Her hat was a small toque of cornflowers with a tiny blue nose veil, and she wore a corsage of orchids presented by the club.

Each table, at which eight guests were seated, was decorated with bowls of "Mrs. Roosevelt roses" and other spring flowers. Cream-colored souvenir booklets were presented to each guest, bearing the seal of the club in blue, red and gold, and a new portrait of the First Lady. The booklets contained the program given by the Marine band, under the direction of Capt. Taylor Branson, that of Miss Doe, the luncheon menu, and a picture of the Congressional Club on New Hampshire avenue, which has been the scene of so many beautiful parties given in honor of high ranking officials and their wives.

Others at Speakers' Table.

Also at the speakers' table were Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. Henry A. Morgenthau, jr., Mrs. George H. Dern, Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Mrs. Daniel C. Roper and Miss Frances Perkins.

Also the wives of the following Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, Mrs. George Sutherland, Mrs. Pierce Butler, Mrs. Harlan F. Stone and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, as well as Mrs. William Howard Taft; and the officers of the club, Mrs. Edward P. Costigan, Mrs. Claude A. Fuller, Mrs. Hampton P. Fulmer, Mrs. William W. Arnold and Mrs. Harry C. Ransley, vice presidents; Mrs. Arthur H. Greenwood, recording secretary; Mrs. Brent Spence, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Edward R. Burke, treasurer. All of the former presidents of the club who are in Washington were present, together with other distinguished guests.

Mme. Steen Is Guest At Two Functions

Prochniks and Galbraiths Hosts to Visitor.

Mme. Steen, wife of the Norwegian Consul General in Montreal, Canada, who is the guest of Capt. and Mrs. William W. Galbraith here, was the guest of honor at a small tea yesterday afternoon given by the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik in the legation.

Capt. and Mrs. Galbraith entertained at dinner last night in honor of Mme. Steen in their residence on Le Roy place and they will entertain at a cocktail party tomorrow afternoon in honor of their guest.

Senor Ruiz Here For Conferences With Diplomats

Latin-American Author and Journalist Is at the Shoreham.

Senor A. Ramon Ruiz, Latin-American author and journalist, is in Washington to confer with members of the diplomatic corps and other members of the Latin-American colony in establishing the "Society of Bolivarian Action" here.

Mr. Ruiz, who is head of the Consolidated Information Service of New York and general director of the International League of Bolivarian Action, has returned from a tour through the Latin-American countries, during which he founded various units of the Bolivarian society. He is stopping at the Shoreham.

The purpose of the organization is to make better known the history of the South American liberator and statesman, Simon Bolivar, and the doctrines which he advocated.

Among those interested in the foundation of the society, according to Mr. Ruiz, are the Minister of Venezuela, Dr. Pedro Manuel Arcaya; the Minister of Bolivia, Dr. Enrique Finot; the Minister of Panama, Dr. Ricardo J. Alfaro; the Minister of Ecuador, Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro; the Sub-Director of the Pan-American Union, Dr. Ed. Jar of Cream Banishes All Nail Troubles

Regular Use of Product Will Make Cuticle Soft and Pliable.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

ARE YOUR HAVING trouble with your fingernails? Are they brittle, and breaking and splitting around the tip end? Is your cuticle dry and scaly? Are hangnails proving no end of bother? If you answer "yes," then here's what to do: Take time off from your usual shopping routine and stop by a certain downtown store. Go first of all to the toilet goods department and ask to see a certain lucious looking peach colored nail cream, which comes in an attractive black jar. It's one of the finest preparations you can buy to keep those nails in A1 condition! It's just exactly what you need to supply the normal oils to the nails and prevent them from becoming dry. If you use it regularly, you'll be free from hangnails and your cuticle will become soft and pliable. After one week you'll see such a decided improvement you'll keep that attractive little jar with its effective contents on your dressing table all the time and regard it as your surest aid to hand beauty.

The cream is extremely simple to use. You take a little pinch of it and rub it over your nail and around the edges. In a few seconds most of the cream is absorbed. You then take a tissue and remove any leftover. Even if you use it just once a day you'll see results, although it's better to use it at least twice a day for the first week.

This cream is one proof that all good things aren't budget breakers, for it costs only 50 cents and lasts for ages.

An Ash Ivory Set.

Why is it so few homes have a sufficient number of ash trays? Why is it so few hostesses provide their guests with enough of these small conveniences? Certainly not because they're prohibitive in price. One store is featuring an ash tray package which includes four little trays, shell shaped, with a mother-of-pearl luster. The four together cost only 25 cents!

Perfumed Powder Hair Remover.

No sooner does the warm weather herald the swimming season than hundreds of women began shopping for some safe and easy-to-use depilatory to free their arms and legs from a hairy growth. Of course, there are numbers of women who either from negligence or lack of knowledge use a razor for this purpose. That's a quick way to be sure, but the hair returns in a short time and it's thicker and stiffer than ever.

Those who want an ideal depilatory, one that will not cause the hair to grow thicker, one that is easy and pleasant to use, will find a certain perfumed powder hair remover exactly what they need.

You simply mix a little water with it, make a fine paste and spread this over the hairy areas. As soon as it dries—this takes only a couple of minutes—you remove with a damp cloth and the hairs have disappeared.

Its dainty scent suits it perfectly to the needs of the discriminating woman. It's safe and sure, and backed by a fine old cosmetic house.

Handkerchief Display.

Made especially to match the new tweeds are the attractive handkerchiefs given a gala display in a downtown store. They were designed by a young French woman, Elaine Hournet, who felt that nothing complemented a spring ensemble quite as surely as a matched handkerchief.

To appreciate their charm of color and design, you must see them, but until you do, suffice it to say, they come in soft shades of tan, blue, green, highlighted with yellow, red and other vivid hues.

The young woman did not create her designs and color combinations at random. First of all she got patterns of all the newest tweeds, and with these at hand worked out the most suitable handkerchief designs. They're reasonably priced, and unusually attractive.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 305, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Character Reading Easy For Woman Tax Collector

Underwood & Underwood.

The way you pay your income tax is an index to your character, says Mrs. Edna Bushman, known as "Little Dynamite" in San Jose, Calif., where she is deputy internal revenue collector.

CAN YOU PAY your income tax with a grin? Yes? Then you possess several enviable traits of character including personal initative and a sense of humor. If you come into the clerk's office frowning but leave smiling, there's yet hope for you. But, if after crying out your economic woes on the shoulder of the tax collector, you still depart tearful, look out! It may not be long before you're definitely parted with a share of your taxable wealth by some business slicker with more imagination than yourself.

At least that's the way Mrs. Edna Bushman ("Little Dynamite" to her California friends), of San Jose, sees it. Mrs. Bushman, whose 101 pounds of energy are devoted to the job of deputy internal revenue collector, maintains she can tell more than the fortune teller about a person's past and future by the way he hands over his tax money. Incidentally this diminutive person was the first woman in the West to receive such an appointment under this Administration.

"Most folks," Mrs. Bushman said, "come in my office with a bad case of tax-day jitters. They somehow feel as though they're parting with their best friend by loosening their purse strings for Uncle Sam. They sulk, grumble and take it out on the collector."

"How to handle them?" Mrs. Bushman's dark eyes snapped and her small face broke into a grin.

Jollies Them Along.

"Well, I reckon I talk so fast myself, they forget part of their woes. I jolly them along, tell them they're lucky to have an income to pay taxes on. So many people haven't since the depression. I laugh at their tears and won't listen to their gossip. Usually they leave in an optimistic frame of mind.

"But it's the folks who arrive at this conclusion by themselves I admire most," she continued. "They're the ones who pay their taxes early and cheerfully. Without exception you'll find them to be public spirited, idealistic, imaginative, humorous and full of initiative."

A widow for many years, Mrs. Bushman reared and educated four sons, the eldest of whom is now 35 and was formerly her business partner. The two younger sons will be graduated from Stanford University in the next two years.

Politics Long Her Hobby.

"Having a family to provide for single-handedly is the best business training a woman can have," said Mrs. Bushman. "It sharpens the wits, develops ingenuity that would otherwise remain dormant, and makes one appreciate the other fellow's struggles. I believe, too, that children who go through adversity with a widowed mother are often less inclined to develop black sheep tendencies than those to whom things come more easily."

Mrs. Bushman, who says politics has been her hobby since, at the age of 15 she accompanied her lawyer-politician father to campaign rallies in Mississippi, is definitely philosophic on one point—that a married woman should not go out for a career, politically or otherwise, until her family is reared.

"If she does, she won't do complete justice to either," Mrs. Bushman asserted.

"There's a great difference between a mother who is forced through the death of her husband to be the breadwinner for her family, and the woman who seeks a glorified career for herself. The children of the former, realizing her battle for them, will do all in their power to keep the home intact, while those of the latter too often sense a feeling of neglect and injustice."

Prizes Await 3 In Strawberry Recipe Contest

THIS WEEK we suggest strawberries in any shape or form, a strawberry omelet for breakfast, a compote of fresh fruit and berries for luncheon or a new strawberry dessert for dinner. Whatever your favorite strawberry recipe, enter it in The Post's strawberry recipe contest this week. Three prizes, $3, $2, and $1, will be awarded the best recipes.

Send recipes to Dorothea Duncan, Home Economics editor of The Washington Post. Only one recipe from each contestant will be considered for a prize.

Type recipes if possible. If not, write them neatly in ink. Check carefully for omissions. The name and address of the sender should appear on each sheet. All recipes must be received on or before Thursday.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am to be married in June and a few problems have come up with which I thought perhaps you might help me.

It has always been my dream to be married in church with the usual veil, etc. I wanted to be married at 6 o'clock in the evening and am planning a simple wedding. I am explaining this so you will understand the following:

* * * *

Although it is obligatory, according to some books of etiquette, for the men in an evening wedding party to wear full-dress suits, would it be altogether improper to wear dinner jackets? The situation is that none of the men, including two ushers, best man and my father, possess full-dress suits, but do have tuxedos. And I would feel selfish in requiring them to go to additional expense just to meet my whim.

* * * *

I hope you can give me some advice in this matter. Also, when do men wear white gloves? I mean, with that suit? Yours truly,

G. E. V.

White Flannels or Linen.

DEAR G. E. V.: If the men in your June evening wedding party wish to conform to conventional sartorial standards prevalent hereabouts, they may choose between white flannels worn with dark coats and all-white linen suits. Either is locally accepted as correct summer evening wear for men, and would be considered much better taste for a 6 o'clock-in-the-evening June wedding than white tie ensemble.

* * * *

Weddings performed at high noon, at 4 in the afternoon and at 8 in the evenings are considered much more formal affairs than a 6 o'clock wedding, which, because of the hour chosen, falls into the classification of informal wedding. To be impeccably correct, men in the wedding party would wear formal morning clothes at the first two named hours and "tails" for an 8 o'clock wedding. Tuxedos are not correct wear for a wedding at any hour.

* * * *

Men wear white gloves with full evening dress for all such ceremonious evening occasions as weddings, after 8 o'clock operas, dinners and balls. The full dress ensembles include, of course, "tails," white single or double-breasted waistcoat, a plain stiff-bosom shirt, wing collar with wide opening and wide white bow-tie, white handkerchief and gloves, black dress, shoes, black silk hose and top-hat. An Afternoon Frock and Coat Available With Single Pattern

Pattern No. 740.

THE COTTON ensemble for warm weather wear is a practical fashion this season. This one pattern can be used to make a charming afternoon frock of printed lawn or dimity, and a complete ensemble, including the coat, of solid color linen.

The dainty dress has a loose halter collar which may be contrasting, and double box pleats which give the desired front fullness in the skirt. Kimono sleeves make the smart loose coat a simple sewing task for the amateur. This pattern is accurately cut for sizes 14 to 20, 32 to 38. Size 18 (36) requires 7⅛ yards of 35-inch material for the ensemble with contrasting collar, ⅞-yard of 35-inch fabric for the collar, or 3⅝ yards of 35-inch material for the dress only. A clear and easy-to-follow instruction chart is included in the pattern.

Old-Fashioned Cream Freezer Results Best

Quality and Texture Found Different in Ices and Sherbets.

By Dorothea Duncan.

DON'T EVER let the possession of a mechanical refrigerator influence you to give up your old-fashioned ice cream freezer. There is something about the quality and texture of ice cream or sherbet made in the old freezer that can't be equaled anywhere.

There are a few important rules to be followed when handling a crank freezer. The proportion of salt to ice will vary with each of the classifications of freezing mixtures. One part of salt to eight parts of ice, by measure, is a good proportion for home use, especially for ice cream. The ice should be crushed fine, to expose as much of the surface as possible to the action of the salt. Rock salt is best for use in freezing and should be mixed with the ice before it is put into the freezer.

An ice or sherbet should be frozen with four parts of ice to one of salt and a mousse or mixture that needs no beating should be packed in equal parts of ice and salt. If the texture of your product is coarse, you have used too much salt, the can was too full or the crank was turned too rapidly.

Be sure that both the freezing can and the mixture to be frozen are cold when the mixture is put into the can. Let the mixture stand in the can, which is surrounded by ice and salt for five minutes, before the crank is turned. Turn the crank slowly and steadily. This will insure a smooth fine-grained product. After the mixture is frozen to a mush, turn the crank more rapidly until the crank is hard to turn.

Draw off the water from the outside of the can and remove the dasher. Pack the mixture solidly with a spoon, cover with waxed paper and a solid cover or cork the hole in the top of the original lid. Repack the freezer, using four parts of ice to one of salt. Cover with a piece of carpet, newspapers or a sack.

Never fill the freezing can more than two-thirds full, as the mixture will expand during the freezing. The ice surrounding the can should come above the line of the mixture in the can.

Banana ice cream will be a family favorite. Here is the recipe:

Banana Ice Cream.

1 pint milk.
1 tablespoon flour
1 tablespoon water
¼ teaspoon salt
1 egg
½ cup sugar
1 pint thin cream
½ teaspoon lemon flavoring
2 bananas

Scald the milk, stirring constantly. Mix the flour and cold water to a smooth paste and add to it slowly the scalded milk, continuing the stirring. When thickened, cook over hot water for about 15 minutes. Add sugar, salt and beaten egg and cook for two minutes. Strain the custard through a fine sieve and, when cold, add the cream, lemon flavoring and the bananas, which have been skinned, scraped and put through a sieve. Freeze.

Following is the suggested dinner menu for today.

Dinner Menu.

Clear celery soup with shredded carrots
Fresh vegetable platter
(new beets, baked stuffed potatoes, fresh asparagus with hollandaise)
Orange and watercress salad with French dressing
Whole wheat bread and butter
Peach tapioca and cream
Coffee Milk (for children)

What Today Means

Taurus.

IF APRIL 30 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9 to 11 a. m., from 2 to 4 p. m. and from 8 to 10 p. m. The danger periods are from 7 to 9 a. m., from 11 a. m. until 1 p. m. and from 4 to 6 p. m.

It will be good judgment to be careful, if asked by an asquaintance to use your influence in advancing a matter he is interested in, how much pressure you bring to bear, so as not to place yourself under too heavy obligations. Married and engaged couples, as well as those willing to go a honeymooning, will best serve their individual interests if they practice unselfishness on this day.

If a woman and April 30 is your birthday, you possess a tremendous amount of undeveloped depth, probably due to your love to indulge in frivolous pastimes. You have the power to unfold a latent talent of great money making possibilities. Remember that while the bee flitters from flower to flower, it does not overlook the work it has to do, so it will pay you to emulate the bee. Cupid will in all liklihood favor you most graciously, and love filling your life probably will be responsible for a great deal of your happiness. A gift, specialty, or dress shop, tea room, lecture platform, or elocution class, may help to solve your financial problems.

If a man and April 30 is your natal day, restlessness, as well as an urge to travel, should not be permitted to interfere with your business interests. You probably are a great believer in running things by system. It might be well to bear in mind that complicated systems can sometimes prove costly, so it will be wise to avoid them. Salesmanship, law, medicine, journalism, acting and painting offer a man of your versatility the chance to win an enviable name for worthwhile accomplishment.

Two Dominating Dreams Of Nancy Turner Fulfilled

poet and author, of Ashland, Va., believes in dreams because two she has cherished since childhood have already been realized. Coming to Washington to read before the St. Monica League, Miss Turner stayed for a visit and gave a "radio interview" yesterday.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

MOST PERSONS consider themselves fortunate if only one of their life-long dreams come true. But Nancy Byrd Turner, widely known author and poet, has had but two dominating dreams since childhood, and both have already been realized.

Now visiting in Washington, Miss Turner yesterday revealed what those dreams were. "The first was to visit England," she said. "The other was to become a writer."

She told something of the trip to England as she waited for a "radio interview" on the "With-the-Poet's" program yesterday afternoon. The trip was a gift from a stranger who read one of Miss Turner's poems in which she expressed her longing to see the country from which her paternal ancestors came. "That trip was a landmark in my career," she said, "and had a good deal to do with bringing about the realization of my second dream—to be a writer."

Now, with five published books to her credit and scores of published stories and poems, Miss Turner has also had much experience in editorial work, having been successively on the staffs of the Youth's Companion, the Independent and the Atlantic Monthly. Later, also, she was connected with the Houghton Mifflin Co.

More recently she has devoted her entire time to lecturing and writing poetry and has finished two published collections of verse, "Riband on My Rein," and "Star in a Well"—both of which have received much favorable comment.

In appearance, Miss Turner is not at all the proverbial poet. Small, dainty and unassuming, she impresses you at once with her sincerity, even while she entertains you with her humorously appealing obesrvations on her childhood, her dreams and her work.

A direct descendant, on her mother's side of Powhatan and Pocahontas, she was the oldest of five children in the family of a country minister. At 8 she was writing poems ("the usual awful things youngsters of that age produce") and getting 10 cents for each finished product ("from my father, who took this method of encouraging me, but who eventually stopped when he discovered I was soon writing more for the money than from inspiration.")

From then on, her ascent of the literary ladder was more difficult. At first she had "an appallingly difficult time selling poems to the editors, both in sending them—since I had no money for postage—and in selling them, since the editors with one accord and an outrageous lack of judgment, sent them back as fast as I sent them out."

At last, however, she landed two poems with Smart Set, and eventually began selling to Scribner's the Atlantic, the Bookman and numerous other magazines. Since then, her greatest difficulty has not been in selling her poems, but in finding time to write them, even with markets waiting.

When she isn't lecturing or writing, she is generally reading. Her favorites among the modern poets are "Masefield, first; then Edna St. Vincent Millay; then Robinson, in his lyrics and sonnets."

Democrat Club To Hear Expert On Plebiscites

Miss Sarah Wambaugh to Address Women at Dinner Friday.

MISS SARAH WAMBAUGH, an authority on international plebiscites, will speak at the dinner of the Woman's National Democratic Clut Friday at the clubhouse, 1526 New Hampshire avenue northwest.

Miss Wambaugh has recently returned to this country after acting as technical adviser and deputy member of the Saar Plebiscite Commission. She was a member of the commission which counted the ballots at Saarbrucken and carried them in a special car to Geneva.

As a member of the "Aloisi Committee," she helped to draw up the voting regulations for the Saar plebiscite. The other two members on the committee were Judge Bindo Galli, president of the Court of Appeals of Genoa, and Judge Nypels, of the Supreme Court of the Netherlands.

Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, president of the club, will introduce the speaker.

While in Washington Miss Wambaugh will be the guest of Mrs. Anne Archbold.

Dr. Ballou to Speak Tonight.

DR. FRANK W. BALLOU, superintendent of schools of the District of Columbia, will speak at the educational evening of the State committee on Sons and Daughters of the U. S. A. tonight at the Willard Hotel on "Recognizing Individual Differences Among Young People."

The officers of the committee, with Mrs. Grimes, State regent of the D. C. D. A. R., and Miss Helen Harman, vice president general, will receive the guests from 8 to 8:30 o'clock. Following the reception a musical program arranged by Miss Lillian Chenoweth, chairman of the music committee, will be given.

Invitations have been issued to civic, educational and patriotic organizations.

Dr. Mosher Gives Address.

DR. WILLIAM E. MOSHER, director of the national electric rate survey of the Federal Power Commission, spoke on "Cheaper Electricity," before the members of the Woman's National Democratic Club at its forum luncheon yesterday.

Mrs. Harry B. Mitchell, wife of the president of the Civil Service Commission, introduced Dr. Mosher.

Seated at the speakers' table with Dr. and Mrs. Mosher were Mrs. Pat Harrison and her guests; Mrs. Harry B. Mitchell, Mrs. George N. Eckels and Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, president of the club.

The Society of Natives of the District of Columbia will hold its fifteenth annual banquet and dance at 7 o'clock tonight at Meridian Mansions, 2400 Sixteenth street northwest.

Henry Harding Burroughs, president of the society, will preside and act as toastmaster. Mrs. William Reed will give a program of music.

The Christ Child Society will hold its annual meeting at 8 o'clock tonight at the Raleigh Hotel. The guest of honor will be the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, D. D., Archbishop of Baltimore.

An exhibit of relief and settlement work of the society will be open from 7 o'clock.

Bootleg Ring For Wild Duck Exposed at Bay

Agents at Baltimore Tell of Annual Slaughter of 200,000 Birds.

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, April 29.—A story of the surreptitious slaughter of from 200,000 to 400,000 wild duck annually in the Chesapeake Bay area and of the operation of a well-organized "duck bootlegging" syndicate was unfolded here today by Federal investigators.

The alleged "ring" was described as on the verge of being smashed by agents of the United States Game Management Department and of the Department of Justice working with State officers of Maryland and Virginia.

Orin D. Steele, agent in charge of the Federal Game Management office in Cambridge, Md., said under-cover investigation had progressed all winter in strict secrecy.

Arrests Under Way.

"We are making our arrests now," he said. "The real effect of court work will not become known until the Federal grand jury convenes in Norfolk May 6. Some big names in the East will be presented, with evidence, for action."

Steele said his men and agents from other units have counted 31 duck traps in one small area, each capable of capturing 60 duck. Some traps had many ducks in them, the greatest number seen in any one of them being 43. These traps would capture about 93,000 ducks in a season, he said, all illegally.

The agents stated they have received three "swivel guns," which in reality are small cannon which will bring down as many as 300 ducks at a time. They fire a pound and a quarter of bird shot at a time. One such gun now in the Federal men's hands was made in England 152 years ago and was said to have killed 57,000 ducks in its time.

The Rev. H. M. Ralph, of Ewell, Smith's Island, Md., and the Rev. Harry N. Bailey, of Tangier Island, Va., were said to have issued appeals to island residents to assist the Federal men by donating equipment for study. Steele said there has been full cooperation, and no charges are contemplated against the islanders.

The agent asserted that the thousands of wild waterfowl illegally killed are "bootlegged" out of the State labeled as seafood or some other product. He has a confession from one man who admitted shipping 10,000 ducks in the season just passed, he said.

Poultry Raisers Plan For Protective Group

Poultry raisers of Montgomery County, Md., will meet in the office of the home demonstration agent in the Rockville courthouse Thursday to organize a protective association along the lines now in effect in several other communities.

Major objectives of the organization will be to recommend legislation requiring a license for anyone transporting, buying or selling poultry to be sold or used for food purposes, adopt a system of branding or tattooing pultry to prevent thievery and generally regulate the poultry industry.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Foreign exchange markets were quiet yesterday in the absence of further specific developments in the silver situation. In London the dollar was around ¼ of 1 per cent lower at $4.83⅛ to the pound sterling and in later dealings in New York sterling continued the trend at $4.83⅜, up ⅛ of a cent on the day.

In Paris the dollar was a trifle lower at 17 francs, or ⅛ of a cent in terms of the franc, and in Holland the franc currency held its own at 67.41½ cents. Other gold currencies were only slightly changed from Saturday's quotations and most of those outstanding likewise were quiet.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—A quiet, irregular trend prevailed on the stock exchange yesterday. Aircraft issues were the firmest section in anticipation of expansion orders. Oil shares, Argentine rails and home rails were cheerful, but profit taking caused other sections to decline, especially silver shares, which were affected by the weakness in that metal. The market closed irregular.

Paris—Trading was irregularly dull on the bourse yesterday as traders waited for a sign of activity from the foreign markets. Rentes, bank, chemical and metal issues were weaker, while electric and coal shares remained steady, with only slight fluctuations among the international group. The market closed irregular.

Berlin—Stagnancy marked proceedings on the boerse yesterday. The closing was unsettled.

Nice Initials Bill Creating Milk Board

Governor Also Signs Several Regulatory Banking Acts.

Conservation Commission Change Approved by Executive.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., April 29.—Bills abolishing the post of conservation commissioner and setting up a three-man commission instead; creation of a milk-control commission, and a companion measure providing for inspection of milk and cream, and several more banking laws that formed part of the administration program, were among 112 enactments by the recent General Assembly that received the approval of Gov. Harry W. Nice today. The Governor was attended in the bill-signing ceremony by President Lansdale G. Sasscer of the Senate and Speaker Emanuel Gorfine.

The majority of measures approved embrace legislation affecting the several counties, such as authorization for bond issues for municipal and rural improvements, appropriations for volunteer fire departments and modification of existing laws to ease the burden of taxpayers during the depression, and other similar legislation.

Judge Duer Selected.

Concerning the conservation commission the Governor had announced his selection of former Judge Robert F. Duer, of Princess Anne, to head the group, but gave no indication who the other two will be. Nor has he disclosed his probable selections for the milk-control board. This body does not take office until June.

Another bill of State-wide importance signed was that requiring all new motor vehicles to be equipped with shatter-proof glass.

The milk control bill provides that the Governor shall select the three commissioners from a list of 12 to be submitted by the agricultural department of University of Maryland.

Other important measures approved, are:

Relating to jurisdiction of State Industrial Accident Commission.

Relating to bank membership in the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Trust Measure Signed.

Relating to capital stock and surplus funds of trust companies, and establishment of branches.

Providing a fee for the examination of credit unions.

Authorizing and empowering banking institutions to issue, sell, of hypothecate capital notes, debenture bonds, or certificates of beneficial interest and preferred stock.

Limiting to 50 per cent of unimpaired capital and surplus the amount any bank or trust company may invest in banking buildings, office furniture, fixtures, etc.

Providing means for securing loans on chattels and crops, made of corporate agencies.

Abolishing the posts of tobacco graders.

Amending the laws pertaining to gunning for wild fowl on the Susquehanna Flats.

Liquor Repealer Signed.

Bills affecting the counties near Washington include these:

Repealing the liquor law of La Plata, Charles County; providing for street improvements at Riverdale; empowering the Governor to grant to United States certain land of the campus of University of Maryland; relating to tax levy for Cottage City fire department; authorizing $20,000 refunding bond issue for Charles County; relating to bond of treasurer of Leonardtown; exempting the Washington, Brandywine & Point Lookout Railroad from taxation; removing limitation of $4,300 on amount of tax to be paid for Silver Spring fire department; requiring that liens for crop advances in Charles County be recorded in court; changing taxation area of Chevy Chase district for support of fire department; allowing Charles County sheriffs 50 cents per day for jail board for each prisoner; creating a police justice for Calvert County.

Ruling Legalizes Road Bond Issue

Gas Tax Financing Is Backed by O'Conor.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, April 29.—A ruling that debt service for the State roads commission's $3,000,000 bond issue must come from and constitute a first claim on a designated portion of the 2-cent gasoline tax, has been forwarded to the commission by Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor.

W. A. Codd, auditor of the commission, said the ruling had the effect of legalizing the bond issue, about $1,236,000 worth of which has already been sold and will be delivered May 1.

Sons Named in Will.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 29.—The will of Mrs. Annie Cavanaugh, who died April 7, bequeathed real estate in Cumberland and Washington, D. C., to a son, Dr. Leo M. Cavanaugh, of Takoma Park, and to another son, Thomas Cavanaugh, and his wife. The remainder of the estate was left to a daughter, Rose H. Cavanaugh.

Officers, Horses, Armored Cars On Scene at Chancellorsville

Mrs. Swanson and Espinosa to See Reenactment of Famed Battle.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., April 29.—Mrs. Claude S. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, and Rudolpho Espinos, a vice president of the Republic of Nicaragua, today accepted invitations to attend the Battle of Chancellorsville celebration Thursday.

The Third Regiment, U. S. Cavalry, of Fort Myer, which will be seen in the role of Stuart's Cavalry and flank the V. M. I. cadets in their re-enactment of Jackson's march, will arrive in Fredericksburg tomorrow morning. The contingent of 240 officers and men with 200 horses, 12 motor trucks and armored cars, are in camp tonight near Quantico, having left Fort Myer early today. Upon arrival here they will go at once to Chancellorsville.

Tents Erected.

The fair grounds took on a military appearance as Marines from the Quantico base erected tents over a wide section to house the cadets.

Hotel owners said practically every room had been reserved for the next several days. Windows in business places throughout the city were decorated with Civil War guns and other relics. United States and Confederate flags floated side by side from windows of homes.

At Chancellorsville, scene of the celebration, a tented city has been erected in front of the remains of the Chancellorsville House. Here are housed more than 600 Marines from Quantico who are to participate.

Cadets from the "West Point of the South" will stage a dress parade for the benefit of the many visitors who will be in the city on Wednesday evening at 6:30 p. m. Immediately following the parade the United States Post Marine Band will entertain with a band concert.

As a final conclusion of the re-enactment of the battle, three squadrons of airplanes of the Fleet Marine Force, consisting of 36 planes, will fly over the scene of battle in a series of formations.

Practically every major power in the world with the exception of Japan and Russia will be represented at the celebration.

6 Amphibians Tested For China Delivery

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 29.—Six single-motor amphibian planes now under construction at the plant of the Kreider Reisner Aircraft Corporation here will be sent to China, if tests now being conducted at the Hagerstown airport are successful, E. M. Allison, operations manager of the China National Aviation Corporation, announced here today.

Allison is here watching the tests, which thus far have been satisfactory. The amphibians are being built for the Pan-American Corporation, of which the China corporation is a subsidiary.

Probers Urge Virginia Form Parole Bureau

Idea Held Necessary to Carry Out Changes in Judicial Procedure.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, April 29.—Formation of a Virginia Bureau, whose two principal functions would be to furnish courts with information concerning persons charged with crimes and to supervise prisoners released on parole, was recommended to the probation and parole sub-committee of the Governor's advisory council on legislative matters here today.

The idea of the bureau was advanced as necessary to carry out proposed change in judicial and parole procedure, as originally recommended to the 1934 General Assembly by a special commission and revived before the sub-committee by several members of that commission today. Generally speaking, the recommendations were:

1. That courts be given wider powers to place offenders, particularly youthful ones, on probation instead of sending them to jail or prison.

2. That prisoners be closely supervised when placed on parole, with probationary officers reporting about them to the State prisons board.

3. That indeterminate sentences be made the rule in courts.

4. That judges, rather than juries, be delegated with the power of fixing punishment after juries have decided questions of guilt.

5. That good-conduct allowances be eliminated as unnecessary under an indeterminate sentence law.

Leaders of the State judiciary, the bar and the Virginia penal system discussed these proposals for several hours before the sub-committee, which is headed by State Senator Hunter Miller and which also includes Judge Lemuel Smith, of Charlottesville; Dave Satterfield, jr., former Commonwealth's attorney of Richmond; Welfare Commissioner Arthur James and W. R. Shans, director of the Virginia Legislative Research Bureau.

Maj. Rice Youell, superintendent of the Virginia Penitentiary, cited figures from the prison board's report for the year ended June 30, 1934, to show that of 1,676 new prisoners committed a total of 1,194 were under 30.

"I estimate," he said, "that half of these young men committed crimes against property and that they could have been saved from contact with older criminals in the penitentiary by a system of probation."

Accident Victim Wins A Verdict of $2,500

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Marion, Va., April 29.—A Smyth County circuit court jury has awarded Billy Glover, of Chilhowie, a verdict of $2,500 against Lindsay Walker, also of Chilhowie, for injuries suffered by Glover in an automobile accident in 1933. Glover was injured when his automobile struck one of Walker's horses, which was loose on the State highway. The court took under consideration a motion to set aside the verdict.

Warrenton School Wins Honor.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., April 29.—The Warrenton High School has been rated first among high and preparatory schools in the State in the standing of its graduates who entered college last year. The information was made known through Joseph Roemer, secretary of the secondary commission of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Deputy Sheriff, Agent Accused At Liquor Trial

Witness Says Dead Officer Gave Permission to Run Distillery.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., April 29.—Accusations of double crossing were heaped upon a dead deputy sheriff and a former State prohibition officer today by a witness in the Franklin County liquor conspiracy case, who said he got so "peeved" that he wanted to have them indicted by Federal authorities.

The witness, C. R. Brogan, said he had approached both the late Deputy Sheriff Jeff Richards and former State Inspector Edgar Beckett, asking them to allow his son and his associates to make "some liquor."

"Richards said it would be all right," said the elderly Brogan.

"I told Beckett where the still was and that I would pay Richards," continued the witness. "Beckett said he didn't think Richards would charge me anything."

"The boy started making the liquor, and they got him when he started to haul it out," Brogan said.

In both his direct and cross-examination Brogan said that after he had talked of "telling the Federals" Richards came to him and paid him $245 for the automobile which had been confiscated, and "the liquor."

Brogan was the tenth witness of the day, which opened the second week of the trial in which 23 defendants are charged with conspiring to evade Internal Revenue Department taxes on liquor.

All ten of the witnesses testified that at one time or another they had made liquor in Franklin County.

Developments in the trial today prompted District Attorney Sterling Hutcheson to tell the court that he did "not mean to insinuate that Commonwealth's Attorney Carter Lee of Franklin County "pocketed any of the fines" paid by Franklin County moonshiners.

The statement was made in a skirmish resulting from the district attorney's efforts to get into the evidence statements showing the Commonwealth's attorney dealt directly with persons arrested on liquor charges, instead of bringing them before a court. Lee, a grandnephew of Robert E. Lee, was among those indicted.

Virginia Appeals Hunton Tax Case

Plea Based on Importance to State System.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 29.—Citing six reasons why the opinion should be reversed, the Commonwealth has applied to the State Supreme Court of Appeals for a rehearing of the Hunton estate tax case, in which the court recently ruled that income derived from public utility dividends can not be taxed.

Attorney General A. P. Staples, Assistant Attorney General W. W. Martin and Henry R. Miller of the legal department of the tax commission filed the petition, which contends the case should be remanded for taking of further testimony because of its importance to the tax system of the State.

Other chief points of the petition are that the constitution of 1902 recognized the distinction between a property tax and a tax on the income of the property, and subsequent legislation and court decisions have conformed to that principle.

East Shore Unit Argues Bridge Plan

Group of Commissioners Debates on Proposed Chesapeake Span.

Project Hit on Ground Farmers Will Spurn Baltimore Trade.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chestertown, Md., April 29.—The semi-annual meeting of the Association of County Commissioners of the Eastern Shore was thrown into an unexpected debate on the Chesapeake Bay Bridge question today when former State Senator J. H. C. Legg, of Queen Anne County, stated Eastern Shore farmers never will take their produce and live stock to Baltimore, bridge or no bridge, because New York, Wilmington and Philadelphia prices are better and Baltimore does not cater to Shore trade.

He declared "enough" persons are going to Baltimore now by way of the ferries and increased traffic away from the shore will hurt business in the shore towns. He pointed to lower shore cities as thriving centers of trade in comparison with towns in the Northern sections close to large cities.

Defends Plan.

Harrison W. Vickers, attorney to the Kent County board of commissioners and former State conservation commissioner, answered that the bridge will not cost the State anything; that the site from Kent County to Baltimore County has been definitely fixed, that the State of Maryland never will defray the cost of bridging the bay and that the Federal Government is ready to hand out money which, if not accepted by Maryland, will go to some other State.

Talbot County commissioners said they are not against the bridge plan, but are opposed to paying the Claiborne Ferry Co. for its property under terms of the bay bridge bill now awaiting signature by Gov. Harry W. Nice.

The meeting took no formal action on the question.

J. Burdette, messenger of Federalsburg, proposed all authentic cases of relief abuse be presented by various commissioners to the new State commission headed by Amos W. W. Woodcock, for investigation.

Holds Publicity is Guard.

Publicity of abuse, he said, will lessen the case load. In a discussion of tax delinquents it was revealed Cecil County has collected all but 8 per cent of taxes, while Queen Annes has 66 2-3 per cent uncollected. Kent County still has $43,000 to collect. Cecil County delegates placed the blame for non-collections on county treasurers.

Frank Lane, president of the Caroline Board of Commissioners, was named president of the Eastern Shore group, succeeding Walter E. Buck, of Cecil. John Baker, of Dorchester, was elected vice president. The president will appoint the secretary-treasurer.

The next meeting will be the third Monday in October, at Salisbury, with a special recreational meeting August 3, at Ocean City.

Panhandle Outing Scheduled May 18

Play Day Expected to Draw 1,000 to Camp Frame.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 29.—The annual May play day and nature outing for members of the 4-H clubs in the Eastern Panhandle of West Virginia, which is expected to draw an attendance of 1,000, has been set for Saturday, May 18, at Camp Frame, on Back Creek.

County agents for the three participating counties—Morgan, Jefferson and Berkeley—completed plans at a week-end meeting here.

Registration will be in charge of Neil Bolton, of Jefferson County. Oliver Johnson, club leader for Jefferson, will have charge of games, and Ernest Van Metre and Agnes Shirley, of Morgan County, will have charge of a pageant. A tree-planting ceremony will be held by trail leaders of the Berkeley County clubs, supervised by Esther Bruchlacher and W. N. McClung.

86 Girls Will Receive Diplomas at Bristol

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bristol, Va., April 29.—Eighty-six girls are included in the list of seniors who expect to receive diplomas at the fifty-first commencement of Virginia Intermont College, which will begin May 25 and close with the graduating exercises Monday, May 27.

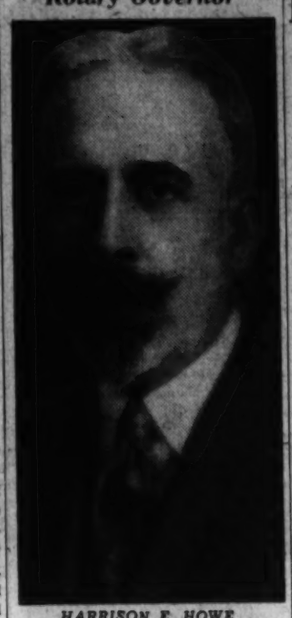
The Rev. James H. Franklin, D. D., president of the Crozer Theological Seminary, Philadelphia, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon Sunday, May 26. Representative John W. Flannagan, jr., from the Ninth Virginia District, will address the graduating class Monday, May 27, on the subject, "Woman's Relation to Government."

HOLC Payments Begun.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 29.—The Home Owners Loan Corporation branch at Cumberland has begun to accept payments on loans for this section. To date, Manager Oliver H. Bruce, jr., announced, $2,700,000 has been loaned in the office.

Rotary Governor



HARRISON E. HOWE.

Cure for Reds Told to Rotary By Studebaker

Education Chief Urges 10,000 Forums at Salisbury Rally.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Salisbury, Md., April 29.—Declaring democracy is at stake in America, the United States Commissioner of Education, John W. Studebaker, today proposed a system of 10,000 public forums under auspices of the public school system to "combat these destructive forces."

His proposal for "education of the adult masses" was unfolded in a luncheon address before 650 Rotarians from Maryland, Pennsylvania, District of Columbia and West Virginia attending the annual thirty-fourth District conference here.

The system would bring to the masses expert discussion of the shifting national scene and enable them "to take a square look at the propositions put by politicians and demagogues who call themselves statesmen," he said.

Government Help Specified.

"We have seen democracy beaten down in country after country. It is going down to defeat in this country unless we control these destructive forces through education. We have got to put the wealth and prestige of the Government behind it."

He estimated the cost to establish the forums at $70,000,000 under a 10-year formative period.

"In such forums there is not nearly the danger of propaganda as in the secondary schools, high schools and colleges," Studebaker said.

There will be much discussion in the near future whether we are going to have a dictatorship. Ursurpation of power and authority has here and there, bit by bit, brought about a gradual disintegration of the foundation of democracy.

Washington Man Honored.

Harrison E. Howe, Washington chemist and author, was unopposed for the nomination as district governor. The nomination will be formally made tomorrow.

District Gov. J. Milton Patterson, of Cumberland, announced the following, membership awards:

Curwensville, Pa., Ward Fleming, cup, for greatest increase in attendance.

Roaring Spring, Pa., Arthur Winter, trophy, for highest average attendance.

Frostburg, Md., Oliver Short, cup, for greatest increase in membership on a percentage basis.

Thirty-three of the 63 clubs showed membership increases and a net increase of 65 members throughout the district was reported by Patterson.

Frostburg Will Seek Water at Piney Run

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frostburg, Md., April 29.—A public mass meeting is to be arranged this week in Mount Savage to plan the obtaining of water for the town from Piney Run dam which is now under construction.

Roland Lammert, city clerk, stated today that the supplying of water to Mount Savage and Eckhart is to be a PWA project, and if the project is approved in Washington, work may start at once. He also stated that residents of Borden Shaft who applied for Piney Run water were notified by the State Health Department that a six-inch line would be required to convey a sufficient supply for domestic use and fire protection.

Plans Are Formulated For State Fire School

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., April 29.—Plans for a State fire school to be held in July and August at Morgantown have been made by the West Virginia Fire Chiefs Association.

The association which held a week-end meeting here in connection with the regional fire school which closed Saturday will meet in Morgantown July 30 while the State fire school is in session.

Rail Hearing At Baltimore Is Continued

W. B. & A.'s Request for Road's Scrapping Opposed.

Prettyman Cites Need of Continued Service to Lung Hospital.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, April 29.—After a full day of testimony taken in a crowded room, the State Public Service Commission continued until tomorrow hearings on the application of the Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis Electric Railway Co. for permission to abandon operations.

Today's hearing was conducted differently from the usual procedure in order to permit residents of communities along the railroad's right of way to testify and depart. Practically every station on the W. B. & A.'s line was represented by one or more persons.

Independent operation of the Annapolis Short Line by a bondholders' group was one of the suggestions advanced. John Sawyer Wilson and B. Howell Griswold, jr., asserting they represented 85 per cent of the holders of first mortgage bonds of the Short Line, submitted a petition containing the recommendation.

William Lee Rawles, counsel for the receiver, George Weems Williams, who also was present and took the stand, asked the commission for authority to abandon all services, requesting that this permission be given before June 2, when the railway is to be sold at public auction.

Losses Claimed.

Rawles asserted this permission was "merely justice" to the owners, who had permitted the $14,000,000 property to be operated at a loss for public convenience. It would permit them to at least realize the scrap value of the road, he said. If such authority is granted, he added that the railroad would be sold at its scrap value, less the costs of operating until the suspension date.

Harold E. West, chairman of the Public Service Commission, said that obviously the commission has no authority to compel owners of a railroad to continue operations at a loss, "but it thoroughly realizes the hardships that would be imposed on employes and users of the service in the event of abandonment."

While West did not state it openly, he intimated that the commission had a willing ear to lend to plans for continued operations under any possible working plan.

Representatives of the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia, of the Secretary of the Navy, the Secretary of War, the Naval Academy, many civic organizations and private individuals asked to be heard.

Capt. W. J. Hines represented the Secretary of the Navy, three Army colonels, George T. Perkins, A. Owen Seaman and John R. Brewer, represented the Secretary of War; Maj. C. Lloyd Middleton and Capt. J. S. Raymond attended for Fort George G. Meade.

Prettyman Cites Hospital.

One argument against abandonment was presented by E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel for the District of Columbia. Accompanied by two experts, who also testified, he asserted that the District of Columbia had constructed a tuberculosis sanitorium for children at Glenn Ridge, Md., and was preparing to add a wing for adults, and double the capacity of the juvenile wing. The total cost will amount to $2,500,000, he said.

"The site was chosen chiefly because rail service via the W. B. & A. was available," he asserted. "It would cause not us alone, but the patients and their families, much worry and expense if the service is abandoned. One important factor in the treatment of this disease is a mind free from worry. The loss of this service would cause worry to our patients because their parents could not visit them freely."

FERA Refuses Aid for Virginia Rural Schools

Early Close Expected as Hopkins Rejects Plea for $603,000.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 29.—Their last hope for a 9-month term dissipated by an unequivocal refusal by FERA Administrator Harry Hopkins to grant Virginia $603,000 in emergency funds, Virginia's rural schools today prepared to end classes early in May.

Hopkins' decision was made known in a letter to Gov. Peery in which the Federal official said FERA grants were made only to States not able to keep their schools open. He added that it was "not the intention of the Federal Government to provide funds on a basis of population for rural schools."

It was estimated here that half the rural schools would close this week and three-fourths would be closed by May 15.

In making application for FERA funds, State officials had pointed out that the General Assembly had raised the minimum term to eight months by levying $2,000,000 in new taxes, and contended this was all Virginia could be expected to do.

Last year $707,323 was granted from Washington to keep Virginia rural schools open for a "normal" term.

Farm Buildings Burn.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Taneytown, Md., April 29.—Fire of undetermined origin destroyed the barn, strawstack, wagon shed and several smaller buildings on the farm of the late Gassaway Ohler, 5 miles southwest of here Saturday night. Firemen from Taneytown saved two houses. It was the second barn fire in that section in two nights.

Help of Rain On Fires Hope In Maryland

Southeast Wind, Rising Humidity Watched as New Blazes Start.

Troops, CCC Men, Others Continue to Battle Forest Flames.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, April 29.—With 150 forest and field fires of serious proportions having raged in Maryland in the last three days, the State department of forestry today looked hopefully to a southeast wind and rising humidity for rain.

Ten fires have broken out in various sections of the State since last night. Walter J. Quick, who has charge of fire control for the department, said the more serious ones were near Earleigh Heights and Lake Shore, in Anne Arundel County, and near Elkridge.

Fire departments were working on the first two and Civilian Conservation Corps members on the latter. The Fort George G. Meade fire was reported to have flared up again and soldiers were fighting it.

The biggest fire of the three-day period burned in Cecil County in the vicinity of Principio Furnace. A fire fighter, driving his auto to another location, was trapped there. He escaped afoot and his car was destroyed. Walter H. Boulden, a tower man, remained in his structure while the blaze swept over a hill around it. He suffered from the smoke and heat.

Earlier today F. W. Besley, State forester, issued a public appeal for care in preventing fires. He said the forest floor and fields were dry and highly inflammable and asked that no cigarettes be thrown from moving automobiles. Camp fires and burning of trash should be attended with greatest caution, he stated.

Virginia Forest Fire Destroys Saw Mill

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., April 29.—Farmers in Western Frederick County today were battling to control a forest fire which during the night destroyed a saw mill owned by C. A. McIlwee and threatened the homes and buildings of several others.

Estimates today were that from 1,000 to 3,000 acres had been burned and there was no indication the fire would be brought under control shortly.

The house and barn of Hyatt Shanholtz were practically surrounded by the fire. The loss, consisting chiefly of fences, timber and some lumber, will amount to several thousand dollars, it was said.

Rush Holt to Address Braxton County Fete

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Sutton, W. Va., April 29.—Rush D. Holt, United States Senator-elect, will speak at the centennial celebration of Braxton County May 17 at Gassaway.

The celebration will be an all-day affair under auspices of the Gassaway High School, with all schools in the county invited to participate.

Tallulah Bankhead Sets Rumors at Rest by Opening Her Third Play in New York

Bankhead Play Eludes Capital As Stock Opens

Another PremiereSlips By; Party Season at Height; Amusement Jottings.

Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

An announcement that trickles over the wire from New York puts to rest persistent rumors that have wafted themselves about the National Capital to the effect that Tallulah Bankhead would be seen here in a new play during the month of April.

It was never quite clear to this column how Miss Bankhead, who has not been seen here since the premiere in the National of "Forsaking All Others," was going to manage it, but the reports have come with disturbing regularity to this desk, nevertheless, that she was to be seen here, even if the "little season" of the National Theater Players had to be interrupted to make way for her. All that now goes by the board, as the saying is.

Her Third of Season.

Miss Bankhead tonight will open her new play—and it will mark her third appearance on Broadway this season—in the Morosco Theater, under the solicitous auspices of the Messrs. Lee and J. J. Shubert. It bears the title of "Something Gay"—eminently suitable to the Bankhead talents and natural inclinations—and was written by Adelaide Heilbron. In the supporting cast will be Hugh Sinclair, Walter Pidgeon, Nancy Ryan, Percy Ames, Roy Gordon, Elizabeth Dewing and Kent Thurber.

The play has been staged by Thomas Mitchell and boasts settings by Donald Oenslager, who, I seem to recall, was responsible for the period settings of the current season's first bill at the National, an item that Marc Connelly put on under the title of "The Farmer Takes a Wife," with Max Gordon as sponsor.

Anyhow, like Dennis King's "Petticoat Fever," this is another one we don't get, which should be a great comfort to Equity and Mr. Westwood.

An erroneous statement inadvertently appeared in this space a day or so ago to the effect that all of the contributing agencies were dedicating their services to the Actors' Fund Benefit, celebrated in the National Theater last night, as a gratuitous gesture in compliment to one of the worthiest charities the country can boast.

While the National Theater Players, who launched their eleventh annual season on E street with a worthy premiere presentation in the Capital of "Accent on Youth," a play that still is a Broadway hit at the Plymouth Theater in New York, the stage hands, the artists appearing in the Earle and Loew's Fox stage shows, the National house staff and everybody else were glad to proffer their services without charge, it remained for the local Musicians' Union to hold out as the only branch of the theater demanding pay for its part in the bill.

Despite the fact that appeal was made to the union as early as last Wednesday on behalf of the Actors' Fund of America, Inc., and the further fact that venerable Daniel Frohman, dean of the American theater and president of the Fund, appeared personally before President Hayden of the Musicians' Union on Saturday to urge his cooperation in the theater's foremost charity, Mr. Hayden found it impossible to do anything about it with his board of directors because he had not received a written request on the letterhead of the Actors' Fund of America!

That, I submit, is drawing the issue pretty fine.

An orchestra appeared in the pit of the National last night and was accorded its pound of flesh, the only department of the enterprise that demanded pay for its appearance.

This is so sorry a commentary upon the co-operative impulses of an organization that could well afford to concede a little to an activity that is wholeheartedly supported by every other vital element in the theater that I cheerfully permit you to write your own ticket!

In Mrs. Hibbard's Honor.

That birthday party tossed in honor of Mrs. Adelaide Hibbard, revered character woman of the National Theater Players, in the ideally arranged rooms of the Clifford Brooke Academy of Stage Training in the Dramatic Arts, Connecticut avenue and K street, Saturday night, was a notable event.

Among the distinguished guests present to pay compliment to "Addie" Hibbard were Daniel Frohman, Frances Starr, Arthur "Bugs" Baer, famous humorist and former Washington sports cartoonist; the entire membership of the National Theater Players, the dramatic desks of the local press, Mr. and Mrs. Abner Drury, Mrs. Courtney Wade, Mrs. Hibbard's local hostess, and a large assemblage of other well-wishers.

The later hours of the evening—or the earlier hours of the dawning morning, however you like to put it—revealed unexpected talents on the part of a great number of people.

Hidden Talents.

For example, Roy Roberts, leading man of the players, turned out to be an extraordinarily clever tap dancer; Eddie Sherwood, over from Baltimore for the occasion, revived memories of the day when he was a protege of Percy Wenrich and Dolly Connelly by playing some hot tunes and singing some ditto lyrics; Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran's son and daughter, Joe and Cecilia, proved entertainers of no mean merit, the former by dallying with the piano as cleverly as he does with trap drums and Celia by singing a few didoes in the best "torch" manner; as if his tap dancing was not surprise enough, Roy Roberts also sat down at the piano and knocked off a few measures that were tantalizing and torrid.

And that's the way it went until the milk men began to wonder what it was all about. If they had asked me, I could have told them it was all about a lot of camaraderie, fun and impromptu clowning that springs naturally to the surface when congenial show folks get together.

When "Rain From Heaven," the provocative drama that occupied the National stage last week, closes in Pittsburgh Saturday night, there will be more migrations than were cited here last week-end. Lily Cahill, prominently cast in the role of Phoebe Eldridge in Jane Cowl's support in this S. N. Behrman play, will accompany Miss Cowl to London for the premiere of the latter's new play, "Hervey House," at His Majesty's Theater on May 15. They will sail on the S. S. George Washington, the first liner they could catch after the closing of the play, and will land in Plymouth on May 14. Miss Cahill informs me by phone that that will allow them just time enough for a hair wave and some gown pressing before the curtain in London next night. Bon voyage to two admirable actresses who also are interesting and charming persons.

"We Told You So."

The announcement over the week-end by General Manager John J. Payette of the Warner Brothers interests in the Washington territory, that two new theaters are to be added to the Warner circuit in the Capital during the summer, comes merely as corroboration of the statement made between these column rules in the issue of The Post of April 17.

The new theaters are the Uptown, at Connecticut avenue and Newark street, a project first launched by Harry M. Crandall, who founded the theater chain now owned by the Warners, and the Penn, opposite the present Avenue Grand Theater, on Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

If you were to revert to the April 17 issue of The Post you would find that we said something to the following effect: "I have it on good authority that practically all of the Washington chain theater enterprises are going in for refurbishment, rehabilitation, expansion and the like in a big way and that in outlying sections a few new projects are not only in contemplation but in a fair way to achieve early consummation . . . I am able to say that there is a strong likelihood that a sum in excess of $1,000,000 will be expended in Washington territory in a carefully planned campaign of property development."

Was I right, or was I right?

Yesterday afternoon betwixt the hours of 4:30 and 6 in the eventide, one of Division Manager Carter Barron's, of Loew's, Inc., tastefully appointed eatings and pourings was celebrated in suite 101 of Harry P. Somerville's Willard Hotel, in honor of Gertrude Niesen, headlining this week's stage bill at Loew's Fox Theater. Miss Niesen is still one of the stage's most exotic personalities and her manager-father is still one of theaterdom's most genial figures. And then there is that Boston terrier, Sookie, or Sukie, or however you spell it, that is quite an "act" all by himself—a perfect gentleman at all times and particularly fond of the ladies, as my charming contemporary, Miss Jennings will testify!

'Addie' Cuts a Piece of Birthday Cake

ADELAIDE HIBBARD
NATIONAL THEATRE PLAYERS.
YOUR FELLOW PLAYERS - THE NEWSPAPER BOYS AND GIRLS - AND YOUR WASHINGTON HOME TOWN NEIGHBORS WISH YOU MANY HAPPY RETURNS OF THE DAY

Mrs. Adelaide Hibbard, beloved character woman of the National Theater Players, whose "little season" at the National Theater opened last night, is pictured above in the agreeable act of "cutting herself a piece of cake," at the birthday party given her by Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran and the members of the company in the ample quarters of the Clifford Brooke Academy of Stage Training in the Dramatic Arts last Saturday night. Reading in the usual direction, the group includes Daniel Frohman, dean of the American theater; Karl Nielsen, director of the Players; Stephen E. Cochran, impresario; J. Arthur Young, character actor; Frances Starr and Raymond Bramley.

Players Offer An Ace Comedy As First Bill

Duplex Program Is Put on at National as Actors' Fund Benefit.

Last night's inaugural of the eleventh consecutive season of the National Theater Players was a completely felicitous occasion.

It was, of course, a special performance dedicated to the interests of the Actors' Fund of America, but primarily it was a demonstration that after ten years of conscientious effort Stephen E. Cochran, manager of the National and impresario of the National Theater Players, has maintained the enviable record of a decade by assembling one of the most proficient acting organizations known to the repertory theater in America.

"Accent on Youth," the current hit being presented in the Plymouth Theater in New York by Crosby Gaige, was accorded an interpretation by the new Players that must compare favorably with the original which Broadway still is enjoying.

While the leads are old friends, there are many new faces in the present spring ensemble. Nancy Sheridan returns to E street, after several seasons, with memories of her performance in the stellar role of Eugene O'Neill's "Strange Interlude" still one of the high lights of stock endeavor in the Nation's Capital. Opposite her appears Roy Roberts, one of the most competent and most capable leading men the Players ever have had.

Among the Newcomers.

Among the newcomers are several who comport themselves in a fashion that bids fair to make this the most successful season the National Theater Players have had for the past several years.

J. Arthur Young is a character man who betrays all of the finesse, the poise and the polish of an experienced, expert and enthusiastic actor. His performance last night in the role of an elderly leading man was splendidly balanced and altogether attractive. So was the spirited impersonation of a susceptible young woman of the theater offered by Ruth Lee, a vivacious blonde, who promises to place the "second woman" parts on a little higher plane of excellence than they have occupied for the last year or two.

These are the newcomers. In addition to Miss Sheridan and Mr. Roberts, whose talents are known to, and appreciated by, Washington's theatergoers, other old favorites return to the scene of many earlier triumphs in the persons of Adelaide Hibbard, the most genuinely beloved character woman the Players ever have been able to boast; Forrest Orr, who in his present assignment makes a considerable figure of a butler that might be deemed minor in less skillful hands, and Raymond Bramley, who shoulders a great deal of the burden of "Accent on Youth" as the playwright on the shady side of life who, after all, proves to be the choice of the brilliant young woman who has been his secretary, leading actress and principal problem.

Youth vs. Middle Age.

"Accent on Youth," it may be said, might quite as consistently be called "Accent on Middle Age," for the entire conflict which the comedy presents is one between young women and elderly men.

Mr. Bramley is the foremost of the "elderly men" and Roy Roberts is the youngster with whom the secretary-actress, Miss Sheridan, presumes herself to be in love. By an odd and encouraging chance, Mr. Bramley is the one who comes out on top in the end—or so one supposes from a slightly enigmatic tagline as the curtain descends.

The play is breezy and bright, with many amusing speeches written into the dialogue and not too much action to distract attention from the sprightliness of the lines.

It has been given a fine setting by Charles Squires—the three acts and four scenes all are set in the study of Steven Gaye's apartment in New York, Mr. Gaye being the playwright so well impersonated by Mr. Bramley—and Karl Nielsen has benefited the play by according it well-judged and skilful direction.

Altogether a letter-perfect opening enactment of a play that should intrigue the Capital's discriminating amusement seekers; a sophisticated eventing in the theater geared to present-day tempos and prophetic of other fine things to come.

The Added Attractions.

Following the conclusion of "Accent on Youth," one of the most pretentious vaudeville bills ever made a part of an Actors' Fund Benefit was presented.

To begin with, Mr. Nielsen introduced Daniel Frohman, who was to have been introduced by Frances Starr (Mrs. R. Golden Donaldson). Mr. Frohman made a few interesting and amusing remarks and thereupon Miss Starr appeared on the scene and said what she probably would have said in presenting Mr. Frohman to the audience had not a bit of back-stage confusion led to this quaint contretemps.

Thereupon, Johnny Perkins headlining at the Eaple this week, was made known to the audience and proceeded to put the show across with the well-known bang. Mr. Perkins is an adept at this sort of thing and sandwiched acts from both the Earle and Loew's Fox together in such a manner as to comprise a program that ran well past midnight.

Since all of the acts were reviewed upon the occasion of their first Washington performances in The Post of Saturday morning, it will only be necessary now to recite those who took part, to wit: the 32 Roxyettes, who are only 31, owing to an appendectomy on one of their number in Baltimore last week; Ruth Petty, songstress; Eleanor Whitney, one of the best tap dancers that has come along since Eleanor Powell; the Three Fonzells, Cookie Bowers, Gertrude Niesen, whose voice played her false and prevented her singing; Bryant, Rains and Young, dancers par excellence, and the Capitol Theater Girls, a ballet group of the first rank.

Altogether, ladies and gentlemen, a very noble evening in the playhouse.

Postlude

Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Washington Oratorio Society presented Mendelssohn's "Elijah" in Central High School auditorium; George F. Kortzenborn, conductor. Soloists: Florence Sindell, soprano; Elsie Sutter Radle, contralto; Louis L. Annis, tenor; Robert Frederick Freund, baritone; Richard Burr, boy soprano. Accompanists: Emma Louise Thompson, organ; Marjorie Davis, piano; Gertrude Dyre, piano.

Inasmuch as "Elijah" is one of the most dramatic of oratorios, there were disappointing moments in yesterday's performance, moments when the Mendelssohnian subtleties of musical realism failed to become perceptible. The absence of orchestral color was one reason for the general emotional monotone and another was the lack of dynamic finesse in the choral phrasings. In the invocations to Baal, the chorus arose to the occasion and sang with commendable dramatic effect, but most of the ensemble numbers were undistinguished by other qualities than methodical and conscientious singing of the text.

For the relief of both singers and audience, it would have been better if the performance had begun an hour earlier, allowing a rest between the first and second parts of the work. If one's sense of mass psychology can be trusted, there was not only a steady decline in the animation of the chorus, but also a relaxation of interest on the part of the auditors. There was too much strain upon that concentration which is the essence of both spirited performance and alert listening.

The Washington Oratorio Society is still young in experience and its ambition to sing such masterpieces as "Elijah" and "The Messiah" shows the confidence of youth. But it has not yet acquired the solidarity of a musical organism and the resultant unanimity of purpose necessary for singing with spiritual conviction. That devotional intensity is inseparable from an eloquent and moving performance of oratorio and it is attained only at the cost of long association and faithful apprenticeship to the art of choral singing.

The organization has shown steady improvement, however, since it first came under the writer's observation. It is gaining in surety of attack, in flexibility of phrasing and in tonal coloring. It needs an increase in numbers as well, as part of its present inadequacy can be traced to disproportions in the four choirs. Because of the progress it has already made, one regards its future with hope and with good will.

Mr. Freund carried through the taxing barytone solo part with praiseworthy steadiness of tone and consistent dignity. His reading of the air, "It Is Enough," had a quality satisfying both the musical and emotional demands.

By Morgan Baker.

EARLY hearings are promised by Representative John J. Cochran, of Missouri, chairman of the committee on expenditures in the executive departments, on the Fulmer bill providing for optional QSL for all Government employes now subject to QSL legislation.

BAKER.

The measure was introduced last week by Representative Hampton P. Fulmer, of South Carolina. Mr. Fulmer previously had introduced a similar bill as had Representative Glenn Griswold, of Indiana, applying only to Veterans Administration employes. These bills were referred to the committee on veterans affairs which has not met this session.

In addition to making QSL optional, it will have general applicability instead of restricted applicability, and will require that QSL shall be charged at cost.

Sponsors of the bill urge that Veterans Administration employes in all States from which the representatives on the committee have been elected aid in building up the most favorable possible situation in the committee on expenditures. Committee members are:

Allard H. Gasque, South Carolina; Riley J. Wilson, Louisiana; William M. Whittington, Mississippi; Glen Griswold, Indiana; Lindsay C. Warren, North Carolina; William R. Thom, Ohio; Randolph Carpenter, Kansas; J. Twing Brooks, Pennsylvania; Edwin M. Schaefer, Illinois; Francis E. Walter, Pennsylvania; Edward C. Eicher, Iowa; A. Willis Robertson, Virginia; Charles L. Gifford, Massachusetts; Robert E. Rich, Pennsylvania; John B. Hollister, Ohio, and Philip A. Goodwin, New York.

The bill is strongly indorsed by the American Federation of Government Employes.

Miss Edna C. Moreland (P), Personnel Division, Veterans Administration, will be in charge of the floor show at the Curley Club dance Wednesday night at the Kennedy-Warren. Proceeds will be used to complete the club's scholarship fund which will be presented to the Archbishop in May.

DYED-IN-THE-WOOL bowling fans of Bureau of Internal Revenue, under direction of E. H. Holkamp, organizing a summer mixed doubles bowling league. The schedule starts May 8, and runs 17 weeks. In addition to Holkamp, the following Internal Revenue employes have entered: Mrs. Jean F. Fox, Miss Vivian F. Nolan, Mrs. K. B. Kelly, Mrs. Eulah Bates, Mrs. Molly A. Wiseman, Miss May Sperber, Miss Anne Pepas, Mrs. Mary Pitts, Mrs. Alberta Baudu, Howard Dove, Tom D. Davidson and G. M. Van Hoesen (E). Three franchises are now open. Those interested in entering should call Holkamp.

IF (F), (P) or (C) follows your name in this column call on the Federal Diary editor today between 4:30 and 6 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's Theaters: (F) Loew's Fox (stage, Gertrude Niessen, 24 Capitol Theater Girls and other acts; screen, Franchot Tone and Una Markel in "One New York Night"); or (P), Loew's Palace (second week of Jean Harlow and William Powell in "Reckless"); or (C), Loew's Columbia (Edward Horton and Karen Morley in "Ten-Dollar Raise").

More than 50 tennis enthusiasts will meet tomorrow at 4:45 in room 0039, South Building, Agriculture, to map plans for obtaining adequate facilities, under direction of Thomas G. Shearman (P). The group hopes to arrange tournaments for both sexes through the summer and expects to organize a men's team to enter the interdepartmental league.

Applications for stock clerk examinations, which will be held in "three or four weeks," total nearly 70,000, according to Lawson A. Moyer, chief examiner, Civil Service Commission. The applications were filed throughout America.

Gayety

"THE BEAUTY REVUE." Independent Burlesque Association production in two acts and 24 scenes, with Frank X. Silk, Harry Evanson, Palmer Coty, Milton Bronson, Buddy Abbott, Hinda Wausau, "Honey" Bee Kellar, Betty Abbott, Vida Leslie, Chique Rione, June Morgan, Ruth Kaye and the Dancing Bryanettes. Book by Gus Flaig; dances routined by Frank Bryant. Staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Whitney.

There are certain events which every burlesque patron anticipates every season. One of them occurred yesterday when Hinda Wausau returned to town. In the whole realm of burlesque there is no one quite like La Wausau, and, yesterday, while her appearances were cut to the irreducible minimum, that one routine revealed Hinda in all her glory.

Only one person among the countless numbers who have paraded over the Gayety boards rates an in-person introduction by the maestro, the Chesterfieldian Col. James Joseph Lake, himself—and Hinda Wausau is that person. The glowing encomium of impresario Lake was more than fulfilled by the vivacious and alluring blonde. The only fault that could be found was that she appeared but once.

For the past two weeks, the good colonel has included among his list of attractions a ballerina of exceptional ability, and the procedure is continued this week. In the person of the unprogrammed June Morgan, he has an artiste who, were it not for the presence of Miss Wausau, would far outshine anything upon the bill. As it is, Miss Morgan, in her several acrobatic numbers, comes dangerously close to stealing the show.

Merely to mention platinum blondes "Honey" Bee Kellar, Chique Rione, and the brunette Vida Leslie, the other revelatory artistes, Betty Abbott, soubrette, and Ruth Kaye, soprano, is tantamount to unreserved commendation.

While Frank X. Silk tops the roster of comics it is not without plenty of active competition by Harry Evanson, a straight-face farceur of first rank. With Milton Bronson, Buddy Abbott and Palmer Coty acting the straight parts there is nothing to be desired in the way of fast comedy.

The present contingent of Dancing Bryanettes is quite proficient and has many pleasing routines.

Pierce Hall

The Women's International League presents the last of three children's entertainments, featuring Spencer Howell, magician, and a program of selected motion pictures. At Pierce Hall. Reviewed Saturday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

Feats of legerdemain were the main events in the third and last of the special children's entertainments given under the auspices of the Women's International League, sponsors of the local performances of the Children's Theater of New York, at Pierce Hall Saturday afternoon.

The prestidigitator was Spencer Howell, the George Washington University student who made his debut behind the footlights last year in Loew's Fox Theater's "All-Washington Revue." Following the general procedure of the great Cardini, Mr. Howell kept his audience continually baffled by his tricks with cards and handkerchiefs. And, of course, as all good magicians should, he produced a rabbit!

The supplementary program consisted of motion picture short subjects, including "Dumb Champs," of monkeys and baboons; the Terry-Toon, "My Lady's Garden;" "Spotted Wings," a study of metamorphosis in butterflies; "Scrappy's Dog Show," another cartoon, and "The Lost Race," a color subject about the cliff dwellers.

Eddie Fawcett furnished Mr. Howell's accompaniment at the piano.

Gomez Allows Only Four Hits as Yanks Stop Nats' Streak, 2-0

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

New York, April 29.

THE man himself is making no complaints, but Tom Yawkey is entitled at least to a mild squawk at the results. During the past two years for an expenditure of $375,000 in cash the multi-millionaire owner of the Red Sox has received as his share of the trading one wornout left-handed pitcher and one shortstop who used to be a great ball player.

POVICH.

I speak, of course, of Lefty Grove who cost Yawkey the sum of $125,000, and of Joe Cronin, whose price tag was double that amount, and if ever a purchaser was stuck Yawkey appears to be that man beyond the proverbial shadow of a doubt.

Grove would have been worth the money were his left arm in good health, but of Cronin, Clark Griffith said frankly when he sold his son-in-law to Yawkey for $250,000 last fall, no ball player is worth that much money.

It seems, however, that Yawkey's luck is consistently all bad. When Grove developed a sore arm for the first time in his career after joining the Red Sox in the spring of 1934, the Boston owner ridiculed the hint that Connie Mack knew of the injury at the time of the sale. Now there is doubt if Joe Cronin is sound.

IN Boston they are ascribing Cronin's frequent errors in the field to the failure of his broken wrist to heal. Despite the fact that Cronin fractured his wrist in a game in Washington several weeks before his purchase by Yawkey and was forced to spend the waning days of the season on the bench, Yawkey was willing to pay $250,000 for the Nats' manager in the belief that the injury had mended well.

A week before the season opened, Cronin aggravated his wrist injury in a game at Norfolk, Va., and was out of the Boston line-up for several days. With his play in the past few days representing the worst form he has ever shown, there is doubt that the wrist is entirely healed. Yawkey may have bought another lemon—a $250,000 lemon this time.

In striking contrast to Cronin's miserable play during the series with the Nats, Lyn Lary has been no less than sensational. The shortstop whom Yawkey threw into the Cronin deal like the thirteenth bun in a baker's dozen has far surpassed Cronin in defensive play and there is little doubt that he is the better of the two men in the field.

Lary was sure-handed on every stop to contrast to Cronin's miserable muffs, and he covered far more ground than the man for whom Yawkey paid a quarter million. In all three games of the series with the Nats, Boston fans had reason to regret the exchange. Cronin must outhit Lary by 60 points to offset the latter's defensive advantage.

YOUR heart went out to Cronin as you saw him make those inexcusable muffs in the series that drew down upon him the boos of the Boston populace. You remembered him as the greatest shortstop in the league a few years ago and you knew that his sore wrist was hampering his play.

But, despite the predominant Irish population in Boston, the way of Cronin looms difficult unless he produces a pennant winner. His purchase price has put him on the spot. Boston fans expect a $250,000 performance from a $250,000 ball player and they expect a pennant.

Yawkey sowed the pennant hopes among Boston fans with his startling purchases of such stars as Grove, Walberg, Bishop and Cronin. Once the fairest fans in the league, Boston people now are what the baseball writers call wolves when the game goes against them. Booing is a new form of expression with the coming of Cronin and Grove.

In the depths of the league since 1918, Boston fans for 15 years expected no pennant. They went to Fenway Park chiefly to see the visiting stars with the Red Sox' fate a foregone conclusion. But Yawkey has changed their attitude. He has implied that the club would win the pennant by his expensive purchases, and the Boston fans expect it—no less.

Verily, Cronin is on the spot.

No-Hitter! Schumacher's Pals Thought—Overruled by Scorer

By Edward J. Neil.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

NEW YORK, April 29.—The condolences were on Hal Schumacher today, and though everyone wished he could do something more about it, it was possible only to chalk up another stumble on the doorstep of baseball's no-hit hall of fame, and add "one more for the book."

The Giants' big right hander burned down the Phillies yesterday, 3 to 0. Everyone on the field thought he had pitched the no-hit game that is the goal of every hurler. The big crowd in the stands suffered with every pitch as the game wore on, and Schumacher, working with infinite care, finally got the twenty-ninth man who faced him for the final out in the ninth.

But up in the press box, perspiration was streaming and faces were long. Orville Jorgens, Philadelphia pitcher, had hit one questionable ball in the third. It scorched through the box, bounced off Schumacher's hand to Dick Bartell, at shortstop. Bartell, tearing in on the play, off balance, threw wide to Bill Terry at first base. Jorgens went all the way to second.

"Hit, and an error on the throw," ruled Dick Vidmer, of the Herald Tribune, the official scorer. That was all that stood between Schumacher and his no-hitter as Bartell, making up for his earlier failure, made a phenomenal play to throw out the final batter and came tearing in with the rest of the Giants to congratulate the pitcher.

Vidmer today had the unanimous support of his press box colleagues. There could be no official protest of the scorer's decision, even if there had been a serious disagreement.

"It's just Hal's tough luck," said Ford Frick, president of the National League and a former baseball writer and official scorer himself. "Once that decision is made, it's got to stand. It was a question of judgement, and though I didn't see the game, apparently it was the proper decision."

As far as anyone could remember, only once in the history of baseball was a decision as to a hit or an error changed on an official scorer, and that was the time Ban Johnson, then president of the American League, over-ruled a decision and gave Ty Cobb the hit that allowed him to beat out Larry Lajoie for the league batting title in 1910.

But ten years ago, in the Yankee Stadium, the veterans remembered one that was even tougher than Schumacher's miss. Howard Ehmke, pitching for the Boston Red Sox, came to town fresh from a one-hit victory over the Athletics.

He started against the Yanks, and Whitey Witt, first man up, belted a hot one down to third that Howard Shanks kicked around somewhat. It could have been called either way.

"A hit," said the official scorer.

Ehmke didn't allow a semblance of a safety the rest of the day.

Tigers Score 9 in 8th, Trounce Browns, 18-0

St. Louis, April 29 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers swamped the St. Louis Browns, 18 to 0, here today, scoring 9 runs in an eighth-inning onslaught featured by home runs by Goslin and Greenberg. It was the seventh consecutive loss for the Browns.

'Biff' on New Job; Sees Squad, Grins

By the Associated Press.

Norman, Okla., April 29.—Capt. Lawrence (Biff) Jones took his first look at the University of Oklahoma football squad in action today and didn't even try to hide a grin.

"How do they look? About as I expected," he said with a wide smile, but he wouldn't say what he had expected.

The big squad, numbering almost five teams and including nearly a score of lettermen, was bubbling over with energy and enthusiasm and was on the field 30 minutes before the scheduled time for the practice to begin—4 o'clock.

6,000 Watch Burke Bow In Duel

Combs' Single, Gehrig's Long Fly Bring Only Runs of Game.

Washington HurlerGives Eight Blows, Retires 10 of Last 11.

By Shirley L. Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, April 29.—The Nats' three-game winning streak expired peacefully at Yankee Stadium this afternoon from the effects of a powerful pitching potion administered by Lefty Gomez.

The Nats were conscious to the end—conscious of Gomez's mastery out there on the mound where the little Yankee left-hander served up only four hits and a 2-0 defeat to Washington.

Recently recovered from a severe cold which caused him to miss his last starting assignment, Gomez today put the chill on the Washington batting attack and avenged himself in part for previous indignities suffered at the hands of the Nats.

Washington is the only club in the league which can show a favorable balance against Gomez in his big league pitching career, but today the Clever Castilian reduced that margin to 10 victories and 11 defeats.

Burke Allows 8 Hits.

The chief victim of Gomez's performance today was the equally left-handed Bobby Burke, who didn't do so badly himself out there on the mound. Burke distinguished himself by going the route for the second time this season but single-run lapses in the fourth and fifth inning cost him the ball game. He allowed the Yanks eight hits and walked none.

Six thousand fans saw the Yankees accumulate their fifth straight victory, as later events proved, when the supposedly doddering old Earle Combs, who owes his place in the Yankee line-up to Ben Chapman's injury, bashed a single to the left field in the fourth inning.

Combs' hit, one of the three singles he collected against Burke, drove Bill Dickey home from second base with the run that meant the ball game. Dickey was on second by reason of a powerful double to right center.

The top of the Yankees' batting order gave Gomez another run to work with in the next inning. Rolfe singled with one out and went to third on Selkirk's single to center. Then Gehrig smacked a vicious fly to Jake Powell, who was playing far down town, and Rolfe scored from third. He could have made it on his hands and knees.

The Nats raised a pair of false hopes for the little delegation of Washington fans which always sees the Nats play in New York from seats above the Washington dugout. It was in the third inning that they threatened to give Bobby Burke a lead to work on.

Jake Powell commenced proceedings with a single to left and Lary whacked a long double to right center that pushed Powell to third, with none out. But the Yanks wiped Powell off the bases when Rolfe fielded Burke's soft grounder and put the ball on Powell as he attempted to regain third after a false start for the plate. Buddy Myer and Ossie Bluege were of no help at this time, expiring on flies to left field.

Wind Favors Yankees.

For one fleeting moment, in the sixth inning, the Nats appeared to have tied the score, but a capricious wind rescued the Yankees. With Buddy Myer on base after making the fourth and last Washington hit, Heinie Manush slammed a terrific line drive into the right-field bleachers as the bleacherites moaned, but it was foul by a foot—driven off its course by the wind that swept the field.

Burke retired 10 of the last 11 Yankees to face him, but to no avail. After the fourth inning the sum total of the Nats' efforts against Gomez was one hit—a single by Myer. Lyn Lary did draw a walk with none out in the eighth, but Bucky Harris disdained the use of a pinch-hitter for Bobby Burke, who, pitcher-like, struck out.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, April 29.—Bing Miller's pinch single with three men on base and two out in the eleventh inning gave the Boston Red Sox a 10-to-8 victory over the Athletics today.

The defeat was the fourth straight for the A's.

Cronin and Solters scored the deciding runs on Miller's hit, breaking the 8-to-8 tie of the eighth inning. The A's had the game well in hand by a score of 8 to 5 until the eighth. Then Moses, Athletics' right fielder, muffed Bill Werber's line drive and two runners scored. The third run was scored on Roy Johnson's double.

The Trueman Entry in a thrilling struggle to the wire in the Baltimore Handicap, yesterday's feature race. Wise Prince (on the rail) was judged the winner over Star Porter after the pair finished virtually as one in the 6-furlong race.

Wise Prince Wins Flashy Race For Feature at Pimlico Opener

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

PIMLICO RACE TRACK, Md., April 29.—Trainer Elmer Trueman, of Washington, stole the spotlight as Pimlico opened its gate for the annual spring meeting by supplying the first and second horses in the Baltimore Spring Handicap, opening-day feature.

Noses apart in a vicious drive for the wire, came F. Spatola's Wise Prince and Ral Parr's Star Porter. It was Star Porter's appearance that made the pair the favorite in the 6-furlong sprint and it was lucky for them that Wise Prince was coupled with the winner. The pay-off was at the rate of $5.10 for each $2 investment.

The Vanderbilt colors, which had won the opening stakes at both Bowie and Havre de Grace, could not even squeeze into the main money circle. Both Dreel and Dogmata came in behind Brannon, Mrs. Charles S. Bromley's gelding, which finished third.

Pimlico's first daily double proved a short-priced one. The combination of Piccolo in the first race and Accolade in the third paid only $22.90, but the pay-off topped a parlay on the pair. The twin betting drew $13,318 through ticket windows, a sum which was above Bowie's first day, but not up to the daily average of the Prince Georges track.

Sonny Workman and Star Porter made a game but futile attempt to take the purse from Wise Prince and Jockey Mose Peters. Star Porter broke rather tardily, while Wise Prince forced the fast pace set by Dogmata.

When the latter tired, Wise Prince went on to take the lead. The horses were running stride for Babe Didrikson Under Probe By U.S.G.A.

Amateur Status in Golf Is Investigated in View of Tourney Plan.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 29.—Although her case has not officially been brought to their attention, members of the amateur status committee of the United States Golf Association today began an investigation of the athletic career of Mildred (Babe) Didrikson, of Texas, who won her State championship last Saturday and is expected to be a contender for the national title next August at Minneapolis.

The famous Lone Star girl, who reaped a harvest for the United States in the 1932 Olympics at Los Angeles and then at the close of the year turned professional, has played baseball, basket ball and billiards for money within the last two and one-half years.

Made Tourney Debut.

Following the Olympics Miss Didrikson interested herself in golf and last week made her tournament debut, signalizing it by defeating the experienced Mrs. Dan Chandler in the final, 3 up, in 36 holes.

Her announced intention of entering the women's championship caused some eye-brow lifting on the part of A. M. Reid's amateur committee. While Reid and his associates have not as yet and will not officially take action in the "Babe's"

Ashland, April 29 (AP).—Randolph-Macon romped on the St. John's baseball team here today, collecting 14 hits for 10 runs to beat the invaders, 10-0.

Ray Doggett, on the mound for the Jackets, fanned eight visitors and coasted through for an easy victory. Clark Kelly led the locals' hitting attack, getting four hits out of five trips to the plate.

Free-for-All Marks Cub Triumph

4 Players Banished After Fist Fights Halt Chicago Game.

6 Homers, 10 Pitchers, 10-Run Rally Also Are Features.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 29.—Six home runs, two fist fights, banishment of four players, a 10-run Chicago rally in the eighth and a parade of ten pitchers marked riotous proceedings today as the Cubs and Pittsburgh Pirates, meeting for the first time this season, battled figuratively and literally through two hours and 41 minutes before the Cubs won a 12-to-11 decision.

In between a barrage of homers, including two by Gus Suhr and one by Arky Vaughan, of the Pirates, and one each by Fred Lindstrom, Phil Cavarretta and Capt. Woody English, of the Cubs, the players engaged in a fistic encounter that led to the banishment of Shortstop Bill Jurges and Pitcher Roy Joiner, of the Cubs and Second Baseman Harry Lavagetto and Pitcher Guy Bush of the Pirates. All except Bush were participants in the game at the time.

The trouble started in the fifth when Lavagetto, doubling to score Manager "Pie" Traynor and boost Pittsburgh's early lead to 6 to 2, got entangled with Jurges' spikes as the latter covered second. Lavagetto got to his feet with fists flying.

Bush, Joiner Tangle.

Umpires and players of both teams swarmed on the field, but before the situation was under control, Bush, who was traded to Pittsburgh by the Cubs last fall, engaged in a short verbal battle with Joiner and then rushed him, knocking the Cubs' hurler to the ground with several rights that brought blood to Joiner's nose and left a 6-inch scratch on his left jaw.

Bush finally was off the field and Joiner taken to the Cub clubhouse. But Manager Charlie Grimm decided to take a hand, challenging his former pitcher. Umpires and other players kept the pair apart, however, and Grimm was permitted to remain on the coaching line.

The Pirates, with Waite Hoyt pitching steady ball, apparently had the game well in hand until the eighth, holding a 9-to-3 advantage thanks to the home runs by Suhr and Vaughan. The only two runs that had been scored off Hoyt were homers in the fourth by Lindstrom and Cavaretta.

Cubs Stage Big Rally.

The Cubs then put on their 14-batter, ten-run, 7-hit rally in the eighth, getting to Hoyt and his successors, Johnny Salveson and Bill Swift, with equal vengeance. During the course of the rally English hit his home run and Salveson walked three men, which led to his being charged with the defeat.

They just managed to protect the lead in the ninth, however, when Clay Bryant struck out Traynor with the tying run on second and stride at the sixteenth pole. Workman was on the outside with his whipping arm free, but Star Porter just wasn't horse enough to take the decision from the colt.

A sprinkle of rain came as the horses marched to the post, but the track remained fast and the race was won in the creditable time of 1:12.

Singing Heart, at a $45.80 mutuel, won the fifth race, coming from far back under a pounding by the veteran, Joe Renick. Vacillate was second and Bonsoir third in the field of 12. Singing Heart had to overcome interference to get racing room in the stretch.

Piccolo Is Victorious.

The inconsistency of 2-year-old racing cropped up in the opening event. Sandy Mack, far in the lead and apparently about to hop, skip and jump to an easy victory, suddenly shied at the eighth pole and all but threw Jockey Bobby Watson. The colt crossed the track and finished along the outside fence. In the meanwhile, Piccolo, a C. V. Whitney juvenile with Workman in the saddle, went to the front, followed by Sobriety and Sandy Mack, after being straightened out, had to be satisfied with third money. Piccolo paid a $5.90 mutuel.

Apprentice Jockey W. Tracey, who rode his first race in the day's steeplechase, should go back home and rest on his laurels. It is a compliment to him to say that he rode the winner, Senado. The fact is that the horse, owned by J. P. Jones, carried the boy. Tracey had Senato first, then fifth, then second and then first again and gave his backers the jitters when the horse had to hunt for the finish line. Regan McKinney, piloting the favored Caniento, just missed taking the race as Tracey was busy keeping himself in the saddle. Cireno was a distant third.

Senado Pays $8.10.

Young Tracey imitated the man on the flying trapeze at the fifth jump. He bounced out of the saddle when Senado landed and hung over the side by one stirrup and one hand, but he managed to wiggle aboard again as Senado kept up his steady gait. The winner paid $8.10. Two falls marked the race at the last jump. Way Well and Stirt stumbling.

Accolade proved a galloping winner of the third race, a six furlong sprint. Pretty Wise was second, five lengths away, with R. Pinchot third and a like distance back. Ross, installed the favorite, raced in dull fashion. The winner, ridden by Apprentice F. Neik, paid $9.70.

Brains, trained by Guy Bedwell, won the fourth race with front running efforts. Sun Spear chased the ultimate winner all the way. Third money went to Tristrap. Running over the mile and 70 yards route, Brains paid $5.

The cerise and white of the Vanderbilt stable was borne to victory in the sixth race by Postage Due, a son of High Time. James City, the favorite, was knocked back, soon after the start and did not figure in the running. Zuni was second and Grand Girl third.

The final went to Bellator, with Apprentice Lindberg in the saddle. Fluffy Lee and Marmion were closest of the others.

Trouble Maker Buried Near Jump

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Worthington Valley, Md., April 29.—Mingled emotions of triumph and tragedy hovered about this historic fox-hunting country today following the smashing triumph of Mrs. W. Austin Wadsworth's Hotspur II in the classic Maryland Hunt Cup and the Spartanlike death of Mrs. T. H. Somerville's veteran campaigner, Trouble Maker, cut down in the unlucky thirteenth year of his colorful career.

While Hotspur II, his owner, Mrs. Wadsworth, and his jockey, Stuart Janney, were being toasted to the echo, Trouble Maker was being laid to rest a short distance from the seventeenth fence, where he fell, with honors not unlike those accorded the great general Sir John Moore, for whom they "carved not a line and laid not a stone, but left him alone with his story."

Lyons' Blue Hen Pigeon First in 100-Mile Race

The 1935 pigeon racing season opened with a 100-mile race of the Washington Pigeon Club from Charlottesville. Mr. Germane, the club's representative, liberated 448 birds from 28 lofts at Charlottesville at 8 a. m. Sunday. The first arrival, Sea Lass, a blue hen belonging to Robert Lyons, averaged 57 miles an hour.

The next race will be flown from Roanoke on May 5.

Order of arrival, showing speed in yards per minute:

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PICCOLO, $5.90, $3.40, $2.40; SOBRIETY, $4.50, $3.50; SANDY MACK, $3.70.

PICCOLO, away in the first flight and going forwardly, challenged the leaders stoutly when reaching the home stretch, took command inside the final furlong after SANDY MACK bolted and came away at the end. SOBRIETY went prominently under strong urging and held on well in the final drive. SANDY MACK opened up a winning lead soon after the start, saved ground until reaching the home stretch, then bolted to the outside fence. He was straightened out, but could not reach the leaders. PLUTON bettered her position on the outside, but could not make up any ground at the end. MORUN went evenly. SCUDDER could not engage the leaders. WEDGE LAD was held safe. SAKUNTALA was never dangerous. PER DIEM appeared decidedly sore and would not extend himself.

SECOND RACE—Two miles; steeplechase. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:02. Off at 3:03. Winner, J. P. Jones' b. g. (6), by High Cloud—Pelqua II. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $750; second, $125; third, $75; fourth, $50. Time, 3:50 4-5 (13 jumps).

†Mrs. P. M. Gould entry. ‡S. A. Warner Baltazzi-W. B. Street entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SENADO, $8.10, $4.70, $3.60; CANIENTO, $3.90, $3.40; CIRENO, $6.50.

SENADO, kept on the outside from the beginning, settled in his best stride after the first mile, challenged GOLD SWEEPER to take command at the tenth fence, was steadied thereafter, and barely lasted to stall off CANIENTO. The latter, well up from the start, came again after falling back going to the twelfth fence and was thereafter the winner down at every stride. CIRENO began tiring after a mile, but was easily best of the others. GOLD SWEEPER showed a good effort under poor handling. He had nice speed for most of the trip. SOME HERO had no mishaps. STIR moved up on almost even terms with the winner at the twelfth fence, but fell at the last jump. WAYWELL fell at the same fence.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $2,500 added. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:37. Off at 3:39½. Winner, F. S. Pitola's blk. c. (3), by Bright Knight—Celebration. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $2,200; second, $500; third, $300; fourth, $100. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47, 1:12.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WISE PRINCE, $5.10, $4.40, $3.00; STAR PORTER, $4.40, $3.00; BRANNON, $5.10.

WISE PRINCE, under light weights, had keen speed from the beginning, wore down DREEL when reaching the elbow, came again after being displaced, and was up in the concluding strides. STAR PORTER eased back off the leaders and rated along until reaching the home stretch, bore out after taking command midway of the stretch and weakened right at the end. BRANNON, forced wide from the beginning, finished full of run in the stretch drive. DOGMATA had no excuses. HAPPY GO had nice speed for five furlongs and then tired. DREEL stopped. NAUTCH was outrun.

SEVENTH RACE—Four and a half furlongs. Purse, $900. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:51. Off at 5:55½. Winner, A. G. Vanderbilt's ch. c. (2), by High Time—Postage. Trained by J. H. Stotler. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47, 0:53 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRAINS, $5.00, $2.70, $2.30; SUN SPEAR, $3.10, $2.80; TRISTRAP, $3.50.

BRAINS, hustled to the front immediately, responded strongly to shake off SUN SPEAR when reaching the home stretch, then drew out smartly nearing the finish. SUN SPEAR went close to the winner for the first eighth and was placed to vigorous punishment, but failed to rally. TRISTRAP went in the first flight from the beginning and outstayed LILLIAN Z. in the final drive. LILLIAN Z. went in her best form and had no excuses. TULEYRIES WAND weakened slowly after six furlongs. LAST ROMANCE lacked early speed, then could not better her position to engage the leaders in the final issue. INFILEE was held safe. The others were always outrun.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:30. Off at 4:30½. Winner, J. V. Stewart's ch. m. (5), by Strolling Player—Heart o' Gold. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 4-5, 1:13.

†Mrs. E. Trueman-Log Cabin entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SINGING HEART, $43.80, $28.10, $8.60; VACILLATE, $8.90; BONSOIR, $3.00.

SINGING HEART, hustled into a forward position after the start, swung to the outside when moving to the leaders, came willingly after reaching the home stretch and wore VACILLATE down during the final sixteenth. VACILLATE went on the inside of BONSOIR leading the back stretch, disliked the leaders and was up for a return to the winner. BONSOIR raced ALWINTOUR into submission, was placed to punishment, but could not rally under his weight. ALWINTOUR went in his best form and had no excuse. WATERSET went evenly. BRILLFALON lacked early speed and could not enter contention. BALLY BAY showed a dull effort.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $2,500 added. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:19. Off at 5:22½. Winner, F. S. Pitola's blk. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ACCOLADE, $9.70, $5.50, $4.10; PRETTY WISE, $6.60, $6.60; R. PINCHOT, $6.70.

ACCOLADE sprinted into a long lead after leaving the back stretch, saved ground thereafter and held away until the finish. PRETTY WISE, going stronger than usual in the early stages, responded to pressure and closed gamely. R. PINCHOT went prominently and outstayed JUSTA JONES when put to a hard drive in the closing stages. JUSTA JONES improved his position slowly, but appeared to hang during the stretch drive. ROSS lacked speed in the early stages and went wide in the last three-sixteenths. PURSUIT had nice speed for a half-mile and then tired. TWINTOO weakened steadily. MANYA was outrun. The others could not menace.

WEATHER, CLOUDY. TRACK, FAST.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:10. Off at 4:16. Winner, C. Compton's ch. c. Tech and Western, of Fist-Fight Fame, Vie on Diamond Today

Teams in Tie For '34-35 Honors

Foxley's Men Favored as Feud Is Resumed at 3:30 p. m.

By John R. Vosburgh.

THE Tech-Western athletic rivalry, which opened the 1934-35 school year with such lusty swinging of fists on the football field that the Board of Education was shocked into canceling the remaining games of the series, enters Round Three this afternoon, with the two schools pairing off in the opening tussle of the inter-high series.

With Tech having Round One by a 26-to-6 victory on the gridiron and Western having swept through Round Two by battling to two hectic basket ball triumphs, many of the aspects of a good, old-fashioned feud will be in the air when the teams open hostilities in Eastern High field, at 3:30 p. m.

Tech Is Favored.

Either school might well be the one destined to lift the huge Clark Griffith Trophy, now the property of Eastern, but on the basis of its four straight victories this season, Tech appears the party a little more likely to turn the trick. Tech's successive victories over Episcopal, Washington-Lee, Marblehead (Mass.) High and the Navy Plebes can hardly be discounted, especially in view of two of them having been shutouts.

Coach Ed Foxley of Tech, in a cheerful mood in sharp contrast to that which was his wont last season, sprang something of a surprise yesterday by coming out point-blank and naming his starting pitcher. This also is in sharp contrast to his 1934 custom.

Liggett to Pitch.

Bill Liggett, the lad who performed the unpatriotic feat of shutting out the United States Naval Academy Plebes, 1 to 0, on their own field, will twirl for the Techmen. The Plebes only got three hits off Liggett. It takes 3-hit games or their equivalent to beat the Plebes on their own field in any sport.

Coach Cliff Moore of Western was undecided whether he would use Dan Cleary or Ted Kinsman, his veteran pair of right-handers. The loss of Frank (Huck) Wynne, Western's .800 hitter and all-high catcher, has not served to spread little rays of sunshine around the Western camp.

Coach Moore said yesterday that "it takes a lot out of a team" to take away a player like Wynne, but in saying "we'll do the best we can," he expressed the somewhat grim spirit with which the team has been practicing. Bill Summerbell, strong-armed football back, will catch.

Babe Didrikson's Status Under Fire

case until such time as she files an entry for the championship, they have started gathering data on her activities in the professional field.

To Be Prepared.

"The fact that Miss Didrikson is a professional in some sport other than golf is not necessarily a controlling factor," said Reid. "We know very well we will have to take up the question of her eligibility in a couple of months so we've decided to be prepared when the case comes up.

"When that time arrives we want to see to it that the girl receives complete justice. The question to be decided will be if her professional activities in other sports have been to the detriment of the game of golf. Another matter which will receive consideration is her indorsement of articles in public advertisements."

Waits Until Summer.

"The U. S. G. A. doesn't want to be placed in the position of both accuser and judge," Reid said, and unless her entry in some local tournament is challenged or rejected and she appeals to the governing body for a decision, the amateur committee will maintain a "hands-off" attitude until next summer.

The U. S. G. A. set a precedent by barring Mary K. Browne from the national women's golf championship after she turned tennis professional in 1926 and joined Suzanne Lenglen in a tour promoted by C. C. Pyle. Miss Browne, three-times winner of the national tennis title, went to the final round of the national golf championship in 1924. She was re-instated as an amateur golfer in 1930 and has returned to national competition.

Allegany Tops Central For Second Time, 15-6

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 29.—Allegany High School's baseball team pounded out eight extra base blows in scoring its second triumph of the season over Coach Joe Haugen's Central High School nine at Athletic Park, Lonaconing, 15 to 6.

Corriganville Is Winner.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 29.—Shutout hurling by Franklin Wolfe and Clayton Van Meter and a 15-hit assault netted Manager Earl Diehl's Corriganville Hustlers a 7-0 victory over the Mount Savage Junior Order tossers at Mount Savage in the first game of the season for both clubs.

Louis Bout Sought Here Next Month

Would Be Held Between May 15 and 20.

The Philadelphia fistic firm of Taylor and Gunnis is attempting to sign Joe Louis, Negro heavyweight sensation, for a bout to be held here between May 15 and 20, The Post was advised yesterday by Pete Moran, matchmaker for the Philadelphia combine.

Moran advised that negotiations for the match had been opened by Earl McDonald, of Washington, and that final arrangements were expected to be closed next week.

Bowers Cards 36-32, Leads Qualifiers

Tops Burton and Welsh by Five Shots in Tourney at East Potomac.

TEEING off fresh and early in the morning, Harold Bowers, 24-year-old Anacostia champion, shot a blistering 68, two under par, yesterday to steal the show in the 18-hole qualifying round of the East Potomac spring golf tournament.

Pouring everything he had into his shots on the incoming nine or G course, Bowers blasted out a 32 for as perfect a nine-hole round as ever was registered in competitive golf in a municipal tournament hereabouts.

After taking a 36, one over, on the B side or first nine, Bowers played like a machine coming home, reaching every green in regulation figures or better and scoring birdies on the twelfth, fourteenth and seventeenth. The rest were pars, and he missed birdies by inches on at least three other holes.

Five Shots in Front.

Bowers' 68 is considered one of the finest medal rounds in East Potomac history. He dominated the field of 65 starters so completely that his nearest pursuers, Bobby Burton and Barney Welsh, were five shots back of him.

Even Claude Rippy, ranking 1934 municipal golfer, had to struggle for his 74.

Two 80's made the championship flight. They were scored by John Downey, veteran golfer, and Bob Leapley.

Two rounds of match play were scheduled today. Bower meets Harry Yates in his first match.

Gets Birdie in First.

The medalist got off to a great start when he sank an eight-footer for a birdie. He went over on the third and fourth and ran down a 30-footer for a birdie three on the sixth. Traps cost Bowers a five and a four on the next two and he parred the ninth.

Bowers missed a niblick approach for an eagle by inches on the twelfth, reached the edge of the fourteenth green in two to secure a bridie four, and laid his niblick 10 feet from the cup and sank his putt for a birdie three on the seventeenth.

His card and pairings:

Baltimoreans Beaver Dam Winners

Flattery and Mrs. Trace Shoot 82 to Capture Sweepstakes.

By Dave Herman.

A BALTIMORE combination, Johnny Flattery and Mrs. Mary Trace, of Rodgers Forge Golf Club, took home the bacon yesterday in the pro-women's sweepstakes sponsored by the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. at Beaver Dam.

Playing selective drives and alternate shots in one of the oldest forms of the ancient Scottish pastime, they posted a winning total of 42-40—82, ten strokes over par, to nose out the favored host team of Cliff Spencer and Ellen Kincaid, by one shot.

The battle for first prize was close, as one stroke to the fear of Spencer and his 16-year-old partner, youngest club champion in the Middle Atlantic section, came the strong duo of Leo Walper, driving range instructor, and his wife.

All three combinations were awarded prizes.

Houghton Shoots 73.

In the morning professional sweepstakes, Al Houghton, of Kenwood, bounded back into form, and hammered out a 36-37—73 that might easily have been a 70 had not the Maryland champion three-putted a couple of greens. The first prize winner failed to level par for the round by taking a five on the home hole.

Scoring 76's each, Bob Barnett, Chevy Chase pro, and Glenn Spencer, Maryland Country Club pro, tied for second prize. Spencer went out in 36, and took 40 coming home, while Barnett had to shoot a 36 on the back nine.

Terps Conquer Virginia in Track Duel

Win, 65½ to 60½, With Guckeyson's Three Firsts as Feature.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., April 29.—Maryland's track team won from Virginia here this afternoon, 65½ to 60½, due mainly to the splendid performances of Bill Guckeyson, four-sport star, who annexed first places in three field events, the javelin, discus and shot.

The Old Liners jumped into the lead early in the meet when Earl Widmyer annexed both dash events rather easily, and the Cavaliers were able to catch up.

Grover Everett, Virginia's ace timber topper, was first in both hurdle events, but was closely pressed in the high hurdles race by Seyefe, his former teammate at Central High.

The Terrapins made a clean sweep in the javelin, which Guckeyson won by a toss of more than 191 feet.

Wilkin Wins High Jump.

Wilkin, of Virginia, was first in the high jump with a leap of 5 feet 11¼ inches. In the pole vault Armstrong and Call, of Virginia, tied for first place at 11 feet 6 inches.

Summaries.

100-yard dash—Winner, Widmyer (Maryland); second, Dodson (Virginia); third, Ethredge (Virginia). Time, 10 seconds.

Mile run—Winner, Headley (Maryland); second, Banta (Virginia); third, Orcutt (Maryland). Time, 4:33.

C. U. Will Give Special Awards To Lynch and 11 Other Alumni

ED LYNCH, greatest of all Catholic University athletes and one of the most colorful gridmen in college ranks some 15 years ago, will lead a group of 12 alumni to be awarded special "C" certificates tomorrow night at the second annual Cardinal athletic banquet, to be held at the Mayflower Hotel.

Others in the group are John "Scotty" Glascott, '19, now head coach at West Catholic High School, Philadelphia; F. Joseph "Jiggs" Donohue, Frank Boyle, Jack McGann, Jim Garvin, Paul Croarkin, John Widmayer, Alfred Moore, Edward Gleason, William Commins and Andrew Bain.

Lynch, who performed at end and in the back field, starred at Catholic University from 1921 to '23, inclusive, and captained the '22 and '23 elevens. One season he was captain of every sport at the Brookland school.

He will be remembered, too, for his feats in professional ranks, and in 1926 drew a capacity crowd at the old Arcadia court when, as a member of the Detroit Pros, he visited Washington for a tilt with the Palace five. Together with a team of Washington collegians, Lynch stopped "Red" Grange in his tracks at Griffith Stadium the previous autumn.

Al Moore, who was Eddie La Fond's running mate at guard on the 1924-26 teams, also helped get boxing started at Catholic U. Moore was one of the hardest hitting ringmen who ever fought for the Cardinals.

Other features of the banquet, which promises to be the most colorful Catholic University alumni affair in a decade, include awarding trophies to the most valuable boxer and to the outstanding athlete, and posthumous awards to 13 C. U. men killed in the World War.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 29.—Virginia's nine won from Virginia Polytechnic Institute here this afternoon, 7 to 3, in a game cut short at the end of the seventh inning by a thunderstorm.

Saunders, starting pitcher for Tech, was driven from the mound in the fourth frame after successive hits by Cardwell, Abbitt and Fitzhugh, which brought Virginia's total runs to six. His successor, Harris, held the Cavaliers scoreless until the seventh, when Male doubled and registered on Rogers' drive which bounded over the third baseman's head.

Abbitt, on the mound for the Cavaliers, held the Gobblers to four scattered hits, one a double by Jones. Tech scored two runs in the first frame. Day drew a pass, stole second and went home on Mitchell's single to right field, which got away from Eggleston, the runner stopping at third. Mitchell counted later on a fielder's choice.

'Football Relay' Is Given Support

Would Be Attraction at 'Big Four' Meet.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., April 29.—A "football relay," run by the fastest of the State's football luminaries, proposed as an annual attraction of the "Big Four" track meet in Virginia, immediately received favorable reaction on the part of athletic authorities at Virginia, V. P. I., Washington and Lee and V. M. I., it was learned today.

Authorities at two of the schools thought the proposal came too late for this year's meet at Washington and Lee early in May, but all of them were favorable to its introduction in the meet next year, and alumni of Tech and V. M. I. in Roanoke quickly agreed to furnish a separate trophy to be placed in the competition.

Tech, Western Open Series Today

Two Inter-High Contests on 338-Event Program for This Week.

THE high and prep school spring sports schedule reaches elephantine proportions this week, with 38 contests packed into a six-week period, but 36 of them are of more or less secondary importance compared with the opening of the interhigh baseball season in which Tech meets Western today and Central tackles Roosevelt Friday.

Winner of four straight games, Tech will be something of a favorite over Western, weakened as the latter has been by the loss of its .600 hitter and all-high catcher, Huck Wynne, who has been dropped from the squad for playing outside ball. Central will reign favorite over the Ruff Riders.

Easily next in importance to the series battles will be the annual University of Maryland interscholastic track meet at College Park, where Tech will again be the people's choice to knock off another championship.

The week will mark the opening of the interhigh tennis series, which plays its matches on the same pattern in which the baseball series is planned. Hence, Western, runner-up last year, will play Tech today, and Central, the defending champion, opens against Roosevelt Friday.

In the interhigh golf series, Roosevelt, close runner-up to Western, the defending champ and series leader, ma[illegible] at Washington Golf and [illegible]y Club Saturday. The Private School League opens its fourth week, with Georgetown Prep again well in the lead and set to meet Devitt this afternoon and St. John's Thursday. Gonzaga will play St. John's Friday in another letague encounter.

The Private School Tennis League finds St. Alban's, the champion, prepared to tighten its hold on first place, playing Friends School tomorrow, and Georgetown Prep Thursday. Devitt meets Friends in the only other league match.

Richmond Trackmen Divide With W. & L.

Lexington, Va., April 29 (AP).—Washington and Lee and the University of Richmond divided a track meet here today, the Richmond Varsity winning, 79 to 47, and the Washington and Lee Freshmen, 64½ to 54½.

Rain slowed up the meet and sent the times of various events up.

Schuhl, of Washington and Lee, turned in one of the best times of the meet, running the 220-yard low hurdles in 24.6 seconds. Leverton, of Richmond, won the 120-yard high hurdles and broad jump. Dunaj, of Washington and Lee, won both the one and two-mile runs.

100-yard dash—Bristow (Richmond), first; Peterson (Richmond), second; Hiserman (W. & L.), third. Time, 0:10.5.

Hoyas Downed By Duke, 4-1; Run Poorly

Beautifully Dumb Gallops on Bases End Bid for Victory in 8th.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

SOME beautifully dumb baserunning—so tragically terrible it is doubtful if the old Brooklyn Dodgers in their heyday could have equalled it—yesterday enabled Georgetown's Daffiness Boys to lose a 4-1 struggle to Duke in the conventional nine innings.

Ed Hargaden, the usual victim, was on the mound when his liberal-minded teammates were seized with an attack of erratic fielding and throwing in the first inning that gave the Blue Devils their first three and what proved to be the winning runs. The boys were entirely too liberal to suit Ed.

Bid Is Nipped.

The Syracuse side-wheeler was still chukking when round eight arrived—the inning that saw Georgetown's bid for victory nipped in the bud by the old Brooklyn method of running bases. "Maggie" Maguire's coaching at third was a prime factor in the rally's sudden demise, but Maguire, after all, was only entering into the spirit of things.

Jerry Dolan, whose colorful, if a trifle erratic, work in left field always adds zest to the games, drew a pass after Hargaden had been retired, to start the Hoyas' half of the eighth. Don Bodine followed with a smart double down the left field foul line, and Dolan was off for third.

He made it by a safe margin, but Maguire with the professional style and grace of a fat traffic cop, waved him toward home. It was a simple matter for Taylor to relay Parker's throw to the plate, where Dolan was out by the narrow margin of some 4 yards.

Bodine Also Out.

Not satisfied with this turn of events, Bodine set out from second for third and managed to slide squarely into one regulation size baseball held by Joe Taylor. It was a neat double play and any team but the Daffiness Boys probably would not have been able to make it.

Charley Melone, who smacked a home run in the ninth for Georgetown's only score, dropped Parker's high fly in the first frame to give Duke one of its three runs. Taylor's single, an error by Bodine and another single by Wagner helped the Blue Devils' cause.

Boat Record Try By Wood Nearing

Final Assault Tomorrow Is Held Probable.

By the Associated Press.

Miami Beach, Fla., April 29.—Gar Wood, a "little disappointed" at the performance of Miss America X in the recent series of runs here, tonight planned a final assault this week on his own world motorboat speed record of 124.91 miles an hour.

Weather permitting, the 38-foot speedster will be dropped into Indian Creek early tomorrow and Wood will make a trial run over the measured nautical mile. His best official speed of the current series was 119.09, one way.

"Then," said Wood, "if all is satisfactory, we'll get the official timers here for a record run, probably Wednesday."

PWA Nine Trims G. P. O., 6 to 4

Ickes Tosses First Ball in League

Kappler Squad Scores Four Runs in First; Jewett Is Star.

MANAGER Raymond Kappler's pennant-aspiring team from the Public Works Administration, the new entry for The Post Association title in the Departmental League, seized the commanding position in the league's new-born competition by beating the champion Government Printing Office nine, 6 to 4, yesterday, in the season's opening attraction.

A few minutes after Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes had tossed out the first ball on the North Ellipse, a P. W. A. reception committee, composed in the main of Jake Farrell, Louis "Lefty" Jewett and Jack Britt, greeted Pitcher Bob Lyons with a succession of base hits which caused the veteran G. P. O. pitcher to stroke his grizzled chin with alarm.

Get Four-Run Lead.

This first-inning sally staked Kappler's comrades to four runs, but it was Jack Britt's run in the third which decided the issue. Britt started off the inning with a single, scurried to third on Sutton's bingle and came home on Vic Gauzza's hoist to the outfield.

The Printers did not hit Conrad Reid, P. W. A. starting pitcher, often, but when they did they busted the ball right on the nose. Johnny "Skippy" Gartland made an auspicious debut at the bat by driving one of Reid's fast ones into the second-base vicinity of the neighboring diamond. And again in the third Harding, G. P. O. first-baseman, took a healthy cut and connected for another circuit clout, scoring Lyons and George Mosedale ahead of him.

Jewett Relieves Reid.

Jewett, the chief hope of the Public Works nine in its titular ambitions, relieved Reid on the mound and silenced the Printers' attack to a whisper. This whisper was in the form of a bunt, which Bob Lyons beat out for a hit in the fifth.

The final three rounds Jewett was the whole show and disdained any support from his mates, when he could make the play, as in the fourth round, when he shunted away Third-baseman Farrell from under a towering fly on the foul line, so as to make the catch himself.

High Court Denies Dope Case Review

Conviction of Howard and Mitchell Stands.

By the Associated Press.

The Supreme Court refused yesterday to interfere with the conviction of Jack Howard, owner of a racing stable, and Charles P. Mitchell, his foreman, of unlawfully possessing heroin allegedly used to "dope" horses at the Arlington Heights, Ill., race track in July, 1933.

It declined to review the decisions of the Federal district court at Chicago and the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals in sentencing Howard to 10 days' imprisonment and fining him $300 and sentencing Mitchell to five days' imprisonment and fining him $100. Both were placed on probation for one year.

Government agents who had been watching the Howard stable at Hialeah Park, Florida, race track in February, 1933, raided the stable at the Illinois track without a search warrant, seizing a number of bottles and containers, along with a syringe used in "drenching" race horses.

Shrine Regatta Is First of Season

June 9 Event to Give Fans View of Sport Earlier Than Usual.

MOTORBOAT fanatics will be given a chance to vent their enthusiasm for the fast water sport earlier than usual this year as the Shrine Motor Boat Boat Regatta gets underway on the Potomac on June 9. Ordinarily, the District is treated to no outstanding motor boat competition before the President's Cup Regatta, usually held in September.

The Shrine Regatta would be impossible were it not for the interest being evinced by many of the 150,000 or more visitors who will attend the annual Shrine Convention here. Under the direction of the President's Cup Regatta Association and sanctioned by the American Power Boat Association and National Outboard Association, the Shrine Regatta promises to develop into one of the country's outstanding acquatic events of the year.

There will be open events for Class A, B, C and F outboards to be run in heats; the Inter-Temple 1935 Shrine Convention Championship, a handicap for outboards; Almas Temple Championship Cruiser Chance Race; 225 inboard, 135 inboard and inboard free-for-all competition on the program.

The regatta will be held on the Georgetown Channel of the Potomac River, official President's Cup Regatta course. All races will be run over a one and two-thirds mile course.

New Group Considering Spring Coaching School

Special Dispatch to The Post.

St. Charles, Va., April 29.—Members of the high school athletic association, which was recently organized in this section, are considering holding a coaching school this spring with some of the Nation's outstanding coaches as instructors.

If the school is organized, such well-known athletic directors as Bill Rupp, University of Kentucky basket ball coach, and Dick Harlow, head coach, will be sought as instructors. Among the several business matters now pending before the association is the recognition of a group of accredited officials to handle all athletic contests.

School Teams In Alexandria In Six Tilts

Five Baseball Games and One Tennis Match in Week's Schedule.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., April 29.—Alexandria scholastic teams are facing a busy week, with five baseball games and one tennis match scheduled. Alexandria High School's undefeated nine plays three games, while Episcopal High plays two baseball games and one tennis match. Episcopal also will be represented at the State Prep School track and field meet at Charlottesville on Saturday.

The Alexandria Twins will meet Nokesville tomorrow at Baggett's Stadium, Roosevelt at Roosevelt on Wednesday, and Fredericksburg at Baggett's on Friday.

Episcopal also plays tomorrow, engaging Randolph-Macon Academy in a State prep school titular game. On Saturday, Coach Powell takes his squad to Baltimore to meet Gilman.

Netmen Go to Annapolis.

The Episcopal tennis team travels to Annapolis on Saturday for a match with the Navy Plebes. The local netmen boast a string of 33 consecutive victories.

Track teams from both Alexandria High and Episcopal remain idle until the Virginia State championship meets at Charlottesville. The prep school meet is to be staged on Saturday, while the Alexandrians have four more training days than Episcopal as the high school meet does not take place until May 8.

Candidates for the American Legion Junior baseball team will report at Baggett's Field next Monday.

The St. Mary's Celtics will play host to the Richbrau A. C., of Richmond, Virginia champions, next Sunday at Baggett's Stadium.

The Richmond aggregation for the last few years has had one of the strongest semi-pro nines in the State. Last week-end Richbrau easily turned back the Alexandria Eagles in a double-header, 9-3 and 26-7.

Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Senators, has indicated he would be on hand to see the game. It is reported that Griffith is interested in the Celts' two ace twirlers, Jim Titcomb and Art Lacy.

Jack Watt, coach of the Fort Hunt CCC nine, has scheduled three games for his team in the next two weeks. On Saturday the Hunt nine meets Occoquon Grays at Woodbridge, May 5 the Woodmen of the World visit Fort Hunt and on May 12 the Mount Vernon Independents play at Fort Hunt.

Yesterday Watt's club bowed to the Fort Belvoir Company C team, 9-2. Rahy, ace of the Belvoir team, limited his rivals to four scattered hits, the first of which came in the seventh inning.

The Washington Post Carriers of District 43, defeated the Carriers of District 11, of Washington, 11-6, yesterday on Haydens Field. Jimmy Lyons, undefeated in three starts, whiffed nine batters in the last three innings.

District 42, of The Post, bowed to the Times-Herald Carriers, 6-5, in an 11-inning game. Bailey's single in the eleventh, scoring Robinson, provided the winning run.

Herbie Hash, former Fredericksburg High School star, who is a three-letter man at the University of Richmond, will be out of the track and baseball line-ups for the next several days as the result of injuries suffered during track practices.

The monthly meeting of the Middle Atlantic Greenskeepers Association at the Bell Haven Country Club, has been postponed until next Monday.

Club Near Frederick Opens Its Golf Season

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., April 29.—A large membership and a number of guests attended the opening of the golf season at the Catoctin Country Club, two miles west of Frederick, yesterday. Thirty-one players took part in tournaments and about 100 were present at a dinner in the evening.

The match play against par tournament was won by Clarence C. Carty with Carl W. Snook as runner-up.

Silver Shares Lead Stocks In Late Rally

Power Issues Display Better Tone; Volume Dips Below Million.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 29.—Stocks rallied in late trading today, after a ragged performance during most of the session.

A further reduction in the world price of silver by 1 cent to 75¾ cents an ounce unsettled early sentiment, but the silver shares, ignoring this development, led the late improvement. The Government stood pat on its price, established last Thursday, of 77.57 cents an ounce for domestically produced white metal, and the Treasury had no comment on the silver situation.

Rail stocks were laggards in the late lift in the market, but the general advance was helped by a better Wall street feeling toward the power and light issues, where the President's remarks on the utility regulation before Congress were seen as containing some crumbs of encouragement. It was noted the Chief Executive's "Fireside Chat" had not been all-inclusive in its condemnation of utility holding companies, but had suggested only the elimination of "unnecessary" units in this field.

The rather uncertain tone of the share market during most of the day was accompanied by the smallest full day's turnover in a week, at 886,350 shares. The Associated Press average for 60 stocks advanced 0.1 of a point to 39.9 at the close.

Wheat Closes Under Dollar

Cotton Off 3 to 9 Points at Close on Scattering Liquidation.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 29. — Jumps of nearly 3 cents a bushel in wheat prices at Minneapolis did much to make grain markets here average higher today. Indications were that Minneapolis mills needed wheat, and would require deliveries on May contracts. All Chicago wheat futures rose to above $1, but increased selling then developed here, much of it on the part of spread traders who simultaneously were buying at Minneapolis.

The result was an irregular close in the Chicago wheat market, ⅜ lower to 1⅛ higher, compared with Saturday's finish. May, 99½@99⅝. Corn closed unchanged to 1⅛ up, May 89⅛@89¼, oats ⅛-1¼ off, and provisions unchanged to 12 cents down.

Despite assertions that shipments of corn to Chicago from Georgian Bay were expected, talk prevailed that with an exceedingly small stock of corn available for delivery in Chicago, there seemed to be little chance of tenders of corn on a large scale early in May. Oats displayed independent weakness, owing largely to liquidation of May delivery contracts. Provisions averaged lower with hog values.

Cotton Market.

New York, April 29.—Cotton eased moderately today in quiet trading under scattering liquidation due to easier cables and a decline in foreign silver quotations. There were partial recoveries near the close, which was steady at net losses of 3 to 9 points.

Early declines were credited partly to Wall street and commission house selling and also to the cautious attitude of buyers following last week's advance to new highs for the movement.

Trade buying was less in evidence than in recent sessions, although a little support was credited to spot houses and the Far East. The steadier tone of wheat and stocks brought in local, commission house and New Orleans buying.

Open Subsidy Plus Rigid Government Control, Proposed as New Deal for American Shipping, Favored by Many Shipping Men as Assuring Future.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, April 29.—The shipping industry, while divided within itself on many features of the program, is favorable to most of the main outlines of the "New Deal" which the Administration is sponsoring for it. If the Copeland merchant marine bill and the water carrier bill are both enacted into law, then most coastal, intercoastal, internal waterway and foreign shipping under the American flag will be subjected to a dual regime of regulation and subsidy which is expected to assure its economic future in the face of very strenuous foreign competition.

The American shipping industry claims the right to a Government subsidy because it is an important auxiliary to the Navy in times of war. This subsidy is held necessary to assure an American merchant marine for three main reasons. First, because of our protective tariff and other factors, the cost of ship construction in this country averages considerably higher than abroad, so that a loan of funds at low cost or an outright grant is held necessary to equalize the original investment in vessels here with that of foreign competing boats. Secondly, and more important, high wages and costly working conditions imposed by the LaFollette seamen's act and other causes make the cost of actual operation of American flag vessels considerably higher than that of foreign ships. Thirdly, a number of other countries are now subsidizing their merchant fleets to an increasing extent, sometimes quite openly, as where the Government owns the stock of the chief steamship lines. American flag vessels, it is pointed out, can hardly compete with foreign lines if the latter obtain heavy financial grants from their governments.

Direct Subsidy Now Claimed Necessary.

The American merchant marine has been receiving Government aid for some time past through mail contracts. The compensation for carrying the mails has been fixed at a level that bore little or no relation to the actual cost of performing this service. The result was an annual payment to the shipping lines of some $27,000,000, which was in substantial measure a disguised subsidy. Also, loans have been made for the construction of new vessels at low interest cost.

The mail subsidy system, as congressional investigations revealed, did not bring happy results. It stimulated excessive competition on some routes, thus undermining the financial stability of the lines despite the payment of liberal subventions. The lack of control over the application of subsidy funds lead to individual cases of abuse that made a change highly desirable.

Under the new system that will be established when the merchant marine bill now pending is passed the carriage of the mails will be paid for on a poundage basis. An amendment to the bill introduced last week will provide compensation for the cancellation of existing mail contracts. A United States maritime authority is to be established, as an independent agency of the Government, to study the nation's shipping problems and determine the amount of subsidy needed by individual lines in order to equalize their costs with competing foreign lines. The principle of cost parity is to govern both construction and operating subsidies.

At the same time, authority is given to limit competition on routes where subsidies are granted. This, it is argued by shipping men, is the crux of the whole problem. If the subsidy should be used to foster uneconomic duplication of services, the result will be wasteful competition and eventual bankruptcy of the lines involved, regardless of generous government aid provided in the bill.

Modernization of Merchant Fleet Is Provided.

Provision is also made for the modernization of the American merchant marine, through new construction loans as well as outright subsidies to equalize costs in the building of modern vessels and the scrapping of obsolete tonnage. Rapid progress being made by other countries in replacing older vessels with those that benefit from recent marked technical advances in ship construction makes this an essential feature of the program. The development of American tramp shipping and superliners is also to be studied.

Coastal and intercoastal shipping, as well as vessels on inland waterways, are to be brought under Government regulation by the water carrier bill sponsored by Coordinator of Transportation Eastman. This bill would place operations, rates, accounting and finance of shipping lines engaged in interstate commerce, as well as wharfingers, under the same type of control as that exercised over railroads. A certificate of convenience and necessity would be required of all such carriers or wharfingers, to curb competition.

The shipping industry has suffered from excessive competition for a long time past. Efforts have been made to bring such rivalry within bounds through conference agreements, under which all the lines on a given route or routes seek to set uniform rates and other standards. However, lack of adequate enforcement has prevented the conference system from giving protection against excessive competition.

Steel Ingot Output Declines to 43.1%

New York, April 29 (AP).—The American Iron and Steel Institute today estimated steel ingot production for this week at the lowest level since early January. The institute placed operations for the week starting today at 43.1 per cent of capacity, compared with 44.6 per cent for the previous week, and 55.7 per cent for the corresponding week of last year.

The Markets For the Day At a Glance

What the Stock Market Did.

	Mon.	Sat.
Advances	263	119
Declines	233	365
Unchanged	176	154
Total issues	672	638

Stocks—Late trading rallied most divisions except the rails. Power and light issues were in good demand, while silver shares, ignoring world-wide metal price drops, climbed higher. Sales for the session were 886,350 shares.

Bonds—Wire issues weakness unnerved the market and trading was in a narrow range. Federals held well and some were higher. Sales were down to $7,993,000.

Curb—Shares absorbed further profit-taking to rally substantially higher during the closing hour. Transfers approximated 172,000 shares.

Grains—Minneapolis wheat-price boosts helped the Chicago mart quotations to climb higher. All futures rose above $1 to droop slightly on selling pressure. Closes were irregular, May wheat at 99½ and May corn at 89⅛.

Cotton—Eased moderately in quiet trading. Partial recoveries near the close brought last prices within 3 to 9 points of the previous close.

Sugar—Raw sugar was steady at 3.33 and refined closed 15 points higher at 5.25.

Coffee—Spot coffee was steady. Rio No. 7 sold last at 7, and Santos No. 4 closed the day at 8¼ to 8½.

Bar silver—Off 1 cent in New York to 75¾ cents per ounce. In London, last prices were off 1 1-16d. to 34 1-16d. (74.19 cents).

Bar gold—Off ½d. in London to close at 144s. 5½ ($34.92).

World's Solitary Cheese Futures Market to Open

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 29.—Trading in the "world's only cheese futures market" will start Wednesday. At 9:20 a. m. the opening bell at the mercantile exchange will start this unique market on its way. Brokers will gather beneath a blackboard panel to make sales in this important farm commodity for delivery early next winter.

Chicago is natural "spot" for a cheese futures market where producers and dealers may "hedge" or insure their operations. It stands as the chief distributing center at the gateway of the huge Wisconsin cheese producing area, called the largest in the world.

Exchange Nominees On Single Ballot

New York, April 29 (AP). — The governing committee of the New York Stock Exchange decided today that regular and independent nominees for places in the exchange management shall be listed on a single ballot. In their ruling the governors provided that the names of candidates be placed on the slate without distinguishing marks disclosing whether the nominees were selected by the nominating committee or by petition. The election will be held on May 13.

Washington Gas Income Off in March

Net Is $173,722 Against $235,079 for Same Month Last Year.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

The net operating income of the Washington Gas Light Co. during March dropped $61,297 below the same 1934 period, according to the monthly report filed with the Public Utilities Commission yesterday.

Net operating revenue in the month was set at $173,722, which boosted returns for the quarter to $1,947,138. Despite the March drop, the total operating revenues so far this year are $35,744 above the same figure for 1934.

Operating revenues during March showed a decrease of $53,594, dropping from $636,526 in 1934 to $582,932. Operating expenses, including taxes and uncollectible bills in the past month increased $7,703 to a total of $409,210.

Non-Operating Income.

Non-operating revenue for March increased $2,908, the figure being $10,397, compared with $7,489 a year ago. Gross corporate income was $184,119 for March, compared with $242,508 for March, 1934, a decrease of $58,389.

Interest deductions of $72,452 for March were $1,752 more than in March, 1934, resulting in a net income of $111,667, compared with $171,808 for March, 1934, a decrease of $60,141.

Operating expenses for the first three months of 1935, including taxes and uncollectible bills, increased $72,234 to a total of $1,276,418, leaving a net operating revenue for the first quarter of 1935 of $670,720, a decrease of $36,490 from the first quarter of 1934. Non-operating revenues decreased from $9,801 to $5,547, producing a gross corporate income of $676,267, as against $717,011, a decrease of $40,744 from 1934. Interest deductions, increasing from $211,546 in 1934, to $217,661 in 1935, resulted in a net income for the first quarter of 1935 of $458,606, as compared with $505,465, a decrease of $46,859.

Georgetown Net Higher.

The monthly report of the Georgetown Gaslight Co., also filed with the Public Utilities Commission yesterday, shows a net income of $3,667, as compared with $2,282 for March, 1934, an increase of $1,385.

Operating revenues in March, 1935, were $128,110, as against $146,949 a year ago, a decrease of $18,839. Operating expenses, including taxes and uncollectible bills, decreased $22,049, the figure being $119,139, against $141,188 for March, 1934.

Nonoperating revenue increased $3,210 over 1934, resulting in a gross corporate income of $11,972, compared with $7,488 for March, 1934, an increase of $4,484. Interest deductions increased $3,098, the 1935 figure being $8,305, against $5,206 for March 1934.

Quarter Income Decreases.

Figures for the three months ended March 31, indicate a decrease of $12,179 in operating revenues, reaching a total of $442,357. Operating expenses, however, totaling $414,594 in 1935, against $435,391 in 1934, offset the decrease in revenue with a decrease of $20,797, resulting in a $8,618 increase in net operating revenue.

Nonoperating revenue for the first quarter decreased $2,174 to a total of $3,003, resulting in a gross corporate income of $30,766 for 1935, against $24,322 in 1934. Interest deductions totaled $17,174, an increase of $1,570, resulting in a net income for the quarter of $13,592, compared with $8,718 in 1934.

Bullock Here for Meet.

Chandler Bullock, president of the State Mutual Life Insurance Co., of Worcester, Mass., is attending the United States Chamber of Commerce meeting here as a national councilor, representing his company and a number of other New England firms.

One of the outstanding men in the life insurance field today, Mr. Bullock has been serving in his present capacity since 1927. The State Mutual will celebrate the ninetieth anniversary of the issuance of its first policy June 2.

The company is represented locally by the Wilner & Wilner agency, who are serving as host to Mr. Bullock during his stay.

Penn Water Power Income.

Net income of the Pennsylvania Water & Power Co. for the first three months of this year amounted to $540,085.05 after all expenses, depreciation, taxes and other charges, equivalent after allowance for the preferred shares, to $1.24 a share on the company's common shares, according to report issued from Holtwood, Pennsylvania, yesterday.

This compares with net of $527,258 or $1.21 a share on the common reported for the initial quarter of last year, and with only $510,797 of net for the first quarter of 1933.

After dividends of $4,786.25 on the preferred shares, and allowance of $322,386 for common share dividends for the three months, the balance for surplus was $212,912.80, as compared with a balance of $200,086 for the similar period a year ago.

Silver Rise Should Continue For Several Years, Study Shows

Mandate to Treasury Is to Buy Until the Metal Equals a Fourth of Nation's Monetary Stock, Which Would Require 1,100,000,000 Ounces.

New York, April 29.—The Alexander Hamilton Institute, in appraising the silver price structure, states that the place of the United States Treasury deserves first consideration, for it is Treasury operations which brought into the market that strong demand needed to replace the diminished requirements of the Orient. The mandate to the Treasury is to buy silver until the quantity of that metal is equivalent to one-fourth of the country's monetary stock. As of the end of March the Treasury held $8,599,000,000 of gold and $1,450,000,000 of silver.

The total requirement of silver consequently was $2,866,000,000, which would leave a dollar value of $1,416,000,000 still to be acquired, a figure roughly equivalent to 1,100,000,000 ounces. The magnitude of this potential requirement may be seen by comparison with world production. For the five years 1930-1934 inclusive, the total output of silver from the world's mines was 949,000,000 ounces.

For the four years, 1931-1934, inclusive, total silver supplies, including mine production and products of demonetization, Government sales and the outflow of stocks from the Orient was 1,177,000,000 ounces. Apparently so long as the silver purchase program is adhered to, a supporting force of considerable strength promises to be in the market for some years to come.

Rupee Declines.

But buying from other sources has apparently been at work during the present price rise. A year ago the rupee was quoted at an average of 38¾ cents. During the fall it held in a range between 37 and 38 cents, and during January and February the average was 36.86 and 36.80 cents, respectively. Since the advance in silver gained headway the rupee has declined further. There is the suggestion here of an Indian demand into a market where supplies have been undergoing material contraction. One point of concentration of supplies is the Government Treasury. And, while last year China's sales of silver amounted to 200,000,000 ounces more than her imports and actually exceeded the world's mine production, the imposition of an export tax was finally adopted to check this movement. Bearing on the matter of Indian demand, it may be noted that an increase would not be abnormal. It would be, rather, a change from the exceedingly abnormal intake of recent years.

India's Imports Drop.

In 1925 India absorbed over 100,000,000 ounces of silver. In the following three years average imports amounted to 90,000,000 ounces and for 1929-1931 inclusive the intake was still 77,800,000 ounces. But for the three years after 1931 India's annual silver demand averaged only 12,300,000 ounces, less than one-sixth of the average imports of the preceding three years. Indian opinion has apparently been favorable to the price lifting program of the United States Government. On the other hand the rise in price is reflected in a material advance in Chinese exchange. Hongkong dollars which were quoted at 38.1556 cents a year ago and were 44.3362 cents as recently as February, have advanced to 54½ cents. The effect of a rising exchange on internal prices may be visualized by recollection of the trend of prices here in 1931-1932, when the dollar was at a substantial premium over sterling.

Sears Roebuck Sales up 32.5%

$83,950,330 Total for 3 Months is 25.7% Over 1934 Period.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 29.—Sears Roebuck & Co. today reported third period sales, from March 27 to April 23, totaled $31,435,278, an increase of 32.5 per cent over the corresponding period in 1934. With the exception of 1929, this is the largest third period sales in the company's history.

For the fiscal year to date, January 30 to April 23, sales aggregated $83,590,330, an increase of 25.7 per cent over the corresponding period last year.

The sales increase for the second period of this year compared with the same period of last year was 29.7 per cent. The record-breaking third period sales, established in 1929, totaled $31,951,000.

Auburn Automobile Co. and subsidiaries report a loss of $451,597.08 for the quarter ended February 28, 1935, compared with a loss of $857,394.69 for the same period in 1934. R. H. Faulkner, president, said that since last August shipments for the seven-month period ended April 1, 1935, were 4,898 units compared with 2,399 units for the same period the previous year.

Canada Dry Ginger Ale reports for the quater ended March 31, net income of $60,871, equivalent to 12 cents a share on the capital stock. This compares with $35,579 or 7 cents a share in the preceding quarter and $103,022 or 20 cents a share in the March quarter last year.

The Fish Rubber Corporation and subsidiary companies today reported for the quarter ended March 31. A net profit of $42,774.80, after provision for Federal income tax. Gross sales for the period, less returns and allowances amounted to $2,666,066.06.

Associated Output Up 2.6 Per Cent.

An increase of 2.6 per cent in net electric output was reported for the week ended April 20, by Associated Gas & Electric System, when compared with last year.

Wire Issues Confine Range Of BondTrades

Postal Telegraph 5s Dip 3½ Points More; Federals Firm.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 29.—Weakness in a few wire communications issues held the corporate bond market in a narrow range today. The great majority of price changes were small and fairly well divided between gains and losses. United States Governments were uniformly higher.

The continued offering of Postal Telegraph 5s in large amounts and with little regard for price, aroused considerable interest, but no satisfactory explanation could be had other than disappointment of holders over the turn in merger developments.

It was pointed out, however, that this issue had a substantial rise when the belief was widely held that a general consolidation of communications systems would be authorized by Federal legislation. Following substantial losses last week, the bonds dipped another 8 points to 30 in initial transactions today, but came back to 32 at the close, off 3½ on balance.

Three issues of International Telephone bonds lost 2 to 3 points in sympathy, but likewise finished up from the day's lows.

Among rails, industrials and low-yield bonds the trend was mixed.

The extremely small turnover in Governments of $890,000 was unusual for a full five-hour day. The dullness, however, was not at the expense of values, especially in the Treasury loans, which were from 2-32nds to 7-32nds higher.

Transfers aggregated $7,993,000, par value, compared with $12,175,000 last Friday.

The Game of Life

By Priscilla Wayne.

Newly crowned tennis champion of the Northwest, Ellen Mallory finds her triumph dulled by Michael Dale's refusal to let her pursue her career. Ellen pleads with Mike, assuring him that she wants only to enter the national tournament, and after that—whether she wins or not—she'll be content to play the role of housewife and give up tennis altogether. But Mike has waited three years for her, and insists that she forsake tennis immediately so they can be married. Ellen refuses, and Mike leaves angrily.

Ellen's mother is openly pleased when Ellen admits that she and Mike have quarreled, for Mrs. Mallory wants the girl to continue working and supporting the family and also to capitalize eventually on her tennis ability. Ellen stoutly defends Mike and waits in vain for a phone call from him.

Now go on with the story:

ELLEN called the garage where Michael worked. It had been quite a shock to staid Fairhaven to see Michael Dale, son of the city's best-beloved physician, start working in a garage like an ordinary mechanic. And Mike with a college education, too.

But then the rest of Fairhaven hadn't heard Mike explain it to Ellen. "I'll really be a salesman at first, but I'm going to work in the back and on the gas pumps and everything. I want to learn all there is to know about a garage and about selling and servicing cars. One of these days I'm going to have a car agency and own a big garage of my own."

"May I speak to Michael Dale?" Ellen asked.

"Mr. Dale is out of town."

"Out of town?" With all her will power, Ellen could not keep the dismay from her voice. "Out of town? Why—why, where did he go?"

"Why, didn't you know?" the girl on the phone asked. "He went to Detroit with Mr. Langhan. They're driving some new cars back."

"Oh." Ellen's little world was reeling about her.

Ellen held the receiver to her ear, waiting for whatever she had yet to say. Presently she came back.

"I've just talked to the shop foreman. He says Mr. Dale decided to go just this morning. He hadn't planned to go, but Mr. Langhan persuaded him."

Then, sensing the disappointment at the other end of the line, the girl at the garage took the liberty of adding, "There'll probably be a letter for you at your house tonight."

But there wasn't any letter. Ellen tried not to be too eager when she glanced over the little handful of mail. No letter in Mike's bold handwriting.

"Any calls for me, mother?" and even to herself Ellen's voice did not sound casual.

"Are you going to the choir practice? They want you."

Might as well, Ellen decided, thinking of the long, lonely, desolate evening that stretched ahead.

Aunt Ellen had arrived. Aunt Ellen was the spinster sister of Ellen's father and, after his death, she had come to help her sister-in-law take care of the fatherless little family.

"Cousin Beth wanted me to stay," Aunt Ellen explained, "but I told her it wouldn't be possible. I told her that just as soon as you got home there'd be a wedding to plan for and I wouldn't miss helping out with it for anything.

"Ellen, I'm going to make your dress. I've got it all planned out. I saw a wedding gown in a store window in Chicago. Oh, Ellen, it was the loveliest thing!"

"I told you, Ellen," Mrs. Mallory warned her sister-in-law, "not to discuss that with Ellen. I told you there might be——"

"Fiddlesticks!" Aunt Ellen retorted with decision. "You told me that Ellen had quarreled a little with Michael. But what of that? All young folks quarrel. They'll make up. They certainly wouldn't let a little thing like a silly quarrel interfere with all their wonderful plans."

"It's not a silly thing, Ellen," Rose Mallory's voice was stern. "They quarreled over Ellen's right to live her own life. Michael objects to her playing tennis. He wants her to give up everything she's worked for and just be a stay-at-home. Why, he even objects to her entering the national tennis tournament."

Aunt Ellen laughed. "Well, my land, that oughtn't to be any sacrifice—to give up any such fol de rols—to marry a man like Michael Dale. I'd like to know what more joy a girl could have than to marry a nice man, have a comfortable home and maybe a few babies—why, there isn't a tennis tournament or a job in the whole world that could possibly equal a life like that for a normal, red-blooded girl.

"And I tell you, Rose you ought to be glad and proud, and you, too, Ellen, that Michael Dale is the kind of man who'll be ready to support his own wife. A lot of them these days are only too willing to have their wives support them."

"He's all right," Rose admitted reluctantly. "And I wouldn't object to Ellen marrying him eventually. But look, she's only 22. In four or five years she'll be old enough."

"I heard that sort of talk—once," Aunt Ellen said slowly. "I listened. I hope Ellen doesn't listen. I hope she'll marry her sweetheart just as soon as she can. I've regretted all my life—that I listened to my folks. That I didn't listen to my own heart."

Ellen escaped to her room, presumably to dress for choir practice. She remembered that day—she was 19 when Mike had told her first that he loved her. He was just out of college and had got his first job in the garage.

"Twenty dollars a week drawing account and commission on the cars I sell. It isn't much, but it'll grow, honey. What say? Let's set the date."

But there had been things to delay them. Nineteen was young for a girl. Even Mike agreed to that. He had understood that Ellen had a natural right to want to do some college work, to want to be able to support herself and take care of whatever responsibilities she would have if anything ever happened to him. That showed a lot of good sense, Mike agreed, when she told him about it.

"I was only a little girl when Dad died," Ellen had said, "but I remember so well. Bob was just a baby and there wasn't anything mother was trained to do to support us. If father hadn't left a fairly comfortable life insurance we'd have been in a terrible plight. Even now, it's been all we could do to manage.

"No, Mike, when I get married I want to be sure that I have something to fall back on—if anything should happen to you."

Waiting then was reasonable. Waiting now when Mike was making good financially and Ellen had finished business college and had a way to support herself—well, that was something else.

Aunt Ellen was right. A man had the right to be impatient with a woman when he'd waited as long as Mike had.

But what to do about it? For now Mike was gone.

On the fourth day of Mike's absence Ellen called his mother.

"What's the matter with that big boy of yours that I don't hear from him?" she asked, pretending nonchalance.

His mother's voice—a cordial, motherly sort of person. "I've only had one telegram. He'll be back tonight. But haven't you heard? I was jealous. I thought he was sending all his messages to you and had forgotten me completely until this one came today."

"He hasn't sent me a line," Ellen confessed bitterly, "not a line."

"Not a word?" with incredulity. "But I saw him writing to you—a long letter just before he went away. He dashed home here to get some things after he decided to go. I asked him if you knew he was going, and he said no, that he'd tried to get you over the telephone but he guessed he'd have to write."

Ellen said something. She scarcely knew what. One thought was pounding into her brain as she put the telephone receiver back on its hook. Mike had tried to telephone. Mike had written.

But why hadn't she got the telephone message? And the letter?

She heard her mother coming and, heart pounding, he turned to face her.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

Two international programs highlight the day's airings, with Columbia's first broadcast from China, and NBC's presentation of the "Calendimaggio," festival in Assisi, Italy.

The Chinese show literally turns time backward, as it is heard at 10:35 p. m., WJSV, here, while it will be 12:30 tomorrow (May 1) in China. You'll hear official greeting and music from Kongkong—bits of English and Chinese and typical dance tunes.

The Italian festival harks back to medieval times, with songs of sixteenth and seventeenth century sung by various vocal groups. The celebration is held to usher in the month of May.

NBC's Light Opera Company presents its first show today. It will be "The Geisha," by Sidney Jones, on WMAL, at 1:30 p. m. Other operas in the series include two by Planquette, "The Chimes of Normandy, "Rip Van Winkle" and Audran's "The Mascot."

Another light opera is Victor Herbert's "The Princess Pat," on WRC, 9 p. m. John Barclay and Francia White sing leading roles.

Speeches:

John Hays Hammond is heard on the American Merchant Marine Library Association program at 2:30 p. m. WMAL. His topic: "What a Good Book Will Do."

Dr. H. P. Ramsey, "Public Health Meeting" and Dr. Harrison Somerville, "Langley Day," on WMAL, 8:30 p. m.

Dr. John W. Studebaker, commissioner of education, "Plan for a People's University." WMAL, 9:30 p. m.

Wyndham Lewis is heard on the international series, "Freedom," on WJSV; at 4 p. m.

Merle Thorpe reports the high lights of the Chamber of Congress meeting, on WJSV, 10:15 p. m.

Mrs. Ernest R. Grant is interviewed on "Driving Tuberculosis Out of the Schools," WRC, 5 p. m.

Remember the "more for your money" series mentioned in this column last week? They start today, with Thomas C. Blaisdell, jr., director of the Consumers Division of the National Emergency Council, and William Trufant Foster, of the Consumers Advisory Board, telling you about "Capsules for Consumers." If it weren't for Art Godfrey's show from the stage of the Fox, you'd hear this program on WJSV, at 9:45 p. m. So, if you're more interested in getting your money's worth than in listening to Godfrey, try WABC, New York.

Regulars:

Ben Bernie, with Morton Downey and Jackie Heller, on WRC, at 8 p. m. . . . Bing Crosby, WJSV, 8 p. m. . . . Hour of Charm Girls, WJSV, 8:30 p. m. . . . Walter O'Keefe, WJSV, 9 p. m. . . . Ed Wynn, WRC, 8:30 p. m. . . . Edgar Guest's "Welcome Valley," WMAL, 7:30 p. m. . . . Fibber McGee and Molly, WMAL, 9 p. m.

"Winnie-the-Pooch," beloved teddybear of the A. A. Milne books, comes back on the air at 5 p. m. today—but not locally. Once more he'll splash himself with mud so that, "disguised as a dark cloud," he can rob the bees of their honey. Christopher Robin, his understanding master, Piglet, Kanga and Baby Roo are with him at the microphone. Please try New York's station, WJZ, 760 kilocycles, for this program.

More Than 500 to Sing In Festival Here May 8

More than 500 singers will take part in the massed chorus festival to be held May 8 at the Central High School Auditorium, as part of this city's celebration of national music week.

Many of the Capital's outstanding choirs will take part in this event, under the baton of Dr. John Finley Williamson, music director of the Westminster Choir School, Princeton, N. J. The District of Columbia Federation of Music is sponsoring the festival.

Silver Spring Lions To Have 'Ladies Night'

Plans for a "Ladies Night" for the Silver Spring Lions Club May 7 will be made at a meeting of the board of directors Thursday night at 8 o'clock at the home of the secretary, E. Francis McDevitt, of Sligo Park Hills.

The entertainment committee, headed by Lowell Hendrick, will also meet at this time. The board consists of Arthur L. Blakeslee, president; Edward C. Holmead, Joseph Weber, Charles Griffith, Warner Pumphrey and Harry Trainor.

Culbertson on Bridge

Shoulder Arms.

To the student of sociology the most amazing feature of the new Contract Bridge Laws and Scoring is its unquestioned authority. On the 31st of March 25,000,000 people throughout the world shouldered arms, so to speak, and overnight changed their habits, obeying cheerfully and voluntarily the laws of an intricate intellectual pastime.

It is gratifying indeed to find all countries in blissful bridge harmony, even to the minutest detail, when in matters of war and disarmament various countries are at loggerheads, despite the vast army of trained diplomats, world courts and peace leagues.

Truly, bridge cements the friendliness of mankind.

North and South were lured on by a part-score on the deal below, and went all the way up to four diamonds on very indifferent holdings. South, by good play, managed to keep the set down to two tricks, or 300 points.

East, dealer.

Neither side vulnerable. Part-score, 30.

	♠ K Q ♡ Q 10 8 7 3 ◇ Q 8 7 2 ♣ 9 8
♠ 10 9 8 6 ♡ 5 4 ◇ A 10 3 ♣ Q J 7 6	N W E S	♠ A 7 2 ♡ K J 9 2 ◇ 6 ♣ A K 4 3 2
	♠ J 5 4 3 ♡ A 6 ◇ K J 9 5 4 ♣ 10 5

The bidding: (Figure after bid refers to numbered explanatory paragraph.)

East	South	West	North
1♣	1◇	2♣	2◇
3♣	Pass	Pass	3◇
3♡	Pass	4♣	Pass
Pass	4◇ (1)	Dbl.	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—Rather daring. South was the type of player who hated to give up easily.

The Play.

Hoping eventually to get a ruff in the suit, West opened the five of hearts—the second suit bid by his partner. Dummy played low and East's nine forced declarer's Ace. The Jack of diamonds was laid down and West captured the trick immediately with the Ace. Two clubs were cashed by West and his last heart led. East won with the Jack, making the setting trick.

In an effort to set the contract three tricks, East cashed his spade Ace and led a low heart. From the bidding South marked East with five clubs and four hearts, which left four cards in the remaining suits. If these cards were divided 2-2—that is, only two spades in the East hand—West would have had five spades originally and in all probability would have responded to one club with a spade bid before raising clubs. Therefore, South marked East with a 5-4-3-1 distribution rather than 5-4-2-2.

Consequently South ruffed the low heart with the diamond King and then led a low diamond, finessing the eight-spot in dummy, which held. The Queen was laid down, dropping West's ten, and the heart Queen led. East covered, but declarer ruffed and dummy was now good for the rest of the tricks.

Perhaps we have been too MODEST

. . . Passengers frequently ask us: "Why don't you make more fuss about The National Limited?"

Perhaps we have been too modest—especially since adjectives are so plentiful. True, The National Limited is an unusual train. No other train between Washington and Cincinnati and St. Louis has a Train Secretary, Maid-Manicure and Valet. No other train between these points offers the travel advantages of the fastest time over the shortest route. Only Baltimore & Ohio equips its trains with rubber-cushioned trucks for smooth, easy riding. Incidentally, The National Limited was the world's first completely air-conditioned sleeping car train. (Air-conditioned April 20, 1932.)

The National Limited carries the latest Pullman equipment: Sunroom-Observation and Club Lounge cars; Drawing-room, Compartment and Private Bedroom Sleepers. Reclining Seat Coach, with Buffet Meal Service, is another exclusive Baltimore & Ohio feature. Good meals, reasonably priced; hospitality that's human and old-fashioned and the "will to please" that puts your travel comfort first. All these you enjoy on The National Limited. No extra fare.
